GOP in danger, former leader says

GRAND JUNCTION, Iowa (UPI)— Former Republican National Chairwoman Mary Louise Smith said Monday the GOP is in a state of "disrepair" that has left the nation "dangerously close to one-party domination" by the Democrats.

"One of the ironies, or political tragedies, is that although every two years we suffer additional losses at the polls, we continue on the same course in the smug knowledge that no voter can resist the allure of the Republican party," Mrs. Smith said in remarks prepared for delivery to a Greene County Republican fundraiser.

"We continue to lose, but we do not take the initiative to change our ways. We are, despite the setbacks, apparently committed to the conviction that we are right and the people are with us . . . However, if the Republican party is doing the right things . . . then why do we lose?"

IN HER MOST alarming assessment of the GOP's plight since stepping down as its highest ranking official after last November's election, Mrs. Smith said there were "ominous signs" the party had not responded to political danger signs that could signal its eventual demise.

"Our party is engaged in a real struggle for survival. Let me tell you that we are dangerously close to one-party domination in this nation today. The Democrats control the White House, they control Congress by lop-sided margins, they hold a big majority of Northwest suburban Republican leaders are boldly optimistic about the party's future locally, statewide and even nationally.

"Schaumburg Township will continue to retain a 2-1 Republican majority, as will Wheeling and Elk Grove townships. I don't think we are going to see a great change in that," said State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg and Township Republican committeeman.

Republicans realistically could win 6 of the 10 to 12 "swing" seats in the Illinois House in the 1978 general election, and if the "coattails" theory has any validity, Republicans should fare well with Gov. James R. Thompson at the top of the ticket, he said.

ONE GREAT danger for the party is the move for open primaries in Illinois in which voters do not have to identify themselves as Republicans or Democrats, Totten said

"The biggest difficulty for the Republican party is coming from the press from the standpoint of destroying the importance of party label. The news media generally favors open primaries in which the media itself winds up as the biggest influence on the selection of candidates," he said.

Democrats traditionally are not hurt by open primaries because the party relies on union membership lists and patronage workers for its organizational strength, Totten said.

Republicans, which Totten said rely more on volunteer workers, will be unable to identify fellow party members if the state adopts open primaries.

COUNTY COMR. Carl Hansen, Elk Grove Township Republican committeeman, said Mary Louise Smith was "overreacting" in her comments Monday about the demise of the Republican party.

"I am not at all pessimistic about the future of the Republican party. I think the American people really see

Firms ask delay of underpass

Two downtown financial institutions today will urge Arlington Heights officials to delay plans for an underpass at Arlington Heights Road and the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks until economic impact and traffic studies have been conducted.

The proposed underpass could have a "very decisive negative economic impact" on the First Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights Federal Savings and Loan Assn. and the rest of the central business district, Robert W. Mills, president of First Arlington, said.

A public hearing on plans for an underpass is scheduled for 8 p.m. today at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The plans call for Arlington Heights Road to run under the railway tracks with a minimum vertical clearance of 14½ feet. The plan recommended by the engineering firm of Metcalf & Eddy Inc. also suggests that Northwest Highway be depressed to the same level as Arlington Heights Road.

THE PLAN WOULD mean closing nine businesses and the Evergreen Avenue railroad crossing and also eliminating the access of Davis and Wing streets to Arlington Heights Road.

First Arlington and Arlington Federal could be greatly affected by the proposed underpass, Mills said, because it would put them at the intersection of two dead-end streets: Evergreen and Davis.

Study backs Laetrile veto change

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — A Loyola University study is being used as ammunition in an effort to override Gov. James R. Thompson's veto of legislation that would have allowed the use of Laetrile to treat cancer.

The study, first released Sept. 10, reports a 90 per cent success rate in treating mice with cancer by using Laetrile and a special diet.

Prepared by Harold W. Manner of Loyola's biology department, the study is being circulated by State Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates.

TOTTEN SAID HE has been encouraged by his efforts to win legislators over to a pro-Laetrile position, and said he believes the veto can be beaten when lawmakers go back to work next month.

Manner said the tests, conducted for two months, confirm the assertion that Laetrile alone will not halt the spread of cancer.

However, the paper written by Manner indicated that cancerous tumors in laboratory mice underwent "complete regression" in 89.3 per cent of the cases when animals were treated with Laetile, an enzyme solution and vitamins.

Manner said the testing on the mice followed treatment techniques on humans in countries where Laetrile is legal.

THE SUBSTANCE is banned in the United States but is widely available through black market sources and clinics in Mexico. Officials of the Food and Drug Administration say the substance is worthless in the treatment of cancer.

Some legislators who backed the initial passage of the bill this spring, said they may vote to sustain Thompson's veto because of recent reports that Laetrile is toxic.

However, Manner said the reports are "pretty ridiculous." He said there is no evidence to prove that Laetrile, which is derived from apricot pits is harmful to humans.

In vetoing the bill, the governor said the substance "has never been shown to be effective against cancer in any reputable clinical study . . . I cannot justify its use without becoming a hidden partner in deception . . . I will not become an unwitting co-conspirator in a nationwide consumer fraud."

THE LOYOLA tests, which Manner said will probably be repeated this year by several other universities and pharmaceutical firms across the country, involved injection of the substance in 84 experimental mice. The mice also were given a special diet of enzymes and vitamins.

The tests showed complete regression of the cancerous tumors in nearly

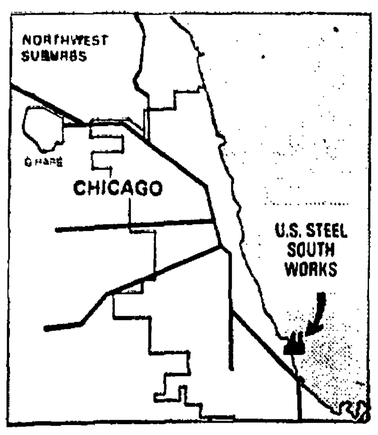
The South Works: steeled against an uncertain future



by KURT BAER

Uncertainty is an intruder in the life of U.S. Steel worker Gene Daniels.

Daniels, his wife, Janice, and their three children live just a few short blocks from the company's giant Chicago South Works. Daniels has worked there three years, and he wants to go on working.

But his job, like that of some 8,500 other South Works employes, is unsure these days It is being buffeted by persistent rumors that the 97-year-old mill will close.

DECLINING CORPORATE profits, high taxes, the cost of pollution controls and foreign competition are bearing down on U.S. Steel and Daniels knows it.

"I'm concerned about it, but you don't know anything for sure until it happens. I'm still getting five days of work a week. A lot of other guys have been cut to four.

"The company has told the workers that South Works isn't making any money right now. But there's no kind of way you could put 8,500 people out of work without affecting this whole area," says Daniels, who earns about $300 a week working in the mill's motor rooms.

Like most steelworkers, Daniels has known both overtime and layoffs before "In the real good days, I was working 16 hours a day, six days a week. But things slacked off and I was laid off for about seven months. We lost our medical insurance. Things weren't too good," he says.

IF DANIELS is laid off, he says he will file for state unemployment compensation and union "sub pay," which for a while would amount to 80 per cent of his weekly earnings. But if the money runs out, he does not know where he would turn.

"It's a good job with good benefits. I'm happy where I'm at. I hope it all can be worked out," Daniels says.

The power of U.S. Steel South Works is written in the Chicago skyline, distinct to all the world.

Sears Tower, John Hancock Center, The Standard Oil Building, the Richard J. Daley Civic Center, the Prudential Building, they are the beams, brackets and steel plate of South Works. On good days, the 575-acre mill can pour out more than 10,000 tons of steel.

But these are not good days. U.S. Steel Corporation's first-half profits dropped 52 per cent this year. At South Works, 200 workers are laid off, another 2,000 employes are on a shortened work week. The company has asked 10,000 management and non-union employes to give up a cost-of-living wage increase that was due in August.

"I can't tell you day-to-day what's happening out here," says Jerry Cornell, community affairs manager at South Works. "Nobody has come out and said South Works is going to be closed. The corporation is looking at all of its operations to determine which are marginal, which might need to be permanently closed."

BUT NOBODY IS guaranteeing that South Works will stay open, Cornell acknowledges.

Police cadet serious after beating

A Mount Prospect police cadet, believed to have been beaten with a 2-by-4, was listed in serious but improving conditon Monday night at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Judy Wiltse, 21, an Arlington Heights resident, was in a state of shock Monday and could not speak to authorities. Police will try to speak to her today if doctors permit.

Authorities believe the assault may have been committed at the intersection of Thacker Street and Wolf Road in Des Plaines.

Mount Prospect Police Chief Ralph J. Doney would not comment on the case.

Des Plaines police also are working on the case since it appears the crime may have been committed there.

Miss Wiltse became a cadet more than a year ago.

Suspect denies role in murders

HARTFORD CITY, Ind. (UPI) — Roger Drollinger calmly denied Monday he led a gang that killed four young men for the fun of it on Valentine's Day. He said he was being framed by two confessed slayers.

"I think the only reason I'm here is because Dan Stonebraker got into something and doesn't want to take the responsibility for what he did," he told the jury hearing his trial on four counts of first degree murder.

Drollinger, 24, of Waynetown, Ind., has been identified as the leader of the gang by two of his co-defendants. Stonebraker, 20, and Michael Wright, 22, and by the sole survivor of the shootings, Betty Spencer, 43.

DROLLINGER SAID he thought Mrs. Spencer, who survived by playing dead after her son and three stepsons were killed by shotgun blasts, was convinced by prosecutors that he was one of the gunmen.

"I think the state has grilled her so much that she has come to believe that," he said. "A person that has been under emotional strain as she has been . . ."

Drollinger said he was at home with his young wife and children when the slayings took place about 3 a.m. on Feb. 14. He testified — as his wife, Kathy, 17, did earlier — that he returned home before midnight on the 13th.

"I am not guilty and I have not reversed this testimony or nothing," Drollinger said. "I am telling it just like it is."

DROLLINGER, THE third defense witness remained on the stand for 3 hours. He was preceded by his father and his teen-age wife.

Kathy Drollinger, 17, who married Roger at age 14 and is the mother of three children, said he returned home before midnight on the night of Feb. 13 — about three hours before the slayings occurred in a Hollandsburg trailer home.

Defense lawyers said Drollinger, 24, Waynetown, who was placed at the murder scene by three eyewitnesses, would take the stand after his alibi witnesses.

A CROWD OF about 150 persons — many more than the tiny courtroom holds — lined up more than an hour before court opened in hopes of getting seats during Drollinger's testimony.

Mrs. Drollinger said she was in bed with their oldest daughter, 3-year-old Amy, when her husband came home.

"I asked him what time it was, but I already looked back at the clock. I remember it was before 12 o'clock," she said.

Asked by prosecutor Clelland Hanner if she had told a neighbor that she and Roger went to a movie that night, she replied, "I probably said 'for all I know we was at a movie that night.' "

WHEN HANNER asked her if she told another woman that Roger didn't get in that night until between 5 and 5:30 in the morning, she said, "No, I didn't have any reason to."

Last week, the mother of the four slain young men identified Drollinger as the man who gave the orders to fire. Two of his three co-defendants also testified that he took part in the shotgun slayings.

Drollinger's father, Nathan, 57, a farmer, testified he frequently employed young men on his farm and all had access to a car allegedly used in the crime. He said the keys were kept under the floorboard.

Keepers hope fancy pants give giraffe the right lift

WINCHESTER, England (UPI) — It was the Royal Navy to Victor's rescue Monday.

Dockyard experts measured the spread-eagled giraffe for a special pair of giraffe-size canvas pants that will be used as part of a lifting cradle to hoist him to his feet.

"It's a bit of a problem," said one member of the Navy team. "We've never had to make trousers for a giraffe before."

THE EXPERTS who earn their living by tackling difficult shipyard loading problems, said once the 18-foot-tall giraffe is on his feet, he will be steadied in a padded crate while veterinarians examine him.

Victor's owner, Marwell Park Zoo chief John Knowles, said the hoist operation could be dangerous.

"One of the great disks is that he will get frightened and break his neck or his legs or that stress could lead to a heart attack," Knowles said.

But veterinarians believe Victor, who fell last Thursday while trying to mate with one of his three "wives," might develop serious health problems if he is grounded too long.

VICTOR'S PLIGHT has attracted widespread sympathy and suggestions about how to raise him have poured in from around the world.

One American offered to hypnotize him to his feet. A faith healer tried a "laying on of hands" — unsuccessfully.

Murder linked to love triangle

by DAN GIRE

A love triangle apparently provoked a Prairie View man afflicted with bone cancer to shoot his wife to death Friday, and then take his own life in a Chicago hotel during the weekend.

Herbert Fritz Jr., 53, of 29 Applehill Ln., was found dead Sunday night in a room at the Bismarck Hotel in Chicago by hotel employes.

Hotel personnel found Fritz dead of a gunshot wound in the head from a .380-caliber pistol lying near the body.

Louis Harceg, Lake County Sheriff's police chief investigator, said Monday Fritz left a suicide note to his family, but would not reveal its contents.

However, sources said a despondent Fritz wrote of his cancer affliction and love triangle between him and his wife, Ally, 45, and another man.

THE MAN, to whom police have repeatedly spoken during the investigation of Mrs. Fritz's murder, was fearful for his life during Fritz's disappearance, the sources said.

"We have every reason to believe at this point that we have a combination murder-suicide," Harceg said. "We've spoken to many family members and we are confident the case is closed.

The case began Friday when an anonymous telephone caller tipped police to a bleeding woman in a car at the Golf Mill Shopping Center, Niles.

Lake County police later found bloodstains and four bullet holes in a bedroom at the Fritz' home. The bed had been stripped of its covers and blankets. Mrs. Fritz's body was found wrapped in the bedroom linen.

Police cadet serious after beating

A Mount Prospect police cadet, believed to have been beaten with a 2-by-4, was listed in serious but improving conditon Monday night at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Judy Wiltse, 21, an Arlington Heights resident, was in a state of shock Monday and could not speak to authorities. Police will try to speak to her today if doctors permit.

Authorities believe the assault may have been committed at the intersection of Thacker Street and Wolf Road in Des Plaines.

Mount Prospect Police Chief Ralph J. Doney would not comment on the case.

Des Plaines police also are working on the case since it appears the crime may have been committed there.

Miss Wiltse became a cadet more than a year ago.

Suspect denies role in murders

HARTFORD CITY, Ind. (UPI) — Roger Drollinger calmly denied Monday he led a gang that killed four young men for the fun of it on Valentine's Day. He said he was being framed by two confessed slayers.

"I think the only reason I'm here is because Dan Stonebraker got into something and doesn't want to take the responsibility for what he did," he told the jury hearing his trial on four counts of first degree murder.

Drollinger, 24, of Waynetown, Ind., has been identified as the leader of the gang by two of his co-defendants. Stonebraker, 20, and Michael Wright, 22, and by the sole survivor of the shootings, Betty Spencer, 43.

DROLLINGER SAID he thought Mrs. Spencer, who survived by playing dead after her son and three stepsons were killed by shotgun blasts, was convinced by prosecutors that he was one of the gunmen.

"I think the state has grilled her so much that she has come to believe that," he said. "A person that has been under emotional strain as she has been . . ."

Drollinger said he was at home with his young wife and children when the slayings took place about 3 a.m. on Feb. 14. He testified — as his wife, Kathy, 17, did earlier — that he returned home before midnight on the 13th.

"I am not guilty and I have not reversed this testimony or nothing," Drollinger said. "I am telling it just like it is."

DROLLINGER, THE third defense witness remained on the stand for 3 hours. He was preceded by his father and his teen-age wife.

Kathy Drollinger, 17, who married Roger at age 14 and is the mother of three children, said he returned home before midnight on the night of Feb. 13 — about three hours before the slayings occurred in a Hollandsburg trailer home.

Defense lawyers said Drollinger, 24, Waynetown, who was placed at the murder scene by three eyewitnesses, would take the stand after his alibi witnesses.

A CROWD OF about 150 persons — many more than the tiny courtroom holds — lined up more than an hour before court opened in hopes of getting seats during Drollinger's testimony.

Mrs. Drollinger said she was in bed with their oldest daughter, 3-year-old Amy, when her husband came home.

"I asked him what time it was, but I already looked back at the clock. I remember it was before 12 o'clock," she said.

Asked by prosecutor Clelland Hanner if she had told a neighbor that she and Roger went to a movie that night, she replied, "I probably said 'for all I know we was at a movie that night.' "

WHEN HANNER asked her if she told another woman that Roger didn't get in that night until between 5 and 5:30 in the morning, she said, "No, I didn't have any reason to."

Last week, the mother of the four slain young men identified Drollinger as the man who gave the orders to fire. Two of his three co-defendants also testified that he took part in the shotgun slayings.

Drollinger's father, Nathan, 57, a farmer, testified he frequently employed young men on his farm and all had access to a car allegedly used in the crime. He said the keys were kept under the floorboard.

Keepers hope fancy pants give giraffe the right lift

WINCHESTER, England (UPI) — It was the Royal Navy to Victor's rescue Monday.

Dockyard experts measured the spread-eagled giraffe for a special pair of giraffe-size canvas pants that will be used as part of a lifting cradle to hoist him to his feet.

"It's a bit of a problem," said one member of the Navy team. "We've never had to make trousers for a giraffe before."

THE EXPERTS who earn their living by tackling difficult shipyard loading problems, said once the 18-foot-tall giraffe is on his feet, he will be steadied in a padded crate while veterinarians examine him.

Victor's owner, Marwell Park Zoo chief John Knowles, said the hoist operation could be dangerous.

"One of the great disks is that he will get frightened and break his neck or his legs or that stress could lead to a heart attack," Knowles said.

But veterinarians believe Victor, who fell last Thursday while trying to mate with one of his three "wives," might develop serious health problems if he is grounded too long.

VICTOR'S PLIGHT has attracted widespread sympathy and suggestions about how to raise him have poured in from around the world.

One American offered to hypnotize him to his feet. A faith healer tried a "laying on of hands" — unsuccessfully.

Knolwes vetoed offers to fly him upright by helicopter or float him up in a swimming pool.

And even the oldest trick in the book was unsuccessful — Victor didn't even blink when his three wives, Dribbles, Domino and Arabesque, were paraded past him.

Labor hails ailing Humphrey

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Ailing Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey Monday brought labor delegates to their feet in a standing ovation by declaring: "I'm not about ready to have somebody cover me up."

In his first speech since undergoing surgery that disclosed terminal cancer, Humphrey told the Minnesota AFL-CIO convention he was "ready to be found again and I'm going to be found."

He appeared thin from his second cancer operation but his color had improved and he was in nearly top form as he pounded the podium and gestured with his arms.

IT WAS "a little harder getting it all together" after the Aug. 18 operation revealed he has inoperable tumor on the pelvic bone, Humphrey said, and he tended to be "more sentimental."

At one point he stopped to touch his eyes with a handkerchief and said:

"Muriel (his wife) warned me that they'd be taking my picture if I wiped my eyes. But so what? Let them take it. A man with no tears is a man with no heart."

The senator spoke for nearly an hour, urging labor to recapture its "idealistic" role in American politics, and was given three standing ovations lasting several minutes while an organ pumped out the "Minnesota Rouser."

HE ORIGINALLY had planned to talk to the gathering by telephone but showed up to address the Minnesota labor movement that has long considered him a hero.

He said he had to cut his speech short to return to the University of Minnesota for another chemotherapy treatment. He was released from the hospital Sept. 2. Doctors who found the tumor have said "it could be months, it could be years" for the former vice president.

But Humphrey let it be known that he intended to be around for a while. He chided a Minnesota legislative committee which is working on a special successor bill in case there is a vacancy in the U.S. Senate.

"No one should depend on this for a few years," he said. "I intend to finish my term."

The Democrat said he is attending his duties from his Waverly home, conferring with the President and with Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

In a display of the famous Humphrey wit, he said he has assured President Carter he will not be running for president.

"This calmed him down," Humphrey said.

Carter meets with Lance, says his position stronger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter met alone with Bert Lance Monday and although he made no public decision on his budget director's future, the White House said Carter feels Lance is in a stronger position following a Senate appearance last week.

It was the most direct indication of support Carter has given his longtime friend since Lance began testifying before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Thursday.

The President said both Thursday and Friday he was "keeping an open mind" on Lance, and he declined comment Sunday.

But after the Carter-Lance meeting Monday, the mood at the White House was upbeat and Press Sec. Jody Powell said recent telephone calls indicate public support for Lance is increasing.

HE SAID Carter and Lance met early Monday but provided no details of the session.

"It was a private matter for them and none of my business," Powell said.

Asked whether Carter has not made a decision on Lance's future, Powell said, "That is my impression. If he has, he has not informed me."

Powell said when Carter does make the decision, "he will sit down with Mr. Lance. In the final analysis that is one (decision) he does intend to make in a personal way."

Powell said most people at the White House feel Lance's three days of testimony before the Governmental Affairs Committee "looks even better from the vantage of a couple of days than it did at the time."

Carter, he said, still feels Lance did nothing illegal.

ON CAPITOL Hill Monday, the committee held another round of hearings with testimony from staff members who described what Lance told them in January when they were checking his background in preparation for his confirmation hearings.

Although the staff members drew no conclusions, their etstimony indicated Lance's January statement did not always square with information revealed since.

Claudia Ingram, a committee staff assistant, said Lance told her during a brief January discussion that $100,000 might be a high estimate of overdrafts he and his family incurred at a Georgia bank in the early 1970s. A federal report recently placed the overdrafts at $450,000.

Mrs. Ingram and GOP counsel David Schaefer agreed Lance denied any of the personal overdrafts involved his wife. They quoted Lance saying the overdrafts were due to estate problems connected with a brother-in-law who committed suicide and it would be "embarrassing" to the family if the subject were raised at the hearings.

As the hearings concluded, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, the panel's ranking Republican, said again Lance should resign "for the good of the country" and predicted "a rough period ahead" for both Lance and Carter if Lance remains in office.

No other witnesses were scheduled in the Lance controversy and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the committee chairman, said Lance's future now is up to the President — and Lance.

Accused I-57 murderer 'enjoyed killing couple'

Henry Brisbon killed a young couple with a shotgun along a deserted section of I-57 after telling them to "kiss their last kiss," a prosecutor charged in Cook County Circuit Court Monday.

Cook County Assistant State's Atty. Michael Ficaro said during opening arguments that Brisbon was the "most vicious, savage killer in modern history" and that he "enjoyed" killing Dorothy Cerny, 25, and her fiance, James Schmidt, 25, June 3, 1973.

Ficaro told the eight-woman, four-man jury in Chicago that Brisbon and three other men killed the couple after deciding to rob motorists along the deserted highway in southern Cook and northern Will counties.

THE FOUR MEN pulled up behind their victims' cars, rammed the rear ends and then robbed and killed the victims when they got out of their cars to inspect the damage, Ficaro said.

A third person, Betty Lou Harmon, 29, was killed the same day only nine miles south of where the couple was slain, but the four suspects on trial have not yet been charged with her murder.

Ficaro said Brisbon "shot each (Miss Cerny and Schmidt) in the back with a shotgun as they (were) screaming for their lives" on the shoulder of the road.

One motorist escaped from the four men that night, Ficaro said. Doris Bell of Manteno escaped from Brisbon when she "broke away from . . . and called for God's protection," and fled in her auto, Ficaro said.

BRISBON, 21, WHO is serving a six to 18 year prison term for rape at the Stateville Correctional Center near Joliet, is charged with murder, conspiracy to commit murder and armed robbery.

Also charged in the slayings are David Sanders, 22, Stanley Charleston, 23, and Darrell Thompson, 21, all of Chicago.

Brisbon's attorney, Thomas J. Royce warned the jury not to be swayed by prosecution tricks and tactics and to listen only to the evidence presented.

Ficaro said the prosecution will present several witnesses, including Charleston and Thompson, who have indicated they will testify against Brisbon and plead guilty to the slayings.

The jury and Judge James M. Bailey, after lunch, took a bus tour of the area on I-57 where the slayings occurred.

The trial was expected to last about three weeks.

Heart attack puts Fontaine on critical list

FRANK FONTAINE

• Frank Fontaine, 57, better known as "Crazy Guggenheim" on the old "Jackie Gleason" show, was listed in critical condition Monday after suffering a heart attack. Fontaine was afflicted Sunday at the Port Columbus International Airport in Columbus, Ohio, while awaiting a plane after finishing a night club engagement.

• The sextuplets born to a 23-year-old Dutch housewife during the weekend have a good chance of becoming medical history's second set of sextuplets to survive. "All is going well," said Dr. Jan Ruys of Leyden's University Hospital where Cornelia Jacoba Rafje Nijssen, the wife of a Dutch steelworker, gave birth Sunday.

• The widow of Pablo Picasso has ended a 4½-year legal battle by signing a settlement with the other heirs to the artist's $250 million legacy. Jacqueline Picasso signed the complicated settlement last week, according to her lawyer, which leaves about one quarter of the estate to herself, about $60 million after taxes. Picasso, who died in April 1973 at the age of 91, left no will to settle the fate of 1,876 paintings, 30,000 engravings, 1,355 sculptures and 2,800 ceramics. His legacy is the largest on record for any artist.

• It appears that Andrea Marcovicci, who has the starring role in the musical "Nefertiti," will go through with the world premiere of the play tonight at Chicago's Blackstone Theater, 60 E. Balbo, as planned. The actress was hit in the head by a pipe during the preview of the play on Saturday and was rushed to Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital. Although head X-rays didn't show any injury, she reportedly remained in bed on Sunday recuperating for tonight's big opener.

• Ruth Carter Stapleton, the President's sister, and her husband, Bob, are in London to witness the publication of her new book on spiritual healing. "I have seen many people healed but I would never say I have performed any of them," said Mrs. Stapleton, a preacher and faith healer. Her book is entitled "The Gift of Inner Healing."

Hotel laundry fires investigated

Two fires Monday in a laundry facility used by the Arlington Park Hilton are under investigation by Rolling Meadows and state fire inspectors.

Acting Fire Chief Ted Loesch said the fires, reported at 2:03 and 3:49 p.m. in the building, Rohlwing Road and Industrial Avenue, Arlington Heights, may be related.

The first fire, in a pile of linen, was extinguised in 12 minutes, he said.

Thirty firefighters from Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights returned to the scene less than two hours later to fight a more extensive blaze for 30 minutes.

No injuries were reported and Loesch said no estimate of damage or explanation of the cause of either fire has been determined.

"IT'S POSSIBLE that the two fires could be related," he said, "but it's impossible that the first one was not fully extinguished and that's what started the second."

The masonry building, extensively damaged by smoke and water, contained washing machines, dryers and ironing equipment used by the Hilton, Loesch said.

Large carts full of clean linen could be seen lined up inside the building.

Joseph Kane, general manager of the Hilton, said employes transport truckloads of dirty sheets and tablecloths to the building for cleaning several times a week.

He said the hotel has a large enough surplus of linen available to service the hotel rooms and restaurants, and that customers will not be inconvenienced by the fires.

Local party leaders more hopeful

the value of the two-party system," Hansen said.

Any decline of Republicanism is attributable to the abuses of Watergate, he said. "But to overreact, as Mary Louise Smith is doing, to the excesses of Watergate, is unfortunate."

"We need more organization and more faith in our philosophy," Hansen said. "Maybe we can't sell everybody on the idea of a balanced budget, but that doesn't mean we should abandon the idea of a balanced budget."

FREND YONKERS, Wheeling Township Republican committeeman, predicted the coming election "will show a substantial improvement in the local party situation. And there are likely to be some real gains in other parts of the state."

He disagreed with Mrs. Smith, who said the GOP has overemphasized fiscal matters. "If you don't have sound fiscal policies you defeat efforts to improve the situation," he said.

Bernard Pedersen, Palatine Township Republican committeeman, said the party needs to be careful in choosing its direction if it tries to broaden its base.

Issues that appeal to the family-oriented, hard-working person are the GOP's bread and butter. Welfare, pornography and traditional morals are key issues, he said

"Freedom is a basic concern of all citizens. If you are going to have freedom you have to have freedom in fiscal and economic areas as well," Pedersen said.

U.S. REP. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, said Mrs. Smith's criticism was "parochial," and he predicted that Republicans, especially conservatives will come "roaring back" in 1978.

Republicans will pick up 30 to 35 seats in the U.S. House next year, Crane predicted. And the big party winners will be conservatives, he said.

"A Nov. 18th Gallup Poll showed that 54 per cent of the electorate defines itself as conservative, but less than one-third of the self-identified conservatives see the Republican party as their party. That is where the party broadening has to take place," Crane said.

Republican Congressmen recently were put into office in special elections in three districts formerly represented by Democrats, he said.

"In my travels throughout the states this year, campaigning on behalf of Republican candidates, I can see that the Republican party is alive and well, and will come roaring back in the 1978 congressional races," Crane said.

GOP in trouble, Smith says

the governorships and are in command of a major number of state legislatures," she said.

"Unless the Republican party demonstrates the will to survive, we could become a one-party nation."

City statistics that indicate continuing erosion in the proportion of voters identifying themselves as affiliated with either of the two major parties, Mrs. Smith said the problem of declining party identification is particularly acute for the GOP. She said it has been too preoccupied with fiscal issues.

"One of our problems, as a party, has been that we are more concerned at times with a balanced budget than a balanced society . . . The Republican party's apparent lack of concern for the needs of people has frequently left the impression that ours is a party without a soul."

At one point he stopped to touch his eyes with a handkerchief and said:

"Muriel (his wife) warned me that they'd be taking my picture if I wiped my eyes. But so what? Let them take it. A man with no tears is a man with no heart."

The senator spoke for nearly an hour, urging labor to recapture its "idealistic" role in American politics, and was given three standing ovations lasting several minutes while an organ pumped out the "Minnesota Rouser."

HE ORIGINALLY had planned to talk to the gathering by telephone but showed up to address the Minnesota labor movement that has long considered him a hero.

He said he had to cut his speech short to return to the University of Minnesota for another chemotherapy treatment. He was released from the hospital Sept. 2. Doctors who found the tumor have said "it could be months, it could be years" for the former vice president.

But Humphrey let it be known that he intended to be around for a while. He chided a Minnesota legislative committee which is working on a special successor bill in case there is a vacancy in the U.S. Senate.

"No one should depend on this for a few years," he said. "I intend to finish my term."

The Democrat said he is attending his duties from his Waverly home, conferring with the President and with Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

In a display of the famous Humphrey wit, he said he has assured President Carter he will not be running for president.

"This calmed him down," Humphrey said.

Carter meets with Lance, says his position stronger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter met alone with Bert Lance Monday and although he made no public decision on his budget director's future, the White House said Carter feels Lance is in a stronger position following a Senate appearance last week.

It was the most direct indication of support Carter has given his longtime friend since Lance began testifying before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Thursday.

The President said both Thursday and Friday he was "keeping an open mind" on Lance, and he declined comment Sunday.

But after the Carter-Lance meeting Monday, the mood at the White House was upbeat and Press Sec. Jody Powell said recent telephone calls indicate public support for Lance is increasing.

HE SAID Carter and Lance met early Monday but provided no details of the session.

"It was a private matter for them and none of my business," Powell said.

Asked whether Carter has not made a decision on Lance's future, Powell said, "That is my impression. If he has, he has not informed me."

Powell said when Carter does make the decision, "he will sit down with Mr. Lance. In the final analysis that is one (decision) he does intend to make in a personal way."

Powell said most people at the White House feel Lance's three days of testimony before the Governmental Affairs Committee "looks even better from the vantage of a couple of days than it did at the time."

Carter, he said, still feels Lance did nothing illegal.

ON CAPITOL Hill Monday, the committee held another round of hearings with testimony from staff members who described what Lance told them in January when they were checking his background in preparation for his confirmation hearings.

Although the staff members drew no conclusions, their etstimony indicated Lance's January statement did not always square with information revealed since.

Claudia Ingram, a committee staff assistant, said Lance told her during a brief January discussion that $100,000 might be a high estimate of overdrafts he and his family incurred at a Georgia bank in the early 1970s. A federal report recently placed the overdrafts at $450,000.

Mrs. Ingram and GOP counsel David Schaefer agreed Lance denied any of the personal overdrafts involved his wife. They quoted Lance saying the overdrafts were due to estate problems connected with a brother-in-law who committed suicide and it would be "embarrassing" to the family if the subject were raised at the hearings.

As the hearings concluded, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, the panel's ranking Republican, said again Lance should resign "for the good of the country" and predicted "a rough period ahead" for both Lance and Carter if Lance remains in office.

No other witnesses were scheduled in the Lance controversy and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the committee chairman, said Lance's future now is up to the President — and Lance.

Accused I-57 murderer 'enjoyed killing couple'

Henry Brisbon killed a young couple with a shotgun along a deserted section of I-57 after telling them to "kiss their last kiss," a prosecutor charged in Cook County Circuit Court Monday.

Cook County Assistant State's Atty. Michael Ficaro said during opening arguments that Brisbon was the "most vicious, savage killer in modern history" and that he "enjoyed" killing Dorothy Cerny, 25, and her fiance, James Schmidt, 25, June 3, 1973.

Ficaro told the eight-woman, four-man jury in Chicago that Brisbon and three other men killed the couple after deciding to rob motorists along the deserted highway in southern Cook and northern Will counties.

THE FOUR MEN pulled up behind their victims' cars, rammed the rear ends and then robbed and killed the victims when they got out of their cars to inspect the damage, Ficaro said.

A third person, Betty Lou Harmon, 29, was killed the same day only nine miles south of where the couple was slain, but the four suspects on trial have not yet been charged with her murder.

Ficaro said Brisbon "shot each (Miss Cerny and Schmidt) in the back with a shotgun as they (were) screaming for their lives" on the shoulder of the road.

One motorist escaped from the four men that night, Ficaro said. Doris Bell of Manteno escaped from Brisbon when she "broke away from . . . and called for God's protection," and fled in her auto, Ficaro said.

BRISBON, 21, WHO is serving a six to 18 year prison term for rape at the Stateville Correctional Center near Joliet, is charged with murder, conspiracy to commit murder and armed robbery.

Also charged in the slayings are David Sanders, 22, Stanley Charleston, 23, and Darrell Thompson, 21, all of Chicago.

Brisbon's attorney, Thomas J. Royce warned the jury not to be swayed by prosecution tricks and tactics and to listen only to the evidence presented.

Ficaro said the prosecution will present several witnesses, including Charleston and Thompson, who have indicated they will testify against Brisbon and plead guilty to the slayings.

The jury and Judge James M. Bailey, after lunch, took a bus tour of the area on I-57 where the slayings occurred.

The trial was expected to last about three weeks.

SMOKE BILLOWS FROM a building at Rohlwing Road and Industrial Avenue as firemen from Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights battle to put out the fire. The fire was the second in the building, used by the Arlington Park Hilton, reported Monday. The causes have not been determined.

Hotel laundry fires investigated

Two fires Monday in a laundry facility used by the Arlington Park Hilton are under investigation by Rolling Meadows and state fire inspectors.

Acting Fire Chief Ted Loesch said the fires, reported at 2:03 and 3:49 p.m. in the building, Rohlwing Road and Industrial Avenue, Arlington Heights, may be related.

The first fire, in a pile of linen, was extinguised in 12 minutes, he said.

Thirty firefighters from Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights returned to the scene less than two hours later to fight a more extensive blaze for 30 minutes.

No injuries were reported and Loesch said no estimate of damage or explanation of the cause of either fire has been determined.

"IT'S POSSIBLE that the two fires could be related," he said, "but it's impossible that the first one was not fully extinguished and that's what started the second."

The masonry building, extensively damaged by smoke and water, contained washing machines, dryers and ironing equipment used by the Hilton, Loesch said.

Large carts full of clean linen could be seen lined up inside the building.

Joseph Kane, general manager of the Hilton, said employes transport truckloads of dirty sheets and tablecloths to the building for cleaning several times a week.

He said the hotel has a large enough surplus of linen available to service the hotel rooms and restaurants, and that customers will not be inconvenienced by the fires.

Heart attack puts Fontaine on critical list

FRANK FONTAINE

• Frank Fontaine, 57, better known as "Crazy Guggenheim" on the old "Jackie Gleason" show, was listed in critical condition Monday after suffering a heart attack. Fontaine was afflicted Sunday at the Port Columbus International Airport in Columbus, Ohio, while awaiting a plane after finishing a night club engagement.

• The sextuplets born to a 23-year-old Dutch housewife during the weekend have a good chance of becoming medical history's second set of sextuplets to survive. "All is going well," said Dr. Jan Ruys of Leyden's University Hospital where Cornelia Jacoba Rafje Nijssen, the wife of a Dutch steelworker, gave birth Sunday.

• The widow of Pablo Picasso has ended a 4½-year legal battle by signing a settlement with the other heirs to the artist's $250 million legacy. Jacqueline Picasso signed the complicated settlement last week, according to her lawyer, which leaves about one quarter of the estate to herself, about $60 million after taxes. Picasso, who died in April 1973 at the age of 91, left no will to settle the fate of 1,876 paintings, 30,000 engravings, 1,355 sculptures and 2,880 ceramics. His legacy is the largest on record for any artist.

• It appears that Andrea Marcovicci, who has the starring role in the musical "Nefertiti," will go through with the world premiere of the play tonight at Chicago's Blackstone Theater, 60 E. Although head X-rays didn't show any injury, she reportedly remained in bed on Sunday recuperating for tonight's big opener.

Local party leaders more hopeful

the value of the two-party system," Hansen said.

Any decline of Republicanism is attributable to the abuses of Watergate, he said. "But to overreact, as Mary Louise Smith is doing, to the excesses of Watergate, is unfortunate."

"We need more organization and more faith in our philosophy," Hansen said. "Maybe we can't sell everybody on the idea of a balanced budget, but that doesn't mean we should abandon the idea of a balanced budget."

FREND YONKERS, Wheeling Township Republican committeeman, predicted the coming election "will show a substantial improvement in the local party situation. And there are likely to be some real gains in other parts of the state."

He disagreed with Mrs. Smith, who said the GOP has overemphasized fiscal matters. "If you don't have sound fiscal policies you defeat efforts to improve the situation," he said.

Bernard Pedersen, Palatine Township Republican committeeman, said the party needs to be careful in choosing its direction if it tries to broaden its base.

Issues that appeal to the family-oriented, hard-working person are the GOP's bread and butter. Welfare, pornography and traditional morals are key issues, he said

"Freedom is a basic concern of all citizens. If you are going to have freedom you have to have freedom in fiscal and economic areas as well," Pedersen said.

U.S. REP. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, said Mrs. Smith's criticism was "parochial," and he predicted that Republicans, especially conservatives will come "roaring back" in 1978.

Republicans will pick up 30 to 35 seats in the U.S. House next year, Crane predicted. And the big party winners will be conservatives, he said.

"A Nov. 18th Gallup Poll showed that 54 per cent of the electorate defines itself as conservative, but less than one-third of the self-identified conservatives see the Republican party as their party. That is where the party broadening has to take place," Crane said.

Republican Congressmen recently were put into office in special elections in three districts formerly represented by Democrats, he said.

"In my travels throughout the states this year, campaigning on behalf of Republican candidates, I can see that the Republican party is alive and well, and will come roaring back in the 1978 congressional races," Crane said.

the governorships and are in command of a major number of state legislatures," she said.

"Unless the Republican party demonstrates the will to survive, we could become a one-party nation."

City statistics that indicate continuing erosion in the proportion of voters identifying themselves as affiliated with either of the two major parties, Mrs. Smith said the problem of declining party identification is particularly acute for the GOP. She said it has been too preoccupied with fiscal issues.

"One of our problems, as a party, has been that we are more concerned at times with a balanced budget than a balanced society . . . The Republican party's apparent lack of concern for the needs of people has frequently left the impression that ours is a party without a soul."

State panel to study legalized gambling

Gov. James R. Thompson Monday appointed a nine-member committee to study legalized gambling including off-track betting and the potential revenue benefit for state and local governments. Thompson said the committee would look for ways to provide governments with added revenue to "offset the growing tax burden." The governor campaigned against off-track betting but said he is now weighing it as a money source. "The revenue situation in 1977 for state and local units of government is extremely tight," Thompson said, "which means that our budgets — from our courthouses and city halls to the Capitol — must reflect sensible short-term revenue structure evaluation and recommendations."

Thompson said legalization of off-track betting would probably help improve the quality of Illinois' racing industry. Winnetka lawyer Thomas Reynolds Jr. will head the committee and James O'Connor of Evanston, executive vice president of Commonwealth Edison, is vice-chairman. Other committee members are Andrew Barrett, Chicago; Pastora Cafferty, Chicago; Thomas Coulter, Golf; UAW official Robert Johnston, Des Plaines; Marshall Korshak, Chicago; Elbert Smith, Decatur, and Dan Webb, Chicago. The committee will try to report back to Thompson soon so its work can be used in preparing next year's state budget, he said.

Nuclear waste disposal halted

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott announced Monday he has asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to suspend all current shipments of nuclear waste to a disposal site near Morris pending a safety review. "To have a high level nuclear waste disposal site located in such close proximity to heavily populated areas and on one of the most important waterways in Illinois without ever having had a thorough and independent environmental review is just incredible," Scott said. General Electric owns the Morris facility, which was originally designed in the 1960's as a nuclear fuel reprocessing plant. "Nuclear waste (at Morris) now is coming from as far away as the Connecticut Yankee plant, Point Beach, Wis., and San Onofre, Calif.," he said.

Police still hope for ID on woman

Resurrection Hospital employes have offered to pay for the funeral of "Jane Doe," a young woman found severely beaten in a forest preserve two weeks ago who died Sunday. "We don't want to see her get a pauper's burial by the state," said Walter Chasen, a funeral home owner. But police say they are hopeful they may some day identify the woman, in her late teens, who never regained consciousness. She was discovered bound and wrapped in a bloody blanket by a hitchhiker who heard her moans. "You never know," said patrolman Robert Collura. "In the next two minutes someone could come in and identify her."

MSD bribe requested: witness

A former Ingram Corp official testified Monday he was told in 1972 his barge company had to make a $120,000 payoff to extend its lucrative sludge-hauling contract with the Metropolitan Sanitary District. William J. Benton, 55, has been the prosecution's key witness in the U.S. District Court jury trial of two Ingram owners, four present and former Chicago officials and two businessmen. Benton, who has been granted immunity from prosecution, testified Riverside businessman Franklin H. Weber told him on Dec. 30, 1972, he must pay "at least 50 per cent of $120,000 . . right away." Weber told Benton $10,000 of the total was for the Cook County Democratic Central Committee' Benton testified. Weber said then State Rep. Robert McPartlin, D-Chicago, would get $25,000 for sanitary district trustees and the remaining $25,000 would go to then Sanitary District Cmr. Valentine Janicki "to take care of the staff," Benton told the jury.

Tabernacle should be closed

Financially troubled Tabernacle Hospital should be closed and replaced by a branch of Cook County Hospital, members of a community organization proposed Monday. Mary Bryan, president of the Organization of New City, and fellow group members met with Dr. Eric Oldberg, president of the Chicago Board of Health, to discuss proposals fo rthe embattled hospital. Oldberg earlier in the month ordered no new admissions at the 150-bed hospital, which serves the black community in a South Side neighborhood, because of a series of fires that have destroyed hospital records.

100 Club pays cop's widow $31,000

A total of $31,000 has been presented to the widow of slain Chicago policeman James Koumoundouros who was denied the usual benefits bestowed upon a slain policeman's family because Koumoundouros was shot while off duty. Koumoundouros, 30, was fatally shot during an attempted robbery Sept. 7 while he was working as a part-time security guard at the Chicago branch of the First National Bank of Lincolnwood. The $31,000 was presented to Mrs. Koumoundouros by the Hundred Club of Cook County, a nonprofit, civilian organization. If Koumoundouros had been killed while on duty as a Chicago policeman, his widow would have received the payment of one year of Koumoundouros' salary.

Decision soon on 'L' cars grant

Regional Transportation Authority officials said Monday they expect a federal decision in about two weeks on their request for $153 million to buy 300 more rapid transit cars, primarily for the "L" system. RTA spokesman Tad Weigle said the Urban Mass Transportation Administration must announce by Oct. 1 — the start of the new federal fiscal year — whether the grant will be approved. The RTA is asking for $153 million spread over three years — $40 million during the first year — to purchase 300 rapid transit cars to replace aging rapid transit equipment owned by the Chicago Transit Authority.

400 confiscated guns burned

More than 400 firearms confiscated by federal agents in the Chicago area during the past year were destroyed Monday. The weapons were collected as part of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' concentrated urban enforcement project started in July 1976. The guns were destroyed in a U.S. Steel Corp. blast furnace in Gary, Ind.

Thompson raps Redmond's view of Class X bill

by DAVE IBATA

Gov. James R. Thompson, seeking grassroots support for his Class X felony bill, Monday accused House Speaker William A. Redmond of playing politics with the lives of Illinois citizens.

Thompson spoke before 500 persons at the convention of the Illinois Police Assn. at the O'Hare Holiday Inn, Rosemont.

The Class X felony bill calls for a minimum, mandatory six-year sentence for the commission of violent crimes.

The governor received standing ovations from delegates at the convention when he vowed, "No probation, no parole, no work release, no furlough. You commit a crime of violence, you go to jail — period."

THOMPSON SAID Redmond, D-Bensenville, was playing politics when he refused to allow the governor's Class X proposal to be added to his own HB 1500, which Thompson called "an inadequate substitute for the Class X package."

Class X, Thompson later told reporters, "is not Redmond's bill. He just picked it up as a club to beat me about the head."

Thompson said he is willing to compromise with Democrats at a special legislative session scheduled to begin Oct. 24 in Springfield, where the Class X bill will be debated.

Thompson declined to say what areas are open to compromise, but told the convention, "I'm going to keep fighting in that special session until they (legislators) pass Class X, and with your help I think they will."

THOMPSON SAID "The least that you and the people of Illinois deserve is a criminal justice system that backs you up when you put your life on the line."

The Class X bill also would set a mandatory life sentence for persons convicted a third time of violent crimes.

"Any armed robber, or kidnaper, or murderer, or rapist around for the third time should go to prison for life, and no judge ought to say otherwise," Thompson said, generating another round of applause from law enforcement officials.

"We should not be like Willy the Mope, who says, 'Do it to me again, and again, and again,'" Thompson said.

Bud Erber, executive director and chief Springfield lobbyist of the 26,000-member police association, said, "we're backing this bill, and will muster as many of our members to back this as possible."

Route 53 extension plan needs evaluation: NIPC

Several proposed freeways and highways, including the extension of Route 53, should be reevaluated, according to a Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission report.

The report says the commission should consider cutting back on some planned expressway improvements as part of the Year 2000 Transportation Plan, now being put together by area planning agencies.

"The 1995 Plan presently provides for major additions to the expressway network, at a cost of $2 billion in 1973 dollars," the report states, referring to only the Illinois share of the costs.

These expressways, however, "may not be necessary to accommodate present and projected traffic volumes," the report said. Moreoever, it noted that development of the highways might unfavorabley change development patterns in the region.

THE NIPC STAFF report says the commission should look at 10 road projects, including the extension of Rte. 53 to Grayslake and the Elgin-O'Hare road.

One option would be to eliminate the project entirely and another would be to downgrade it. "An example of downgrading would be a road, originally planned as a grade separated expressway, built instead as a divided arterial highway with partial access control and some at-grade crossings," the report said.

The report also calls for a reevaluation of proposed rapid transit and railroad improvements included in the 1995 plan. None of these improvements, costing an estimated $3.4 billion in 1973 dollars, would affect the Northwest suburbs.

THE REPORT suggests commission consideration of a new kind of financing for transit projects. Instead of relying purely on conventional funding sources, the NIPC report suggests trying to capture some of the increased value that a transportation project will give surrounding property.

One method would be through taxation of nearby property owners. Another method would be develoment of air rights over railroad tracks or other such areas.

The report calls for further study of contingency plans in case of an energy emergency or in periods of poor air quality.

For example, during periods of poor air quality transit fares could be suspended and restrictions could be imposed on the use of the automobile.

In case of an energy emergency the report says there could be a plan already developed that would address itself to extra ridership capacity on the transit systems or emergency ride sharing. To develop such a plan, analysis and forecasts of energy use and supply would be necessary.

The commission members plan to discuss these matters and make a recommendation for inclusion in the update of the 1995 plan as well as the new year 2000 plan.

Route 53 extension plan needs evaluation: NIPC

Several proposed freeways and highways, including the extension of Route 53, should be reevaluated, according to a Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission report.

The report says the commission should consider cutting back on some planned expressway improvements as part of the Year 2000 Transportation Plan, now being put together by area planning agencies.

"The 1995 Plan presently provides for major additions to the expressway network, at a cost of $2 billion in 1973 dollars," the report states, referring to only the Illinois share of the costs.

These expressways, however, "may not be necessary to accommodate present and projected traffic volumes," the report said. Moreoever, it noted that development of the highways might unfavorabley change development patterns in the region.

THE NIPC STAFF report says the commission should look at 10 road projects, including the extension of Rte. 53 to Grayslake and the Elgin-O'Hare road.

One option would be to eliminate the project entirely and another would be to downgrade it. "An example of downgrading would be a road, originally planned as a grade separated expressway, built instead as a divided arterial highway with partial access control and some at-grade crossings," the report said.

The report also calls for a reevaluation of proposed rapid transit and railroad improvements included in the 1995 plan. None of these improvements, costing an estimated $3.4 billion in 1973 dollars, would affect the Northwest suburbs.

THE REPORT suggests commission consideration of a new kind of financing for transit projects. Instead of relying purely on conventional funding sources, the NIPC report suggests trying to capture some of the increased value that a transportation project will give surrounding property.

One method would be through taxation of nearby property owners. Another method would be develoment of air rights over railroad tracks or other such areas.

The report calls for further study of contingency plans in case of an energy emergency or in periods of poor air quality.

For example, during periods of poor air quality transit fares could be suspended and restrictions could be imposed on the use of the automobile.

In case of an energy emergency the report says there could be a plan already developed that would address itself to extra ridership capacity on the transit systems or emergency ride sharing. To develop such a plan, analysis and forecasts of energy use and supply would be necessary.

The commission members plan to discuss these matters and make a recommendation for inclusion in the update of the 1995 plan as well as the new year 2000 plan.

Radioactivity workshop scheduled

Persons interested in environmental radioactivity can attend a special workshop Wednesday conducted by Harper College professors Jim Arnesen and Ray DePalma.

The workshop is sponsored by the Palatine based Pollution and Environmental Problems and will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Palatine Public Library.

Poem-toting airline mechanic pays City Hall a visit

by ROD A. COVEY

Carrying a poem, a rose and a scrapbook, Buck Warren called on the mayor of Chicago last week.

The poem was called "O'Hare," a tribute to the international airport where Warren works as an airline mechanic and the source of his self-imposed title "the O'Hare poet."

The rose was carved from a piece of black walnut wood. It was for Heather, the mayor's wife.

The scrapbook was filled with newspaper clippings about the Hanover Park man's exploits.

Buck Warren

IN ITS PAGES were accounts of how Warren had been invited to the White House in 1975 to give Gerald Ford a sculpture commemorating the rescue of the ship Mayaquez from Cambodia.

Ford himself was "off somewhere on an important mission" when Warren arrived, the poet confided, but the sculpture was accepted by the President's secretary, who gave Warren a set of cufflinks and a pen.

There also were accounts of his plans to build a 70-ton concrete and steel mountain, inscribed with his poem "Lady of the Sun," in Des Plaines as a Bicentennial monument. That $20,000 dream was rejected by the city, he said, "because I wasn't well enough known at the time."

But in all of the 11 years since he decided to become a part-time man of letters, Buck Warren never was discouraged easily. And now he was going to meet Michael Bilandic.

IT WASN'T QUITE clear why. The brief meeting at city hall was described by the mayor's aides as a "photo opportunity" with Warren's five companions, all members of an antiabortion group.

"I support all organizations which respect human life," Warren said.

After waiting about 45 minutes, the group was ushered into the mayor's office. Warren scurried to a chair on Bilandic's left.

There were handshakes and introductions and a few pleasantries and then Warren announced he had a presentation to make. He handed Bilandic a walnut plaque inscribed with his poem. "O'Hare," it began, "Your windows are the eyes through which millions stare."

"Oh," the mayor said. "That's fine."

MARCY CAVANAUGH Sneed, chairwoman of the National Right to Life Committee and, she confided later, Warren's manager, hastily explained the gift was "in the name of" the national committee.

Warren then thrust the rose toward Bilandic.

"Isn't that beautiful," the mayor said. "Very nice. I know she'll appreciate it very much."

Warren took his seat. He touched his breast and spread his arms wide. "There are artists and plumbers all over the world who support the right to life," he said.

The right-to-lifers took over from there. Warren sat nervously, kneading his hands, as the conversation flowed. "What if Beethoven or Picasso had been aborted?" he asked during one pause.

LATER, CELEBRATING his victory over a glass of beer, the poet told how his 11-year struggle for recognition finally is paying off. His first volume of poetry, "The Silence Within," sold 7,000 copies in six months, he said, and the proceeds bought toys for the children's wards of five Chicago hospitals. His sculptures have been raffled off by churches for "three, four, five hundred dollars," he said.

"As an American artist, I want to be above money-making," he said. "I want my work to be of benefit to all men, rich and poor, to encourage the moral fiber of youth. My artwork and writing has always been to promote world peace.

"As a poet, you can change clothes and go in and see the mayor," he said. "Then you can change your clothes again and go into the ghetto and see conditions there."

With that he left, carrying his scrapbook with him.

Dist. 59 passes '77-78 budget of $16.9 million

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education Monday approved a $16.9 million budget for the 1978 school year.

The budget shows only a 1 per cent increase in expenditures over last year, but does not include provisions for salary increases for the district's administrators, secretaries and custodians. When these pay raise are negotiated, the budget will be amended, Board Pres Harold Harvey said.

Based on the budget, Business Mgr. Arthur Perry estimated the district's tax rate will drop 4 cents, to $2.56 per $100 of equalized assessed valuation. For the average homeowner with a house assessed at $10,000, this would mean a savings of $40.

THE TAX RATE decrease is based on the assumption that the district's equalized assessed valuation will reach $628 million this year. If the tax base grows higher, the tax rate will drop more than anticipated, Perry said.

Receipts from property taxes, state aid and other sources will total $16,442,470 in 1977-78, and will fall $433,696 short of meeting budgeted expenditures, he said.

To make up this difference and repay past debts in the district's building and education fund, the district expects to borrow $9.2 million from its working cash fund, Perry said.

"If you do not have a suffieient tax rate to meet expenses, you're continually borrowing on your current tax levy to get money to provide a cash flow," he said.

Although the working cash fund has only $5.9 million in assets, Perry said if the timing and amount of tax collections are on target, the funds will be able to make the necessary $9.2 million loan and the district will not have to issue tax anticipation warrants. At worst, the district could have to issue $800,000 in warrants, he said.

ANTICIPATED expenditures in the education fund total about $12 million, a 1.8 per cent decrease over last year's $12.2 million.

The transfer of $218,324 in maintenance salaries from the education fund to the building fund and a reduction of 30 classroom teachers because of declining enrollment, accounts for much of the decrease in education fund expenditures.

Kennicott to be used for light tests

Kennicott Avenue, between Palatine and Rand roads, will be used to test six different types of streetlights before village officials decide what the standard streetlight on residential streets should be.

The test lighting system, which will cost about $1,500, was approved by the Arlington Heights Village Board Monday night.

The various alternatives will be installed in about three or four weeks and probably be left up for about six months, Village Trustee Robert Miller said.

Kennicott Avenue was picked as the test area because of the large number of accidents on the street, which has two sharp curves in a one-block stretch. The varieties of light hopefully will alert drivers to slow down for the sharp curves, Miller said.

The intent of the test installations on Kennicott Avenue is to show the differences in the various types of sodium-vapor streetlights and to aid village officials in determining what should replace the existing mercury vapor streetlights throughout the village as money becomes available.

The six different types of streetlights used in the test area will vary in intensity and glare. They will be labeled so residents can determine which type they prefer. Residents will be surveyed by village officials at a later date.

Wine tasting license sought

A request for a wine tasting license from Teddy's Liquors, 135 S. Arlington Heights Rd., was sent to the village board's public health and safety committee.

Charles Karavidas, president of Teddy's Liquor Stores, said he has asked several times for permission to have wine tasting at his store but always was told it was not allowed under local ordinances. However, in July the board created a new license exclusively for wine-tasting businesses. The special license, issued to the Brookside Winery and Tasting Cellar, 1013 S. Arlington Height Rd., costs $1,600.

The special wine tasting liciense, called Class BB, provides for free sampling of wines in containers of not more than one ounce.

Can't sell Mopeds in village

It will be illegal to sell Mopeds, a new kind of motorized bicycles, in Arlington Heights until the village's zoning codes are revised.

Until the plan commission has studied the zoning laws, Kenneth Oxenford of Central Cycle, 1709 E. Central Rd., will not be allowed to sell the 10 Mopeds he purchased from a distributor.

The village board agreed that provision should be made under the B-2 zoning category to allow the sale of Mopeds and urged the plan commission to hold hearings on revising the zoning laws as soon as possible.

Group helps cardiac patients cope

by DEBBE JONAK

For Lorraine Larsen, the emotional aftermath of her heart attack was much worse than the physical assault on her body.

She struggled for months with fears, anxieties and depression that her family and friends had no way of understanding.

But Mrs. Larsen has found what she considers an answer to the heart attack victim's struggle to cope — the Coronary Club, sponsored by Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

"IT'S A DIFFICULT thing to go through by yourself," said Mrs. Larsen, 57, of 1710 Roslyn Rd., Schaumburg. "My family was helping all they could. But I needed the help of people who went through it. People really don't understand what it's like until they have one."

In answer to what they saw as a need to communicate those fears and anxieties, Gail Adler, a social worker, and Dan MacLean, director of social services at the hospital, organized the Coronary Club.

Close to 60 former cardiac patients treated at Alexian Brothers were invited to the first gathering last week at the hospital, although the meetings are open to anyone. More than 30 attended, some with their families.

They heard experts speak and shared their problems and solutions with each other.

"THE OBJECT IS to get them going on their own," MacLean said. "They really are the ones who have the most to offer to each other."

Persons who have suffered heart attacks need that post-hospital communication, he said.

"They (heart attacks) seem to cause a drastic change in lifestyle," Ms. Adler said. "It forces people to take a look at their lives and it's a time for reassessment."

Often that sudden change results in depression, fear and stress, she said. There is a fear of recurrence. Will there be another heart attack? When will it happen? she said.

There is also a feeling of helplessness, especially acute in the take-charge, independent type of person prone to heart attacks, MacLean said.

HEART ATTACK victims worry about what and how much they can do without risking another attack, he said.

Mrs. Larsen, a housewife, was afraid of washing her floors, vacuuming the rugs, carrying shopping bags. Many of those who were employed are afraid to work 8-hour days.

Because of the inability to deal with that fear, many heart attack victims never return to work, MacLean said.

The next Coronary Club meeting is 7:30 p.m. Oct. 13 at the hospital, 800 W. Biesterfield Rd., Elk Grove Village.

Firms seek delay of underpass

traffic and financial consultants hired by First Arlington and Arlington Federal indicate there are several deficiencies in the report conducted by the engineering firm.

The closing of Evergreen and Davis streets "will disrupt long-established travel patterns and require customers of the bank and association to travel several blocks out of their way to reach the institutions," a report submitted by BBC Financial Research Associates, St. Louis, Mo., states.

Because of the inconvenience to customers of Arlington Federal and First Arlington, the BBC report recommends the underpass plan be reevaluated.

"IF THE PROPOSED (underpass) is approved, it may well have an adverse financial impact on the institutions, resulting in the loss of a substantial portion of their present deposit bases and retarding prospects for future growth," the BBC report states.

"We are not necessarily opposed to any of the underpass alternatives, but we are apposed to the village deciding anything before all the homework has been done," Mills said.

"Our intent is to have the best alternative selected but to first study the perimeter of the project before we rush ahead with anything," he said.

The Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce and many downtown businessmen are expected to oppose plans for the underpass at tonight's public hearing.

"Our position is that we are not satisfied with the proposals presented. We think it would make the downtown area difficult for some businesses, especially those eliminated or blocked off," said Earl Johnson, executive secretary of the chamber.

MANY OF THE merchants who attended a special meeting Friday morning complained that the closing oof the Evergreen Avenue railroad crossing will cause additional traffic congestion in the downtown area.

The underpass plan recommended by Metcalf & Eddy had an estimated price tag of $5.7 million in 1975. However, the final cost may be as high as $8.6 million because of inflation, Gary Alstot of Metcalf & Eddy said.

Federal financing to cover 70 per cent of the project has been obtained and the state and village are expected to divide the remaining 30 per cent.

Syria reports 100 new cholera cases

Syrian authorities reported nearly 100 new cholera cases Monday and warned that if an epidemic breaks out among Moslem pilgrims to Mecca, all pilgrims passing through Syria will be quarantined. Health officials said 97 of the new cases had been registered in the past three days. More than 70 persons already have died of the disease in Syria and the new cases bring the number of persons afflicted to over 3,100. Jordan, Kuwait and Lebanon also reported new cases.

The outbreak was initially thought to have originated in Syria but health officials in Damascus have denied this, saying it was brought into the country by travelers from other, unnamed Middle East countries. The Syrian authorities said they planned to disinfect streets and alleys in Damascus by spraying them with a water-and-chemical mixture.

Inmates vow to use human shields

A dozen armed convicts fought a gun battle with guards at a fortress-like prison in Oporto, Portugal Monday, barricaded themselves in an office and threatened to shoot their way out using about 15 hostages as human shields. The rebellious inmates at what had been regarded as Portugal's most secure prison said the government must grant them immediate freedom and safe passage to Morocco. One convict died and the warden was critically wounded as the prisoners fought their way into the administrative offices as the Custoias prison. Five other persons were injured — two convicts, two guards and a 49-year-old woman prison worker.

The convicts released a chief guard, who was shot in the chest, and the woman, who had been badly beaten. But they kept the warden, who was shot in the stomach and leg, and the other wounded with them. A doctor and a nurse were allowed inside briefly to treat the injured.

Koch wins N.Y. runoff election

Reform Congressman Edward Koch defeated Secretary of State Mario Cuomo Monday to win the Democratic nomination for mayor of New York. Koch led by an overwhelming margin in Manhattan, where he served five terms as a congressman from the "Silk Stocking" district on the East Side. In the Bronx, where he ran virtually even with Cuomo in the seven-way, Sept. 8 primary, Koch led by more than 5,000 votes. The victory made Koch the heavy favorite to win the Nov. 8 general election in this overwhelmingly Democratic city. He will face Cuomo, who already has the Liberal Party designation, Republican State Sen. Roy Goodman on the GOP line, and radio personality Barry Farber, who has the Conservative Party nomination.

Carter, Vance meet with Dayan

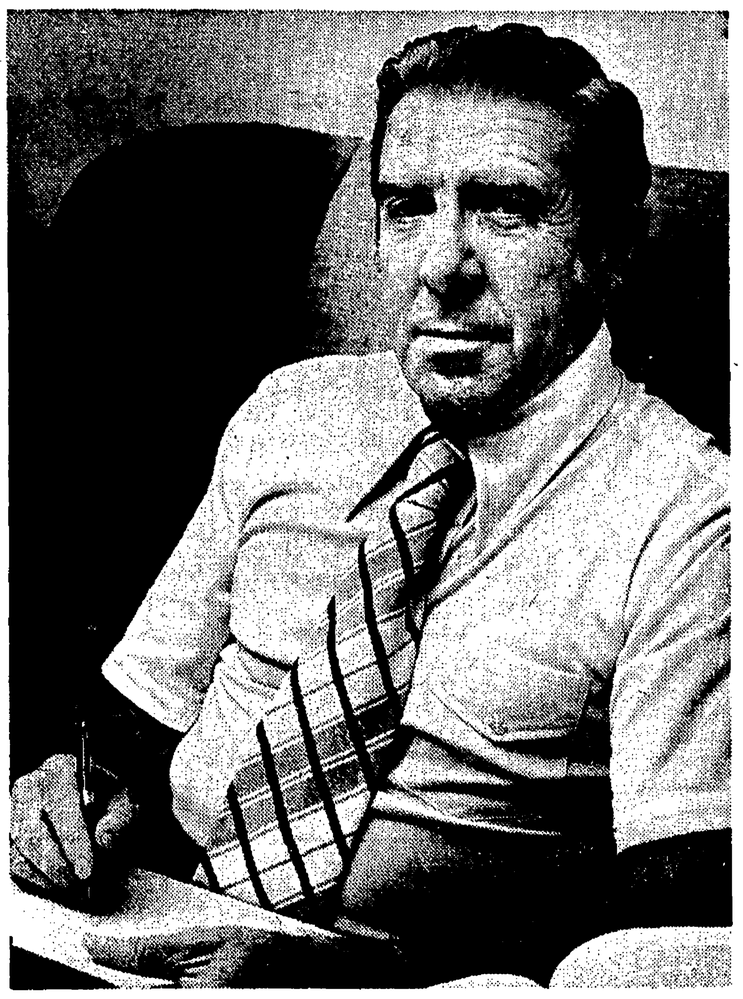
President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance held "constructive" talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan Monday on the thorny questions of Palestinian representation in Mideast peace talks and widely criticized Israeli settlements on the West Bank. Dayan presented an exposition of the Israeli plan for an overall peace treaty in the Middle East. He did not, at least publicly, explain the mysterious flights which took him during the weekend from Brussels to Paris to Tel Aviv to New York. A White House statement after Dayan's 2½ hour session with Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale, Vance and other U.S. officials, said the talks were "useful" and would "inaugurate a series of detailed and concrete discussions . . . in the intensive search for a comprehensive peace." However there was no indication the United States and Israel moved closer on the question of the Palestinians.

Report views night club fire

Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll testified at a congressional hearing Monday that an investigation indicates "a direct cause" of the Beverly Hills nightclub fire which killed 164 persons was a "conspiracy" by the owners to circumvent the law. Carroll said a grand jury is soon expected to consider the Memorial Day weekend tragedy in suburban Southgate, Ky. The Kentucky governor released a voluminous report on the Kentucky State Police investigation into the blaze which destroyed the plush nightspot.

The report said the nightclub was jammed to twice its capacity and was replete with fire safety code violations. The report blamed the club owners, the state fire marshal and local authorities for allegedly failing to install proper equipment and make safety checks. The report also attacks the club owners for allegedly failing to evacuate the burning building quickly.

Testifying about the report, Carroll said: the nightclub was "packed to twice its legally authorized capacity — aisles blocked, exits blocked and routes to safety blocked with people and tables."



HAROLD W. MANNER of Loyola University has said Laetrile, when used with a special diet has a 90 per cent cure success in mice. His study is being circulated as ammunition to override Gov. James Thompson's veto of the Laetrile bill.

90 per cent of the animals and partial regression in the remainder of the experimental groups.

Tumors in 21 mice not treated with Laetrille and the diet continued to grow during the eight-week tests.

"The diet is important, you have to have turn the body around once it has had cancer," Manner said. The biologist testified for the legalization of the substance when lawmakers first acted on the bill this spring.

Manner said he has appeared before legislative committees in other states backing efforts to legalize Laetrile. At least 14 states have already voted to lift bans on the use of Laetrile.

Remember last winter? This year won't be as bad

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The coming winter will be colder than normal but not as bad as last year's record freeze, government and private weathermen predicted Monday.

Based on "very preliminary" and "tentative" forecasts, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the northeast quadrant of the country will be colder than normal and the southwest mild, while the northwest and southeast quadrants defy prediction at this point.

"It is unlikely this winter will be as severe as last winter," said Donald L. Gilman, chief long range forecast for the National Weather Service, a branch of NDAA. "It could be a colder than normal winter without seeming as bad."

ASSOCIATE NDAA administrator Edward S. Epstein set the odds of "a similar and equally severe" winter this season at "more than 30 to 1."

Epstein and Gilman, along with private meteorologist and television weather man Gordon Barnes, testified before the Senate intergovernmental affairs subcommittee on the subject of long range forecasting.

Stressing his prediction was general and would be supplemented in late November by observations about fall weather patterns, Epstein said:

"The scattered clues we find point toward a national temperature pattern in which the northeastern quarter of the country and the central Mississippi Valley seem the most likely to experience a colder winter than normal, and the southwestern quarter most likely to enjoy a mild one."

HE CALLED THE forecast a " tentative picture, which should not be given more than a 55 per cent chance of verifying at any individual city."

Gilman said last year was 25 to 40 per cent colder than normal in parts of the Ohio Valley and Deep South and 10 to 20 per cent colder in the East. Ten per cent colder than normal qualified as a "harsh winter," he said.

He said the mid-September prediction of the coming winter "is the kind of thing we don't feel bound by." If NDAA had to make such an early prediction last year at this time, "we would hve been quite wrong," he said.

Barnes said he had forecast a 22 per cent colder than normal winter last year east of Rockies, which turned out to be a conservative predictions. For this winter his forecast is "15 per cent below normal — not as severe as last winter but colder than normal."

Feminist judge sworn into office in Madison

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A feminist lawyer garbed in a borrowed robe was sworn in Monday to replace a judge ousted from office for suggesting rape might be a normal reaction to women's clothing and society's permissiveness.

"This feels very good, if you'd like to know," Moria Krueger said after reciting the oath of office as Dane County's first woman judge before a crowded courtroom that gave her a standing ovation.

"But what I see most clearly is the hundreds of people who worked so hard to make this day a reality," she said.

"I now accept one of the most important responsibilities that the people can bestow on an individual — that of sitting in judgment of others."

MS KRUEGER, 33, who outpolled Judge Archie Simonson by a 3-2 vote margin in an unprecedented recall election, Sept. 7, had been unable to order a robe in time for the ceremony. The robes of other county judges were too large for her.

She was thinking about renting a graduation gown until a friend loaned her a robe. "It's a minister's robe," she explained.

Simonson, 52, was voted out of office for the remarks he made about rape May 25 as he was about to sentence a 15-year-old boy to a year of court supervision at home for taking part in an assault on a girl Nov. 8 in a high school stairwell.

Simonson, who was not at the ceremony, said he was "not mad at anybody.

"If I have anyone to blame, it's the 52 per cent that chose not to go to the polls and vote," he said. "I can only ask the Lord to forgive them, for they know not what they've been doing."

AMONG THE FRIENDS and dignitaries present for the swearing in were Ms. Krueger's husband, Edward; her mother, Mrs. Robert Mackert of Manitowoc; U.S. District Judge James Doyle; and Justice Shirley Abrahamson, the first woman on the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

"Never have I seen a turnout such as this," said Circuit Judge Richard W. Bardwell, who administered the oath of office and who said he had observed many investitures in his 21 years on the bench.

Attorney Eric Schulenburg, a friend of Ms. Krueger, said Simonson's recall would make all judges more careful about what they do and say on the bench.

"I do expect a great deal from you as a judge," he told Ms. Krueger. "If you do only half of that, you'll be an excellent judge."

Film director to undergo tests

Polanski gets 90-day sentence

MOVIE DIRECTOR Roman Polanski leaves Superior Court in Santa Monica, Calif. after being sentenced to 90 days in a correctional institution, during which a diagnostic study will be made to determine whether he should get a harsher penalty. He pleaded guilty to having unlawful sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl. Execution of the sentence was suspended until December.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Film Director Roman Polanski was sentenced to at least 90 days in jail Monday for "unlawful sexual intercourse" with a 13-year-old girl but was permitted to go free until he makes arrangements for a new movie he has started.

Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband ordered the 44-year-old Polanski confined for three months in a state correctional institution where he will undergo diagnostic tests to determine whether the sentence should be more severe.

Rittenband agreed to stay execution of the sentence until Dec. 19 after Polanski's attorney told the court that the "economic well being" of many other persons would be affected if the movie, "Hurricane," had to be shelved.

POLANSKI, husband of murdered actress Sharon Tate and producer-director of such films as "Chinatown" and "Rosemary's Baby," made no comment but he looked downcast, apparently having hoped the court would go along with his lawyer's plea that he be put on probation.

The dapper, 5-foot, 2-inch Polanski had pleaded guilty Aug. 9 to the charge of "unlawful sexual intercourse" last March at the Beverly Hills home of actor Jack Nicholson, who was away at the time.

At the urging of the girl's parents that she be spared ordeal of a trial, the district attorney's office dropped five other counts including use of drugs to commit rape.

Rittenband said that two court-appointed psychiatrists had found that Polanski could not be classified as a "mentally disoriented sex offender" in which case he could have been committed to a state or private institution for an indeterminate period.

RITTENBAND NOTED that the girl in the case, who along with her family had asked that Polanski not be incarcerated, was "well developed beyond her years and not previously unschooled in sexual matters."

There was no mention of the slaying of Miss Tate and four other persons by Manson cult members in 1969 but the judge said he had taken into consideration Polanski's "unhappy if not tragic life."

Rittenband said, however, that this background did not give a "man of the world" such as Polanski a license to seduce a young girl with champagne and drugs.

Defense lawyer Douglas Dalton called on the court to treat the movie director as any ordinary defendant facing the same charges. He said Polanski should not be at a disadvantage because he was so prominent in the public eye, was a foreigner and had been the object of a "torrent of publicity."

There was no mention at the hearing of possible federal deportation proceedings against the Polish-born Polanski, now a French citizen. He could be expelled for a crime of moral turpitude but that decision will rest largely on what recommendation Rittenband makes to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization department.

Polanski still could receive a sentence ranging from not more than one year in county jail to up to 50 years in state prison.

Former employe's injury claim angers county board

A former county highway department employe, who officials say resigned rather than face charges of loafing on the job, has filed a $4,000 claim for injuries he suffered when he fell on his broom.

The claim, approved by the state industrial commission, angered county board members Monday to the point that Comr. Jerome Huppert said the county should "make an example" of the case and refuse to pay.

County records show former highway department employe Sam Kurban was hurt Aug. 26, 1976, when he jumped into a ditch to avoid a speeding car, and landed on his broom handle, Huppert said.

The worker sprained his left rib, the county's consulting physician said. But Kurban's doctor found he had lost 25 per cent use of his left arm as a result of the mishap.

THE CASE WAS heard by the Illinois Industrial Commission, which recommended an award of $4,073.15.

"If we refuse to pay, the injured party can go into circuit court and if he gets a favorable ruling he is entitled to double the original award," said Huppert. Refusing to pay some claims is a "calculated risk" that the county ought to take to dramatize its unhappiness with large workman's compensation claims that are being approved by the commission.

"A lot of tax money is going out on these claims and at least on the face of some of these (injury) reports, there is no evidence that the people were impaired to the extent of the cash awards," Huppert said.

It was the second time in recent months that county commissioners were upset about workman's compensation costs.

In June, the county approved payment of more than $10,000 compensation to two assistant state's attorneys who broke their arms playing softball at the office picnic.

COUNTY BOARD Pres. George W. Dunne Monday appointed a subcommittee to investigate the problem. The board deferred payment on Kurban's claim as well as 15 other claims on its agenda.

"I think there may be several options the county can follow," said comr. Carl Hansen, a member of the special subcommittee. "I prefer to see a uniform approach rather than going through the facts of any single case in which the individual might very well be entitled to compensation," he said.

Asst. State's Atty. Leonard Foster, who represented the county in Kurban's case, advised against a further appeal. "I think $4,000 is about as cheap as we're going to get off in this instance," he said.

County Hwy. Supt. Richard H. Golterman said Kurban took 48 days off after the mishap, including 14 sick days and 29 vacation days to which he was entitled. He resigned Jan. 28, 1977, after allegations, including loafing on the job, were made against him by the civil service commission, Golterman said.

Cuban exiles claim Miami blasts

MIAMI (UPI) — Bombs ripped out windows and kicked up dirt at four of the Miami area's plushest hotels in the early morning hours Monday and a militant Cuban exile group claimed responsibility for the "attention-getting" blasts.

No one was injured in the bombings, which came just hours before a planned march through Miami by Cuban exile groups opposed to what some term a "sell-out" in the thawing U.S.-Cuban relations.

The "Pedro Luis Boitel Commandos," who earlier claimed responsibility for two bombings in Washington and two in south Florida, said it caused the blasts at Miami's Dupont Plaza and Sheraton Four Ambassador hotels and at the Fontainebleau and Eden Roc in Miami Beach.

IN TELEPHONE calls and written communiques, the group has demanded the release of what it called 17 political prisoners in the United States, Venezuela and Mexico.

It also has demanded an International Red Cross investigation into "inhuman conditions and abuses" of 20,000 political prisoners in Cuba and a United Nations probe of human rights in Cuba.

Miami Police Sgt. Richard Gause said the bombs, apparently set off by electronic devices, sounded "more than anything else like an attention-getter at this point."

"We're handling them as bombings, just the same as any other ones," said Julius L. Mattson, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office. "The degree of damage is not a criterion as far as we're concerned."

He said the bombs "appeared to be plastic pipe."

THE FIRST BOMB went off at 2:03 a.m., shattering two windows of the Dupont Plaza's Encore Lounge and knocking out a foot-long section of tiles from a ledge near the swimming pool.

Six minutes later, a device exploded near the Fontainebleau's spa. It was followed at 2:20 a.m. by a blast at the Four Ambassadors and an hour later by a blast at the Eden Roc.

Four Ambassadors night manager Jeff Crane described the explosion, placed in a flower bed, as "small" and said, "It mustn't have been a very large bomb." Night clerk Nedmi Fernandez said she "thought something had fallen, like if someone cleaning had dropped something."

No one has been injured in the series of Boitel bombings, which started May 25 with a blast that ripped through a wall at Mackey International Airlines' Fort Lauderdale office. The airline had announced regular Florida-Cuba flights, but dropped its plans immediately after the bombing.

The commandos also claimed responsibility for a bomb thrown at a Venezuelan military DC-9 at Miami International Airport Aug. 14, and for two bombs which exploded behind the Soviet Embassy and near the south lawn of the White House Sept. 7.

County lowers assessment level

The Cook County Board Monday officially lowered the assessment level on single family homes, condominiums and small apartment buildings from 17 to 16 per cent of their fair market value.

The 16 per cent figure will be used this year in reassessing property in Elk Grove, Schaumburg, Maine and Hanover townships. It also will be applied in Wheeling and Palatine townships were 17 per cent reassessments last year contributed to enormous tax increases for many homeowners this year.

The change represents a 6 per cent reduction in assessment levels. But it is no guarantee that taxes will not continue to rise.

"It will mean a reduction of 6 per cent only if local taxing bodies retain the status quo with respect to their tax rates," said County Board Pres. George W. Dunne.

TAX RATES ARE an extension of the budgets and appropriation ordinances that local governments file with the county clerk. If spending locally goes up, tax rates, in many cases will be increased enough to offset the lower assessments.

Dunne also appointed a 14-member blue ribbon study commission that will examine the county's real estate tax picture. The commission will be chaired by John Weithers, executive vice president of the Midwest Stock Exchange.

Citizen representatives include Joanne Andrews, Wilmette Tax Action Group, and Shirley Keller, League of Women Voters. Other members include financial experts and elected officials.

Pharmacist has "tried them all..." ...discovers weight control program that really works!

Pharmacist Dan Smith of Burger's Drug Store in St. Charles, Illinois is a NaturSlim "believer" after losing 18 pounds in just two weeks. After hearing so much about the NaturSlim program from customers and seeing the excellent results they were having, Dan decided to try it himself.

"In my many years as a pharmacist, I've seen and tried numerous weight-loss plans, but none have worked as well for me as NaturSlim. And NaturSlim is very nutritional too!"

After three months, Dan has not regained any of the lost pounds either, as so often happens when "rebounding" from starvation diet plans. He maintains his weight by taking NaturSlim once daily . . . and eating normally otherwise.

Dan says, "It was surprisingly easy, too! I didn't have to attend any weigh-ins, starve myself or do any special exercises."

With the NaturSlim program, there are no shots, drugs or long lists of forbidden foods. In fact, you are encouraged to eat a normal, well-balanced dinner every day.

The next time you are in the St. Charles area, stop by Burger's Drugs and see Dan yourself. He'll tell you personally what he thinks about NaturSlim!

Film director to undergo tests

Polanski gets 90-day sentence

MOVIE DIRECTOR Roman Polanski leaves Superior Court in Santa Monica, Calif. after being sentenced to 90 days in a correctional institution, during which a diagnostic study will be made to determine whether he should get a harsher penalty. He pleaded guilty to having unlawful sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl. Execution of the sentence was suspended until December.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Film Director Roman Polanski was sentenced to at least 90 days in jail Monday for "unlawful sexual intercourse" with a 13-year-old girl but was permitted to go free until he makes arrangements for a new movie he has started.

Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband ordered the 44-year-old Polanski confined for three months in a state correctional institution where he will undergo diagnostic tests to determine whether the sentence should be more severe.

Rittenband agreed to stay execution of the sentence until Dec. 19 after Polanski's attorney told the court that the "economic well being" of many other persons would be affected if the movie, "Hurricane," had to be shelved.

POLANSKI, husband of murdered actress Sharon Tate and producer-director of such films as "Chinatown" and "Rosemary's Baby," made no comment but he looked downcast, apparently having hoped the court would go along with his lawyer's plea that he be put on probation.

The dapper, 5-foot, 2-inch Polanski had pleaded guilty Aug. 9 to the charge of "unlawful sexual intercourse" last March at the Beverly Hills home of actor Jack Nicholson, who was away at the time.

At the urging of the girl's parents that she be spared ordeal of a trial, the district attorney's office dropped five other counts including use of drugs to commit rape.

Rittenband said that two court-appointed psychiatrists had found that Polanski could not be classified as a "mentally disoriented sex offender" in which case he could have been committed to a state or private institution for an indeterminate period.

RITTENBAND NOTED that the girl in the case, who along with her family had asked that Polanski not be incarcerated, was "well developed beyond her years and not previously unschooled in sexual matters."

There was no mention of the slaying of Miss Tate and four other persons by Manson cult members in 1969 but the judge said he had taken into consideration Polanski's "unhappy if not tragic life."

Rittenband said, however, that this background did not give a "man of the world" such as Polanski a license to seduce a young girl with champagne and drugs.

Defense lawyer Douglas Dalton called on the court to treat the movie director as any ordinary defendant facing the same charges. He said Polanski should not be at a disadvantage because he was so prominent in the public eye, was a foreigner and had been the object of a "torrent of publicity."

There was no mention at the hearing of possible federal deportation proceedings against the Polish-born Polanski, now a French citizen. He could be expelled for a crime of moral turpitude but that decision will rest largely on what recommendation Rittenband makes to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization department.

Polanski still could receive a sentence ranging from not more than one year in county jail to up to 50 years in state prison.

Former employe's injury claim angers county board

A former county highway department employe, who officials say resigned rather than face charges of loafing on the job, has filed a $4,000 claim for injuries he suffered when he fell on his broom.

The claim, approved by the state industrial commission, angered county board members Monday to the point that Comr. Jerome Huppert said the county should "make an example" of the case and refuse to pay.

County records show former highway department employe Sam Kurban was hurt Aug. 26, 1976, when he jumped into a ditch to avoid a speeding car, and landed on his broom handle, Huppert said.

The worker sprained his left rib, the county's consulting physician said. But Kurban's doctor found he had lost 25 per cent use of his left arm as a result of the mishap.

THE CASE WAS heard by the Illinois Industrial Commission, which recommended an award of $4,073.15.

"If we refuse to pay, the injured party can go into circuit court and if he gets a favorable ruling he is entitled to double the original award," said Huppert. Refusing to pay some claims is a "calculated risk" that the county ought to take to dramatize its unhappiness with large workman's compensation claims that are being approved by the commission.

"A lot of tax money is going out on these claims and at least on the face of some of these (injury) reports, there is no evidence that the people were impaired to the extent of the cash awards," Huppert said.

It was the second time in recent months that county commissioners were upset about workman's compensation costs.

In June, the county approved payment of more than $10,000 compensation to two assistant state's attorneys who broke their arms playing softball at the office picnic.

COUNTY BOARD Pres. George W. Dunne Monday appointed a subcommittee to investigate the problem. The board deferred payment on Kurban's claim as well as 15 other claims on its agenda.

"I think there may be several options the county can follow," said comr. Carl Hansen, a member of the special subcommittee. "I prefer to see a uniform approach rather than going through the facts of any single case in which the individual might very well be entitled to compensation," he said.

Asst. State's Atty. Leonard Foster, who represented the county in Kurban's case, advised against a further appeal. "I think $4,000 is about as cheap as we're going to get off in this instance," he said.

County Hwy. Supt. Richard H. Golterman said Kurban took 48 days off after the mishap, including 14 sick days and 29 vacation days to which he was entitled. He resigned Jan. 28, 1977, after allegations, including loafing on the job, were made against him by the civil service commission, Golterman said.

Cuban exiles claim Miami blasts

MIAMI (UPI) — Bombs ripped out windows and kicked up dirt at four of the Miami area's plushest hotels in the early morning hours Monday and a militant Cuban exile group claimed responsibility for the "attention-getting" blasts.

No one was injured in the bombings, which came just hours before a planned march through Miami by Cuban exile groups opposed to what some term a "sell-out" in the thawing U.S.-Cuban relations.

The "Pedro Luis Boitel Commandos," who earlier claimed responsibility for two bombings in Washington and two in south Florida, said it caused the blasts at Miami's Dupont Plaza and Sheraton Four Ambassador hotels and at the Fontainebleau and Eden Roc in Miami Beach.

IN TELEPHONE calls and written communiques, the group has demanded the release of what it called 17 political prisoners in the United States, Venezuela and Mexico.

It also has demanded an International Red Cross investigation into "inhuman conditions and abuses" of 20,000 political prisoners in Cuba and a United Nations probe of human rights in Cuba.

Miami Police Sgt. Richard Gause said the bombs, apparently set off by electronic devices, sounded "more than anything else like an attention-getter at this point."

"We're handling them as bombings, just the same as any other ones," said Julius L. Mattson, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office. "The degree of damage is not a criterion as far as we're concerned."

He said the bombs "appeared to be plastic pipe."

THE FIRST BOMB went off at 2:03 a.m., shattering two windows of the Dupont Plaza's Encore Lounge and knocking out a foot-long section of tiles from a ledge near the swimming pool.

Six minutes later, a device exploded near the Fontainebleau's spa. It was followed at 2:20 a.m. by a blast at the Four Ambassadors and an hour later by a blast at the Eden Roc.

Four Ambassadors night manager Jeff Crane described the explosion, placed in a flower bed, as "small" and said, "It mustn't have been a very large bomb." Night clerk Nedmi Fernandez said she "thought something had fallen, like if someone cleaning had dropped something."

No one has been injured in the series of Boitel bombings, which started May 25 with a blast that ripped through a wall at Mackey International Airlines' Fort Lauderdale office. The airline had announced regular Florida-Cuba flights, but dropped its plans immediately after the bombing.

The commandos also claimed responsibility for a bomb thrown at a Venezuelan military DC-9 at Miami International Airport Aug. 14, and for two bombs which exploded behind the Soviet Embassy and near the south lawn of the White House Sept. 7.

Travel rules need tightening

The Illinois Board of Education should fulfill its promise to act quickly on rules covering official travel following disclosure of a vacation State School Supt. Joseph M. Cronin took in his state-owned car.

In addition, the rules governing travel for all state officials need to be tightened in order to prevent such abuses in other agencies.

Cronin used his state-owned 1977 Oldsmobile Rgency 98 to drive to educational conferences in Michigan and Boston and then took the car to New Hampshire on vacation, even though his contract stipulates that the car is for official use only.

In the past Cronin has been criticized for chartering airplanes when state planes could have been used for trips. Members of the state board have promised to look into the situation and to develop clear policies on what travel is and is not appropriate "before the snow flies."

Overall state policy bars the use of government vehicles for personal travel, but enforcement of the policy is too often lax. One aide to Gov. James Thompson resigned earlier this year in a controversy over his use of state planes, but it is hard to say how many other officials at one time or another may have evaded the state policy.

What is important is that state employes know what is expected of them on use of government cars and planes and that they know that there are penalties of misuse of the vehicles. Enforcement must not be so haphazard that only those "caught" by the news media are subject to discipline.

State board of education members reacted promptly to the latest charges about Cronin. As Board Members Donald Truitt of Palatine said, there is a "certain arrogance" among some educators when it comes to such privileges. That arrogance can extend to other public officials.

Clear rules and fair and speedy enforcement can do much to eliminate such arrogance. The state board of education and the rest of the state government should take whatever steps are needed to make the system work.

Baldwin Road can't wait

Everyone agrees that the intersection of Baldwin and Dundee roads is a real hazard, but no one is willing to act quickly to improve it.

Illinois Dept. of Transportation officials say they can't spend a penny improving the intersection with signals or turning lanes until Baldwin Road is improved to meet public street standards.

Three developement companies have denied responsibility for improving Baldwin Road but finally agreed to make the necessary improvements by the end of the year.

Cook County Sheriff's Dept. spokesmen say the department doesn't have the manpower to patrol the intersection and enforce traffic regulations.

And, Palatine Township officials say there is nothing they can do.

But in the meantime thousands of residents who have moved into apartments and condominiums along Baldwin Road have to risk their lives every time they try to get onto Dundee Road.

It shouldn't take a fatality to get overdue improvements made at the intersection.

Residents along Baldwin Road have waited long enough for improvements. Developers and highway officials must speed up the improvement and signalization of the intersection.

Also county police must patrol Dundee Road on a regular basis to make the intersection as safe as possible until improvements are made.

Waterway use tax would hurt public, help railroads

Paul Greenberg

America's railroads seem determined to protect the public from all depredations except their own. The latest free rider spotted by the sharp-eyed railroad lobby is the country's recently improved system of water transportation. Here the government has gone and spent all this public money on the nation's inland waterways while collecting scarcely any tolls or taxes from the barge companies. A tax on waterway users, now proceeding through Congress at full speed, would seem to be only fair.

Seem to be is right. Because guess who will foot the bill for this tax. The consuming public. First, in the form of higher rates for water transportation. Taxes do have a way of being passed on. Higher water rates would also allow higher freight rates in general. Rail rates to the South dropped dramatically when the Arkansas River navigation system was completed. They could be expected to rise in proportion to any tax on waterway users.

IN THE PAST, the railroads have complained that competitive pressures from the waterways "depress" their earnings by some $500 million a year. That should give the public some idea of what the railroads stand to collect if taxes wipe out the differential between rail and water freight rates. Not only the government but the railroads would collect from a new tax on waterway users. That may explain the railroad lobby's sudden interest in equity.

The idea that waterway users are getting a free ride may be fairly convincing if you're not in the business of water transportation. That is, if you don't have to build the docks, contract for the terminals, construct warehouses and elevators, arrange for the special cargo-handling equipment needed on occasion, put in water lines, pay for streets, sewers and fire protection, and consider the cost of railway spurs and highway connections at ports. A lot of money is required to take advantage of this "free" ride.

HARRY COOK OF the National Conference estimates that private investment equals 20 to 40 per cent of the improvements made to inland waterways by the federal government. According to his figures, private investment far outstrips the total $5 billion the federal government has spent on waterways since 1824, when it began to get into the business at the behest of Henry Clay. Since 1952, more than $171 billion in private investment has been responsible for some 10,000 new or considerably enlarged plants along the waterways.

It's not as though the waterways were the only beneficiary of government subsidies to transportation, or the biggest. The cumulative investment of the federal government in inland waterways over the years is less than the single $6.4 billion Rail Revitalization and Reform Act. The railroads also have the historic distinction of being the recipients of the largest government grant ever recorded: Land grants encompassing 9.4 per cent of the continental United States as the railroads expanded in the late 19th Century, also known as the Age of the Robber Barons.

SOME WATERWAY users are willing to accept a less onerous form of this tax tied to funds for an improved lock and dam near St. Louis. Other users oppose any new tax or toll on the users of the public waterways. The divisions among waterway users over this tax may not indicate a solid front or a very cohesive lobby in Washington. But those divisions do reflect the fierce competition in water transportation, which remains one field in which the conglomerates have not neatly divided the business. It is difficult to see how imposing tolls in this industry would encourage new investment — and therefore competition — either on the waterways or with other forms of transportation.

Perhaps the most dubious aspect of this new waterway tax is its timing. In the midst of an energy crisis, it would penalize a most efficient form of transportation. It's estimated that inland waterways move 16 per cent of America's cross-country freight at a cost of less than 2 per cent of the nation's total freight bill. Water transportation seldom has been so important to the national interest. And now Washington is proceeding to slap a tax on it. There is apparently no crisis that Capitol Hill, with some additional thought, initiative and taxes, cannot make worse.

Trust a major factor in '76 voting

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

In Washington

Although the nation elected a new President more than 10 months ago, the first of the detailed studies seeking to explain what motivated the voters has only recently been made public — and it shatters a number of popular political myths.

For instance, it's widely assumed that the two contenders' position on various domestic and foreign policy issues was the most important aspect of the four nationally televised debates between Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Gerald R. Ford.

Not so, says the massive survey of 1976 voting behavior directed by Arthur H. Miller and Warren E. Miller of the University of Michigan's Center for Political Studies.

"EXTENSIVE RESEARCH on the debates demonstrates that their most salient aspect was the manner in which the candidates performed and not issue concerns," they report.

When voters participating in a nationwide poll were asked about the debates, "nearly half of all comments focused either on the candidate's competence or his performance," the Michigan study found. "References to various candidate personality characteristics were also quite prevalent."

Another popularly accepted notion is that the concept of "trust" was of paramount importance in last year's election campaign. "Despite the attention given to the issue," says the newly issued analysis, "it had relatively little direct impact on the vote."

One apparent reason for that surprising conclusion is that Carter and Ford were trusted about equally by the electorate, thus cancelling out any advantage or disadvantage either man might have held in another contest.

BUT THE STUDY notes that "the widespread distrust of politicians" turned Ford's pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon into a major political liability. At the time of that controversial action, in the fall of 1974, about 61 per cent of those participating in a national survey disapproved of the decision.

Time did not heal that particular wound very quickly because two years later, when Ford was fighting for political future in the 1976 presidential campaign, the disapproval rate had dropped only to 37 per cent.

"The skepticism engendered by the pardon may have set the tone for much of the public's evaluation of his (Ford's) subsequent performance in office," says the report. "It appears that the public judged the pardon both on the basis of moral considerations and as a reflection of Ford's ability to make good decisions" as president.

Ford's tough primary battle with former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, "contrary to popular belief, was not so much an ideological contest as a reflection of the personal style and appeal of the two candidates, as well as a referendum on Ford's performance in office," the Michigan analysis reports.

THE 128-PAGE report document was unveiled early this month at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association. It and similar studies of every presidential election during the past quarter century are widely respected and heavily relied upon by the country's political scientists.

The survey found that an unusually large proportion of the electorate, 15 per cent, remained "undecided" about the choice between Carter and Ford as late as a few days prior to the election.

Finally, the analysis seeks to destroy "the popular belief, often expressed by the media, that the country is moving in a conservative direction."

After carefully studying voter attitudes on issues such as school busing, legalization of marijuana, women's equality, government-financed health insurance and increased taxation of the wealthy, the study concludes that there was either a very slight shift toward liberalism or no change at all from 1972 to 1976.

Group helps Indian kids

Some years ago we were introduced to an organization called Futures For Children, Inc. and were asked if we would sponsor an American Indian child and contribute a small monthly sum on a regular basis for that child's needs. Like everyone else, we were constantly beseiged by all kinds of organizations for donations and were dubious about making a commitment. But after some thought we decided to give it a try, and we now are so happy that we did.

Unlike almost all other organizations asking for financial support, the sponsorship of a child through Futures is on a one-to-one basis and it is a very personal affair. Along with your financial support, you are encouraged to correspond with the child, and you may if you wish even visit them in their schools in Arizona or New Mexico. From time to time you will also get a report from Futures telling you of your child's progress in school.

From these sponsorships we have been richly rewarded with new friendships, and we have learned much about our Native Americans that really surprised us. We did not know that most of these children suffer from a language barrier since most enter school only able to speak their Native American language, and that many travel up to 50 miles each day to go to school. We did not realize that most of these children still live in great poverty, and that for many the school lunch is the only sure meal they will get that day.

Futures needs about 200 more sponsors and if you can give $20 a month and a little time now and then to write a letter, please write to Futures for Children, Inc., 4401 Montgomery, Albuquerque, N.M. 87109. Incidentally, the Better Business Bureau's Statement for Charitable Solicitations lists Futures as having met their standards.

On Miner use

The directors of the newly formed Central Citizens Coalition sent each Roosevelt University Trustee the packet we constructed in May for the Environmental Control Commission and a letter stating our members' objections to a university at Miner Junior High School. Since representatives of the university had mentioned at a May school board meeting that they would not come into a community that did not welcome them, we felt it fair to suggest they locate their fine university in a non-residential area and on a major arterial. Mr. Jerone Stone, Roosevelt's Board President, responded that he felt the "community leaders" of Arlington Heights were concerned about the citizens' best interests. He wrote us: "I am sure that this matter will get the full attention and cooperation of all parties concerned, and I point out to you that Roosevelt University has always acted with the highest of integrity —" We applaud Mr. Stone: we definitely maintain that the Arlington Heights Trustees, the "community leaders," have the obligation to be involved in land use and zoning questions. Mr. Stone expects such involvement and so do the residents of Arlington Heights. We think a school built for Dist. 25 pupils ceases to be a school once that building is not used by Dist. 25 pupils. The empty building is not a school; the special use should cease. A new use should be subject to clarification by the Village Trustees because they are the experts on land use.

A university does not belong in an area surrounded with single family homes on three sides; it belongs on a major arterial (which neither Dryden nor Miner is). We do not oppose a university in Arlington Heights, but we oppose it at Miner because it would change the character of our neighborhood.

Since Roosevelt's representatives have refused to limit their use of the Miner building (capacity 900 plus), we must assume they expect to be very successful in a few years. Because we believe the suburbs are ripe for jr.-sr. level courses and Graduate courses, we think a university will be tremendously successful. (Harper has some 17,000 students.) Our suburban neighbors will flock to the school; each in his own car for one class or two. This constant influx of moving vehicles will change our area. It is traffic and children's safety that concerns us.

We have been fighting this issue for over six months; it is time for the Dist. 25 Board to acknowledge the validity of our concerns. It is time for the Board to show that it cares about the Miner residents. It is time to tell its renter "no."

Travel rules need tightening

The Illinois Board of Education should fulfill its promise to act quickly on rules covering official travel following disclosure of a vacation State School Supt. Joseph M. Cronin took in his state-owned car.

In addition, the rules governing travel for all state officials need to be tightened in order to prevent such abuses in other agencies.

Cronin used his state-owned 1977 Oldsmobile Rgency 98 to drive to educational conferences in Michigan and Boston and then took the car to New Hampshire on vacation, even though his contract stipulates that the car is for official use only.

In the past Cronin has been criticized for chartering airplanes when state planes could have been used for trips. Members of the state board have promised to look into the situation and to develop clear policies on what travel is and is not appropriate "before the snow flies."

Overall state policy bars the use of government vehicles for personal travel, but enforcement of the policy is too often lax. One aide to Gov. James Thompson resigned earlier this year in a controversy over his use of state planes, but it is hard to say how many other officials at one time or another may have evaded the state policy.

What is important is that state employes know what is expected of them on use of government cars and planes and that they know that there are penalties of misuse of the vehicles. Enforcement must not be so haphazard that only those "caught" by the news media are subject to discipline.

State board of education members reacted promptly to the latest charges about Cronin. As Board Members Donald Truitt of Palatine said, there is a "certain arrogance" among some educators when it comes to such privileges. That arrogance can extend to other public officials.

Clear rules and fair and speedy enforcement can do much to eliminate such arrogance. The state board of education and the rest of the state government should take whatever steps are needed to make the system work.

Baldwin Road can't wait

Everyone agrees that the intersection of Baldwin and Dundee roads is a real hazard, but no one is willing to act quickly to improve it.

Illinois Dept. of Transportation officials say they can't spend a penny improving the intersection with signals or turning lanes until Baldwin Road is improved to meet public street standards.

Three developement companies have denied responsibility for improving Baldwin Road but finally agreed to make the necessary improvements by the end of the year.

Cook County Sheriff's Dept. spokesmen say the department doesn't have the manpower to patrol the intersection and enforce traffic regulations.

And, Palatine Township officials say there is nothing they can do.

But in the meantime thousands of residents who have moved into apartments and condominiums along Baldwin Road have to risk their lives every time they try to get onto Dundee Road.

It shouldn't take a fatality to get overdue improvements made at the intersection.

Residents along Baldwin Road have waited long enough for improvements. Developers and highway officials must speed up the improvement and signalization of the intersection.

Also county police must patrol Dundee Road on a regular basis to make the intersection as safe as possible until improvements are made.

Illinois taxpayers must really love Joe — letting him use his state car for vacations!

Paul Greenberg

America's railroads seem determined to protect the public from all depredations except their own. The latest free rider spotted by the sharp-eyed railroad lobby is the country's recently improved system of water transportation. Here the government has gone and spent all this public money on the nation's inland waterways while collecting scarcely any tolls or taxes from the barge companies. A tax on waterway users, now proceeding through Congress at full speed, would seem to be only fair.

Seem to be is right. Because guess who will foot the bill for this tax. The consuming public. First, in the form of higher rates for water transportation. Taxes do have a way of being passed on. Higher water rates would also allow higher freight rates in general. Rail rates to the South dropped dramatically when the Arkansas River navigation system was completed. They could be expected to rise in proportion to any tax on waterway users.

IN THE PAST, the railroads have complained that competitive pressures from the waterways "depress" their earnings by some $500 million a year. That should give the public some idea of what the railroads stand to collect if taxes wipe out the differential between rail and water freight rates. Not only the government but the railroads would collect from a new tax on waterway users. That may explain the railroad lobby's sudden interest in equity.

The idea that waterway users are getting a free ride may be fairly convincing if you're not in the business of water transportation. That is, if you don't have to build the docks, contract for the terminals, construct warehouses and elevators, arrange for the special cargo-handling equipment needed on occasion, put in water lines, pay for streets, sewers and fire protection, and consider the cost of railway spurs and highway connections at ports. A lot of money is required to take advantage of this "free" ride.

HARRY COOK OF the National Conference estimates that private investment equals 20 to 40 per cent of the improvements made to inland waterways by the federal government. According to his figures, private investment far outstrips the total $5 billion the federal government has spent on waterways since 1824, when it began to get into the business at the behest of Henry Clay. Since 1952, more than $171 billion in private investment has been responsible for some 10,000 new or considerably enlarged plants along the waterways.

It's not as though the waterways were the only beneficiary of government subsidies to transportation, or the biggest. The cumulative investment of the federal government in inland waterways over the years is less than the single $6.4 billion Rail Revitalization and Reform Act. The railroads also have the historic distinction of being the recipients of the largest government grant ever recorded: Land grants encompassing 9.4 per cent of the continental United States as the railroads expanded in the late 19th Century, also known as the Age of the Robber Barons.

SOME WATERWAY users are willing to accept a less onerous form of this tax tied to funds for an improved lock and dam near St. Louis. Other users oppose any new tax or toll on the users of the public waterways. The divisions among waterway users over this tax may not indicate a solid front or a very cohesive lobby in Washington. But those divisions do reflect the fierce competition in water transportation, which remains one field in which the conglomerates have not neatly divided the business. It is difficult to see how imposing tolls in this industry would encourage new investment — and therefore competition — either on the waterways or with other forms of transportation.

Perhaps the most dubious aspect of this new waterway tax is its timing. In the midst of an energy crisis, it would penalize a most efficient form of transportation. It's estimated that inland waterways move 16 per cent of America's cross-country freight at a cost of less than 2 per cent of the nation's total freight bill. Water transportation seldom has been so important to the national interest. And now Washington is proceeding to slap a tax on it. There is apparently no crisis that Capitol Hill, with some additional thought, initiative and taxes, cannot make worse.

Trust a major factor in '76 voting

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

In Washington

Although the nation elected a new President more than 10 months ago, the first of the detailed studies seeking to explain what motivated the voters has only recently been made public — and it shatters a number of popular political myths.

For instance, it's widely assumed that the two contenders' position on various domestic and foreign policy issues was the most important aspect of the four nationally televised debates between Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Gerald R. Ford.

Not so, says the massive survey of 1976 voting behavior directed by Arthur H. Miller and Warren E. Miller of the University of Michigan's Center for Political Studies.

"EXTENSIVE RESEARCH on the debates demonstrates that their most salient aspect was the manner in which the candidates performed and not issue concerns," they report.

When voters participating in a nationwide poll were asked about the debates, "nearly half of all comments focused either on the candidate's competence or his performance," the Michigan study found. "References to various candidate personality characteristics were also quite prevalent."

Another popularly accepted notion is that the concept of "trust" was of paramount importance in last year's election campaign. "Despite the attention given to the issue," says the newly issued analysis, "it had relatively little direct impact on the vote."

One apparent reason for that surprising conclusion is that Carter and Ford were trusted about equally by the electorate, thus cancelling out any advantage or disadvantage either man might have held in another contest.

BUT THE STUDY notes that "the widespread distrust of politicians" turned Ford's pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon into a major political liability. At the time of that controversial action, in the fall of 1974, about 61 per cent of those participating in a national survey disapproved of the decision.

Time did not heal that particular wound very quickly because two years later, when Ford was fighting for political future in the 1976 presidential campaign, the disapproval rate had dropped only to 57 per cent.

"The skepticism engendered by the pardon may have set the tone for much of the public's evaluation of his (Ford's) subsequent performance in office," says the report. "It appears that the public judged the pardon both on the basis of moral considerations and as a reflection of Ford's ability to make good decisions" as president.

Ford's tough primary battle with former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, "contrary to popular belief, was not so much an ideological contest as a reflection of the personal style and appeal of the two candidates, as well as a referendum on Ford's performance in office," the Michigan analysis reports.

THE 128-PAGE report document was unveiled early this month at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association. It and similar studies of every presidential election during the past quarter century are widely respected and heavily relied upon by the country's political scientists.

The survey found that an unusually large proportion of the electorate, 15 per cent, remained "undecided" about the choice between Carter and Ford as late as a few days prior to the election.

Finally, the analysis seeks to destroy "the popular belief, often expressed by the media, that the country is moving in a conservative direction."

After carefully studying voter attitudes on issues such as school busing, legalization of marijuana, women's equality, government-financed health insurance and increased taxation of the wealthy, the study concludes that there was either a very slight shift toward liberalism or no change at all from 1972 to 1976.

Group helps Indian kids

Some years ago we were introduced to an organization called Futures For Children, Inc. and were asked if we would sponsor an American Indian child and contribute a small monthly sum on a regular basis for that child's needs. Like everyone else, we were constantly beseiged by all kinds of organizations for donations and were dubious about making a commitment. But after some thought we decided to give it a try, and we now are so happy that we did.

Unlike almost all other organizations asking for financial support, the sponsorship of a child through Futures is on a one-to-one basis and it is a very personal affair. Along with your financial support, you are encouraged to correspond with the child, and you may if you wish even visit them in their schools in Arizona or New Mexico. From time to time you will also get a report from Futures telling you of your child's progress in school.

From these sponsorships we have been richly rewarded with new friendships, and we have learned much about our Native Americans that really surprised us. "We'd like to ask you a few questions on how you got so dirty?"

Floundering Medicaid program fueling health care cost inflation

WASHINGTON — (LENS) — America's poor are twice as likely to undergo surgery as better-off citizens are. This surprising conclusion, from a recent study by Congress, is less a reflection on the health of the poor than on that of the nation's floundering public medical programs.

Much of the surgery, it seems, is not urgent, and some is hardly necessary; many people have tonsils, appendixes or gall bladders removed as a simple precautionary measure. But the reasons behind this rush to surgery are far from simple.

When the poor get expensive care at a far higher rate than the rich, it poses two questions. Are doctors forcing unneeded surgery on their poorer patients knowing they can get handsome fees from the public health program? Or is it that the medical costs are now so high that surgery is mainly accessible only to the subsidized poor?

SURGERY ACCOUNTS for as much as a fifth of the total cost of Medicaid, the health program that covers the medical costs of the poor. A little more than half the Medicaid bill, now running at about $18 billion a year, is met by the federal government, and the rest made up by the state and local governments.

Abuse of the system is notorious. But it seems only part of the abuse can be blamed on the infamous "medicaid mills" where the poor consult the doctors, with the doctors claiming monstrous reimbursements of fees from the government

A much more difficult factor is that the provisions drawn up for Medicaid a decade ago guaranteed the poor a free choice among all the medical services available. In other words, if they wanted a particular operation at a particular hospital, they could get it; there was to be no second class of hospitals or treatment for the poor.

THE AIM WAS worthy, but it is in trouble. Health costs in general, both public and private, have risen to frightening levels; a total of $140 billion last year. There are also increasing numbers of people on the Medicaid rolls: about 25 million at the last estimate. The cost of Medicaid to some states, such as Massachusetts, is rising each year by about twice the rate of inflation. And since Medicaid is a much heavier burden, proportionately, for the states, it is from them — rather than from the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare — that demands for reform are heard.

The most controversial of these demands is, precisely, that some control should be kept on the range of medical services open to the poor. Now that the poor consult their doctors even more often than the rich, and blacks consult as often as whites (a leap in surgery visits of 12 per cent in seven years), Medicaid recipients should be encouraged to see their doctors less for matters that are trivial or routine.

They might be discouraged by being made to pay a portion of their doctor's bill — an idea already has been tried, not without discomfort and unfairness, for several years in Georgia.

If they make a visit and are sent for tests, state administrators would prefer to see these tests confined to certain reputable laboratires where costs are restricted. And if, eventually, the patient chooses surgery, he should be sent to the cheapest accredited hospital.

A RESTRICTED service of this sort was tried last year in New York City, where almost 2 million people are eligible for Medicaid. Municipal officials recommended that the poor should go to one laboratory in particular which was cheaper and offered simpler services. But the laboratory rivals, joined by HEW, protested that this went against the Medicaid patient's freedom of choice and the plan was dropped.

Notably, it was not the patients who complained. The "choice" in Medicaid has always tended to be more what doctors want to offer than what patients expect to receive. And it is frequently not, even now, a fair choice.

A study published in July by the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore shows Medicaid patients entering hospital for surgery are far more likely to be treated by trainee surgeons than other patients are. Only the cost is the same.

Feel helpless? You are not alone

by MELVIN MADDOCKS

If one had to nohinate the prevalent feeling today — the modern feeling — the guess, alas, might be helplessness.

Average person gets up in the morning feeling helpless — just scanning the headlines of his newspaper. Wars, shortages, pollution, everything he reads about finally touches his life, and yet what can he do about it?

Average person climbs into his automobile, the mot powerful, the most sophisticated land vehicle in history, and sits, helplessly, in a traffic jam.

WHEN HE FINALLY gets to work, average person is, for eight hours, the member of a megacorporation as often as not. But the awesome size and scope of the company only seem to make him feel small and expendable and well, helpless.

After hours, average person claims more freedom in his private relationships than his mother and father would have dreamed of. The policy of no strings is perfectly splendid when he is the one who wants to let go, but how does he feel when he is the one who wants to hang on? Helpless.

Self-improvement books proliferate on how to get power and use it. From the boardroom to the bedroom, life is explained as a power game. Yet average person is also constantly told how little effective power anybody has, right up to the Kremlin, the Vaican, or the White House.

We are all, it appears, the pawns of history — and worse. For on the philosophical level average person is given the popular non-choice of assuming that man is a puppet of behavior modification, jerked around by rewards and punishments, or the victim of his genes, predestined from birth.

HUMAN BEINGS have always felt their limits, but have people ever felt so helpless as they do in this most powerful of centuries?

The ways people fight helplessness is a revealing indicator. In the '60s the metaphor was guerrilla warfare. A small but militant underground proposed to practice counterinsurgency against a specific enemy — the System. Sabotage, infiltration — these were the operative terms. A shove at just the right place and time, and the dinosaur-Establishment, musclebound by its own power, would topple from dead weight. So went the plot.

In the '70s one tends to practice anti-helplessness in the solitary sense — as a gesture, even a kind of practical joke. One does what one does, not to overcome the world but to break up its rhythm, to make a little space for oneself: to be human. When an anti-helplessness rebel, '70s-style, climbed the World Trade Building, he made the front pages, pushing aside for a day the headlines of helplessness. But mostly these gestures make the bottom of a back page, if that.

Like the story of Brian O'Brien of Wilton, Connecticut, who ran the 300 miles to Freeport, Maine — four hours a day for two weeks — to prove that a man on foot could obtain a pair of corduroy pants and a tattersall shirt from the L. L. Bean mail order catalog faster than the post office would deliver them. He arrived in Freeport one day after his order had arrived in Wilton, and everybody from postmasters down to the Bean computer cried: "See?" But Brian O'Brien saw too what he had really proved: that average person was not helpless.

JOGGING, IN FACT, is the metaphor of anti-helplessness in the '70s. Jogging, home-gardening — all the small, manageable activities that begin with the declarative statement: "I do not depend . . ." On machines. On other people.

Such gestures are private. One no longer attempts to fight helplessness by seizing power. For one no longer trusts oneself with power, any more than anybody else.

We seem to be going back to a primer stage, starting all over again, far from the political centers of power, far too from the computer buttons. Every man his own slightly ironic populist.

It's not enough. But it may be a beginning — this anti-helplessness that proceeds, one jogging step at a time.

Festival of Activities This Weekend

Would you like to learn judo? Or jazz dancing, or painting? Or just watch someone else do one of these activities? You can catch an entire festival of activities and crafts this weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 23-25 on the mall. Park Districts from Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Des Plaines, River Trails Park District and the Northwest Suburban Association have coordinated a preview of more than 50 different activities offered through area park districts. In addition to continuous presentations and demonstrations, craft and art exhibits will be set up with hobbyists actually working on projects.

There will be something entertaining for everyone! Check this list: Boxing, plants for gardeners, tumbling and baton twirling.

Clowns and magicians will stroll the mall performing tricks for your entertainment. All demonstrations will be available through an area park district.

STARTS MONDAY. The Suburban Aquarist Society, which meets regularly in Mount Prospect, will open their annual exhibit and sale on the mall. Joining members will be Pet World and Montgomery Ward of Randhurst. Highlight of the show, which runs through Sunday, October 2, will be the fish and accessories auction at 1 p.m. closing day.

"FOR BEAUTY FULL WOMEN ONLY," Thursday, September 22, at 1:00 p.m., Carson Pirie Scott & Co. will present a full-scale runway presentation of fashions, sizes 14½ to 22½ with larger models, in larger fashions, appealing to the full-figured woman's interest in style and fashion.

A complete collection of looks for Fall, in a full range of sizes include daytime dressing, from classic and casual sportswear, to evening looks, with dresses and coordinated separates.

Reservations are not necessary, and free admission includes a "make your own ice cream sundae" buffet.

There are also increasing numbers of people on the Medicaid rolls: about 25 million at the last estimate. The cost of Medicaid to some states, such as Massachusetts, is rising each year by about twice the rate of inflation. And since Medicaid is a much heavier burden, proportionately, for the states, it is from them — rather than from the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare — that demands for reform are heard.

The most controversial of these demands is, precisely, that some control should be kept on the range of medical services open to the poor. Now that the poor consult their doctors even more often than the rich, and blacks consult as often as whites (a leap in surgery visits of 12 per cent in seven years), Medicaid recipients should be encouraged to see their doctors less for matters that are trivial or routine.

They might be discouraged by being made to pay a portion of their doctor's bill — an idea already has been tried, not without discomfort and unfairness, for several years in Georgia.

If they make a visit and are sent for tests, state administrators would prefer to see these tests confined to certain reputable laboratires where costs are restricted. And if, eventually, the patient chooses surgery, he should be sent to the cheapest accredited hospital.

A RESTRICTED service of this sort was tried last year in New York City, where almost 2 million people are eligible for Medicaid. Municipal officials recommended that the poor should go to one laboratory in particular which was cheaper and offered simpler services. But the laboratory rivals, joined by HEW, protested that this went against the Medicaid patient's freedom of choice and the plan was dropped.

Notably, it was not the patients who complained. The "choice" in Medicaid has always tended to be more what doctors want to offer than what patients expect to receive. And it is frequently not, even now, a fair choice.

A study published in July by the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore shows Medicaid patients entering hospital for surgery are far more likely to be treated by trainee surgeons than other patients are. Only the cost is the same.

Feel helpless? You are not alone

by MELVIN MADDOCKS

If one had to nohinate the prevalent feeling today — the modern feeling — the guess, alas, might be helplessness.

Average person gets up in the morning feeling helpless — just scanning the headlines of his newspaper. Wars, shortages, pollution, everything he reads about finally touches his life, and yet what can he do about it?

Average person climbs into his automobile, the mot powerful, the most sophisticated land vehicle in history, and sits, helplessly, in a traffic jam.

WHEN HE FINALLY gets to work, average person is, for eight hours, the member of a megacorporation as often as not. But the awesome size and scope of the company only seem to make him feel small and expendable and well, helpless.

After hours, average person claims more freedom in his private relationships than his mother and father would have dreamed of. The policy of no strings is perfectly splendid when he is the one who wants to let go, but how does he feel when he is the one who wants to hang on? Helpless.

Self-improvement books proliferate on how to get power and use it. From the boardroom to the bedroom, life is explained as a power game. Yet average person is also constantly told how little effective power anybody has, right up to the Kremlin, the Vaican, or the White House.

We are all, it appears, the pawns of history — and worse. For on the philosophical level average person is given the popular non-choice of assuming that man is a puppet of behavior modification, jerked around by rewards and punishments, or the victim of his genes, predestined from birth.

HUMAN BEINGS have always felt their limits, but have people ever felt so helpless as they do in this most powerful of centuries?

The ways people fight helplessness is a revealing indicator. In the '60s the metaphor was guerrilla warfare. A small but militant underground proposed to practice counterinsurgency against a specific enemy — the System. Sabotage, infiltration — these were the operative terms. A shove at just the right place and time, and the dinosaur-Establishment, musclebound by its own power, would topple from dead weight. So went the plot.

In the '70s one tends to practice anti-helplessness in the solitary sense — as a gesture, even a kind of practical joke. One does what one does, not to overcome the world but to break up its rhythm, to make a little space for oneself: to be human. When an anti-helplessness rebel, '70s-style, climbed the World Trade Building, he made the front pages, pushing aside for a day the headlines of helplessness. But mostly these gestures make the bottom of a back page, if that.

Like the story of Brian O'Brien of Wilton, Connecticut, who ran the 300 miles to Freeport, Maine — four hours a day for two weeks — to prove that a man on foot could obtain a pair of corduroy pants and a tattersall shirt from the L. L. Bean mail order catalog faster than the post office would deliver them. He arrived in Freeport one day after his order had arrived in Wilton, and everybody from postmasters down to the Bean computer cried: "See?" But Brian O'Brien saw too what he had really proved: that average person was not helpless.

JOGGING, IN FACT, is the metaphor of anti-helplessness in the '70s. Jogging, home-gardening — all the small, manageable activities that begin with the declarative statement: "I do not depend . . ." On machines. On other people.

Such gestures are private. One no longer attempts to fight helplessness by seizing power. For one no longer trusts oneself with power, any more than anybody else.

We seem to be going back to a primer stage, starting all over again, far from the political centers of power, far too from the computer buttons. Every man his own slightly ironic populist.

It's not enough. But it may be a beginning — this anti-helplessness that proceeds, one jogging step at a time.

Festival of Activities This Weekend

Would you like to learn judo? Or jazz dancing, or painting? Or just watch someone else do one of these activities? You can catch an entire festival of activities and crafts this weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 23-25 on the mall. Park Districts from Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Des Plaines, River Trails Park District and the Northwest Suburban Association have coordinated a preview of more than 50 different activities offered through area park districts. In addition to continuous presentations and demonstrations, craft and art exhibits will be set up with hobbyists actually working on projects.

There will be something entertaining for everyone! Check this list: Boxing, plants for gardeners, tumbling and baton twirling.

Clowns and magicians will stroll the mall performing tricks for your entertainment. All demonstrations will be available through an area park district.

STARTS MONDAY. The Suburban Aquarist Society, which meets regularly in Mount Prospect, will open their annual exhibit and sale on the mall. Joining members will be Pet World and Montgomery Ward of Randhurst. Highlight of the show, which runs through Sunday, October 2, will be the fish and accessories auction at 1 p.m. closing day.

"FOR BEAUTY FULL WOMEN ONLY," Thursday, September 22, at 1:00 p.m., Carson Pirie Scott & Co. will present a full-scale runway presentation of fashions, sizes 14½ to 22½ with larger models, in larger fashions, appealing to the full-figured woman's interest in style and fashion.

A complete collection of looks for Fall, in a full range of sizes include daytime dressing, from classic and casual sportswear, to evening looks, with dresses and coordinated separates.

Reservations are not necessary, and free admission includes a "make your own ice cream sundae" buffet.

U.S. Steel's South Works facing an uncertain future seem to prove that foreign steel companies are dumping steel on the American market, at little or no profit, just to keep their mills running.

"We're not afraid of imports, but we can't compete with steel that comes in from abroad priced below the cost of production. They (foreign nations) are literally shipping their unemployment to this country," Cornell says.

Added to South Works' woes is the fact that nearly $1 million a month reportedly must be paid in Cook County property taxes. And though it claims to have invested more than $60 million on pollution control equipment over the last 10 years, South Works will be required to do still more.

New furnaces and processing equipment were installed in the past two decades in an effort to modernize production, he says. "The plant may have been here 100 years, but except for a few of the buildings, nothing you'll find in the yard today is 100 years old.

"It's just been sad to see the slowdown around here," Cornell says. But the problem is not exclusively U.S. Steel's, or South Works'.

The U.S. this year will import more foreign steel than the total output of this country's number two producer, Bethlehem Steel Corp.

In a no frills office at the United Steel Workers of America Local 65, Cass Tomasik sits and ponders the closing of South Works.

"The talk about the closing naturally has everybody concerned. A lot of the younger workers think it simply can't happen.

"But my personal opinion is that, in a free enterprise economy, corporations are profit-oriented and the possibility of a plant closing always exists. We never can dismiss it completely. It may happen. I hope not, but it may."

His words transcend the specifics of South Works' difficulties. They could apply to any company anywhere.

"OF COURSE, the South Works plant is South Chicago for all practical purposes. Under normal conditions, the work force there will be 11,000 employes at a payroll of $3 million plus per week. If South Works were to close, a lot of other businesses would go down the drain too. There's no doubt about it," says Tomasik, a 28-year veteran of South Works and present chairman of the union local's grievance committee.

One possible relocation may be to a $4.5 billion plant U.S. Steel is planning at Conneaut, Ohio, on Lake Erie in the northeast corner of the state. Like South Works, the Conneaut plant is planned to be an "integrated" mill capable of start to finish steel making. And there is speculation that it is the company's intention to replace the aged South Works with the modern Ohio plant.

"Some of the facilities at South Works are old, like the mill itself. But some are new and very efficient," Tomasik says. "If more money were spent, more automation, it would make production more efficient."

More money, or less foreign steel? A new plant, or a relaxation of pollution standards industry-wide? It is difficult to know where the answer lies for South Works.

"Layoffs are not a brand new issue. We have encountered them off and on over the last 15 years, and there have been extended layoffs since the beginning of 1975. The best way to describe it might be just touch and go," Tomasik says.

Molten iron still pours from giant ladles.

Kravec gets shutout as Sox trim As

by JEFF NORDLUND

Ken Kravec wouldn't have any part of those jokes that he had just shut out the Oakland "Triple-As" 8-0 at Comiskey Park Monday night.

To the 26-year-old left hander, his four-hit distance performance against the hapless As was as important as any other shutout, a rare commodity among Sox pitchers this season

"I was in Triple-A ball earlier this year, and this is different," Kravec said, now having taken part in two of the Sox's three shutouts this year. "The teams up here are all big league and they can beat you.

"I'VE LOST SHUTOUTS in the late innings before when I just threw fastballs to try and get everyone out quickly," he said. "This time I didn't want that to happen.

Mixing his pitches as well as he has all season, Kravec faced trouble only twice in raising his record to 9-8. In the third inning, he walked two batters and gave up a single to load the bases before fanning clean-up hitter Mike Jorgensen for the third out.

In the ninth, Kravec surrendered a leadoff double to deep center by Mitchell Page before stranding him there. He fanned Jorgensen and retired Jim Tyrone and Manny Sanguillen on infield outs to end the game.

While Kravec was keeping the no-name As scoreless, Sox hitters bombarded starter and loser Vida Blue, 14-18, for six runs in the first five innings. They scored against twice off reliever Joe Coleman when he took over for Blue in the sixth

THE AS, ONCE baseball's best team, now possess the third worst record in the American League, (58-90), better only than expansion teams Seattle and Toronto.

Blue was the only reminder of those World Championship days in Oakland's lineup Monday, and his record and 3.92 earned run average were indications as to how things have gone for the As lately.

"My fast ball was my best pitch tonight," Kravec said. "I had a little trouble walking a few batters when I over-threw the ball. I do that when I get behind. I try and throw too hard.

"I tried not to go to the breaking ball too early. I've got a good curve ball, but if I show it too early, the hitters will 'sit on it.' I've got to set it up with the fast balls "

Kravec struck out eight and walked four. Earlier this year against Blue and the As, Kravec threw seven innings in a ball game the Sox eventually won 2-0. The only other Sox shutout was turned in by Wilbur Wood.

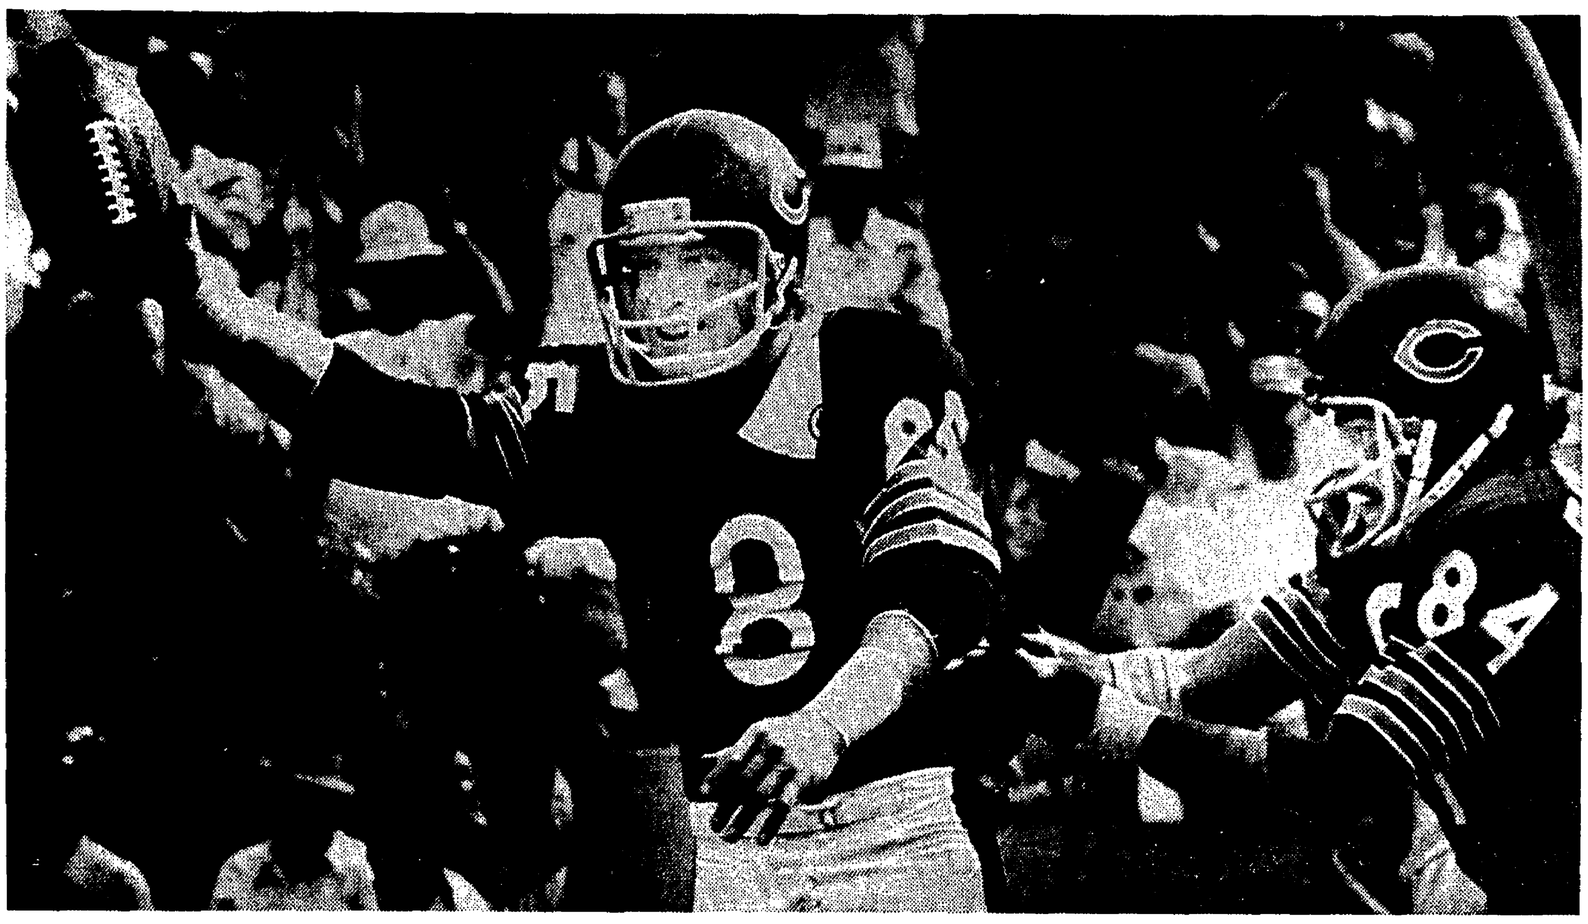
Wayne Nordhagen drove in the first and eventual winning run in the second when his infield single brought home Lamar Johnson. In the fourth, Don Kessinger's infield groundout drove in Chet Lemon with the Sox' second tally.

IN THE FIFTH, aided by an error by Blue, the Sox scored four times. Johnson brought home leadoff man Bob Coluccio and Jorge Orta with a triple and then scored himself on Lemon's sacrifice fly. Eric Soderholm followed with his 23rd home run of the season.

Orta doubled in Brian Downing and Coluccio in the sixth to end the Sox' scoring.

SOX SHORTS — Oscar Gamble has blasted 14 homers in Comiskey Park this season and needs only one more to tie the White Sox club record for lefthanded hitters set by Larry Doby. Dick Allen holds the record for a righthanded batter in Comiskey Park with 37 in 1972 . . .

Don Kessinger's six-game hitting streak came to an end Monday after the newly-acquired White Sox had his .421 in his previous 19 at bats . . . Steve Stone, 14-10, will throw for the White Sox tonight against the A's Rick Langford, 8-17.



THIS IS THE BALL. A happy Steve Schubert of the Bears displays the ball he had just run back 70 yards for a touchdown on a punt return Sunday in a 30-20 Chicago victory. Brian Baschnagel has Schubert firmly in hand prior to offering his congratulations.

Unbeaten Bears

After 30-20 win over Detroit, the Bears' many heroes gathered to meet press and glory in early success

by BOB GALLAS

The Detroit Lions kept hammering away at the right side of the Bears' defensive line Saturday, on their way to an 80-yard touchdown drive on the opening series and right linebacker Waymond Bryant came back to the huddle with a simple plea.

"I didn't have too much to say, except 'help,' " said Bryant, who had trouble on that first series but got little sympathy from his teammates, who were having problems of their own.

"You're on your own," said defensive captain Doug Buffone, who had his hands full trying to adjust to an offense the Bears had not expected to see.

DETROIT CAME out in a two tight end, two wide receiver formation that left only one running back in the backfield, a formation they had not used in the preseason and only a few times last year. That left coach Jack Pardee in a challenging situation — completely realign the Bears' defensive game plan while the game was in progress.

"It was one of the most exciting games for me as a coach," said Pardee, who was grateful to come away with a 30-20 win against a tough interdivisional foe. "The entire (defensive) game plan we had prepared was no good. I had to come up with a new one.

But Pardee said Detroit's variations on offense may have been a blessing in disguise.

"I'm kind of glad they ran it because the other formations they had been running looked better," Pardee said, referring to scouting films of earlier Lion games the Bears had viewed in preparation for the game. "When they have only one back in the backfield, it restricts their passing."

BRYANT, NICKNAMED "Way Out" by his teammates, said there was little panic among the defense even though the Lions initially were running at will.

"One thing I've enjoyed about the Bears and something Doug (Buffone) has helped me with is to stay relaxed," said Bryant. "I got back to the huddle and they just said, "Well, Way Out, you'll just have to tighten your chin strap."

Special team play has always been an important part of the Bears' preparation and it paid off again Sunday when Steve Schubert hauled in a Detroit punt and raced up the sidelines 70 yards for a touchdown.

"As Jack preaches, special teams will win or help win two or three games a year," said Schubert, a tough wide receiver who primarily works special team assignments. "Some players in the NFL don't care to play special teams. I do. It's a pleasure for me to go down on a punt with two guys on me and get by them."

Not necessarily known for his speed but rather for a gutsy style of play, Schubert was asked if Pardee was impressed by his breakaway speed on the punt return that enabled him to outrace the likes of Lions' speedster Ray Jarvis.

"I think Jack was as surprised as I was. I saw it on the news and didn't believe it myself," Schubert said with a laugh. "I thought they speeded up the film."

Schubert, a fourth year pro out of the University of Massachusetts, joined the Bears as a free agent on Oct. 1, 1975 and didn't think he'd make the team so he spent the entire season living in a motel. He earned the reputation for being a hard-nosed ballplayer the hard way.

His nose leans decidedly to the left side of his face after being broken five times. "The last time I broke it, they couldn't even tell if it was broken."

Schubert said he wasn't sure of how fast he is not but said he did run a 4.55-second 40-yard dash two years ago. I'm probably slower now but I'm a lot faster running away from someone."

Pardee said he wasn't overly pleased with the defense, which allowed 20 points in Sunday's home opener, thought he did like the six defensive sacks.

"I don't like it because giving up that many points can become habit forming," said the Bears' coach. "And when a team gains 360 yards on you, there's room for improvement."

It was the draw play that was the big offensive weapon for the Bears Sunday as Walter Payton gained 73 yards on one draw and had large gains on two others. This week the Bears will be faced with containing the draw as they face the Cardinals in St. Louis, a team which can run the draw well out of any formation.

"The Cards are an entirely different team (from the Lions) that gives us different problems both offensively and defensively," Pardee said.

Though Pardee was surprised by the Detroit change of game plan he was complimented for the integrity which keeps him from slipping spies into opponents' practices.

"It's pretty hard getting into the Silverdome (Detroit's indoor stadium) anyway," he said. "And I guess I'm too dumb to cheat."

But smart enough to win.

Harris now 20th leading rusher; Steelers win 27-0

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Franco Harris ran for 100 yards and two touchdowns Monday night to become the National Football League's 20th leading all-time rusher and led the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 27-0 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in their nationally-televised season opener.

Terry Bradshaw passed 15 yards to John Stallworth for another Steeler TD, while Roy Gerela added field goals of 49 and 47 yards and three extra points.

Harris' rushing performance, in 27 carries, gave him 5,233 career yards, moving him in front of Lenny Moore of Baltimore for 20th place on the all-time rushing list. Harris, a six-year veteran, also moved into a tie with Jim Taylor of Green Bay for fourth place on the all-time list of most 100-yard games in a career, with 26.

HARRIS' TOUCHDOWN runs of 14 and seven yards also made him the Steelers' third all-time leading scorer with 282 points on 47 touchdowns.

Gerela tied his own personal Steeler record for his longest field goal with his 49-yard kick in the second quarter. However, Gerela's all-time personal career record is a 50-yarder he kicked as a Houston Oiler, and the Steelers' longest field goal ever was a 51-yarder by Lou Michaels.

Cornerback Jimmy Allen set up two of the Steelers' touchdowns with interceptions. His interception of a Plunkett pass on the Steeler 38 that came 37 seconds into the second quarter resulted 10 plays later with Pittsburgh's first TD on Harris' 14-yard burst off-tackle.

MIDWAY THROUGH the final quarter Allen picked off another Plunkett pass on the San Francisco 13 and returned it to the 6. Three plays later, Bradshaw, who had been sacked for a 10-yard loss on the second play from scrimmage, hit Stallworth with his 15-yard scoring pass.

Harris' other TD with 4:25 gone in the final quarter capped a seven-play, 62-yard drive. Gerela kicked his 47-yarder for the only scoring in the third quarter.

The Steelers continued their success Monday night home games, never having lost a game. The Steeler defense also stretched to 30 straight regular season games their record of not giving up a touchdown in the first period.

Cubs, broken dreams go to Philly

PHILADELPHIA–This was supposed to be the big showdown, the head-to-head confrontation between the bad Philadelphia Phillies and the good-guy Cubs.

This three-game series in the City of Brotherly Love was going to decide the National League East race with the winner hooking up in a battle royal for the NL pennant.

The cubs were going to be right in the thick of it.

THAT WAS, it seems, a long time ago. Now the Cubs have been eliminated mathematically as well as psychologically while the Phillies have all but wrapped up the title.

The Cubs are 15½ games out of first place where once they were 8½ in front. The season has turned around for the Wrigleys, turned around in three short, shocking months of frustration, accusation, injuries and innuendo.

While the Phillies seized opportunity, the Cubs floundered. The Phils made hay and the Cubs made excuses.

ALL THAT IS behind them now. Still the Cubs can aim at goals that, in all candor, seemed unreachable in spring training. They can try to hold onto a .500 season. Going into tonight's game at Veterans Stadium, the Cubs, record is 78-72.

No Cub team has exceeded the break-even mark sice 1972 when Whitey Lockman took over from manager Leo Durocher at mid-season and the Cubs finished in second place, 15 games over .500.

Last year the Cubs were 75-87 and finished fourth in the NL East while Philadelphia won the title. Pre-season prognostications placed the Cubs anywhere from fourth to sixth in 1977, but a quick start from the gate propelled the team into first place, where they stayed until Aug. 5.

New Cub manager Herman Franks seemed surprised by the sudden improvement of his team, but he tried to hide his amazement behind a gruff exterior. When the team began to slip, Franks simply pointed to the early-season predictions as if to say, "What'd you expect?"

The three games in Philadelphia close out the road trip before the Cubs return home for three-game sets with the Pirates and Phillies. The season ends with a weekend series in Pittsburgh.

Bears may have to pay for failure of Cubs and Sox

Art Mugalian

Byline report

The seasons change gradually in Chicago. The leaves turn colors a little bit at a time, a tree at a time. The chill in the air begins to stick you with needles of pain on a Friday night in September, but the next day the sun shines warm and bright and you forget all about autumn.

Then, all at once, summer is over, the days are shorter than the law should allow. The change of the seasons, at first almost imperceptible, is overwhelming.

Autumn has arrived.

THE CUBS AND the White Sox have teased us again, taunting us with their summer exploits only to let us down amid the first shades of autumn. Breathlessly, through the long, hot days of mid-summer, the two Chicago baseball teams staged a duel for the very hearts of the city's fans.

First one, then the other, then both at the same time, the Cubs and Sox reached out with a promise of more to come, with a promise of baseball in October. It is a promise that has never meant much in Chicago.

Promises, promises. No one ever lived on promises, they say. But Chicago baseball fans thrive on the future. They pin their hopes on next year and the year after that. They expect far less than they demand.

AND THEY DEMAND very little. Winning has never come cheaply in Chicago. As a matter of fact, it rarely has come at all in the past three decades. The fans know better than to insist on pennants, titles and championships. They have conditioned themselves to survive on less.

The disappointment of defeat — ultimate and crushing — is shrugged off by Cubs and Sox baseball fans who feel it is their lot in life. They have no reason to believe winning is their due.

SECOND PLACE is their domain. Also-ran is their designation. Victory is out of the question.

With the changing of the seasons comes the inevitable shift from baseball to football as the city's diehards face the agonizing fact of life they face every year at this time. The World Series will be played in New York again, or Los Angeles or Cincinnati.

But never in Chicago.

Cubs and Sox fans forget their differences, patch up their feuds and join forces to cheer for the Bears. More than 50,000 victory-starved loonies jam into Soldier Field despite the weather forecast, despite the forecast that might shunt the Bears to mediocrity.

This is football, not baseball, and the fans expect something more than excitement. They expect something more than flashing, bone-jarring violence on a Sunday afternoon.

THEY EXPECT victory. And they demand it.

Football is a test of communal manhood. For a city, the game is everything. Each Sunday, the fans let their good name ride on the fortunes of the football team.

Victory is not just a matter of pride. It is a matter of self-respect.

Everything happens so fast. The game bursts open in an explosion of activity. The enemy team marches, almost unchallenged, into the Bears' end zone and the boos begin for the first time. The Bears surrender the ball without a fight and the boos increase in depth and intensity.

Victory seems out of reach.

THE FOOTBALL season is a long hard grind for the players — 14 weeks and maybe more of bruises and psychic wounds that are always nearly healed. But for the fans, the season is never so long. It flashes by in a jumble of punt returns and quarterback sacks and major penalties.

So it is easy to explain the booing. It is easy to understand it. It might even be easy to forgive it.

Sure, this may be the first game of the season, the first few minutes of the first game. But time already is running out and these fans have been through so much.

Chicago's fans might welcome the arrival of autumn, more so this autumn of 1977 than ever before. They might be clutching at this autumn more fervently than they know.

The summer has taken its toll.

by JEFF NORDLUND

Ken Kravec wouldn't have any part of those jokes that he had just shut out the Oakland "Triple-As" 8-0 at Comiskey Park Monday night.

To the 26-year-old left hander, his four-hit distance performance against the hapless As was as important as any other shutout, a rare commodity among Sox pitchers this season

"I was in Triple-A ball earlier this year, and this is different," Kravec said, now having taken part in two of the Sox's three shutouts this year. "The teams up here are all big league and they can beat you.

"I'VE LOST SHUTOUTS in the late innings before when I just threw fastballs to try and get everyone out quickly," he said. "This time I didn't want that to happen.

Mixing his pitches as well as he has all season, Kravec faced trouble only twice in raising his record to 9-8. In the third inning, he walked two batters and gave up a single to load the bases before fanning clean-up hitter Mike Jorgensen for the third out.

In the ninth, Kravec surrendered a leadoff double to deep center by Mitchell Page before stranding him there. He fanned Jorgensen and retired Jim Tyrone and Manny Sanguillen on infield outs to end the game.

While Kravec was keeping the no-name As scoreless, Sox hitters bombarded starter and loser Vida Blue, 14-18, for six runs in the first five innings. They scored against twice off reliever Joe Coleman when he took over for Blue in the sixth

THE AS, ONCE baseball's best team, now possess the third worst record in the American League, (58-90), better only than expansion teams Seattle and Toronto.

Blue was the only reminder of those World Championship days in Oakland's lineup Monday, and his record and 3.92 earned run average were indications as to how things have gone for the As lately.

"My fast ball was my best pitch tonight," Kravec said. "I had a little trouble walking a few batters when I over-threw the ball. I do that when I get behind. I try and throw too hard.

"I tried not to go to the breaking ball too early. I've got a good curve ball, but if I show it too early, the hitters will 'sit on it.' I've got to set it up with the fast balls "

Kravec struck out eight and walked four. Earlier this year against Blue and the As, Kravec threw seven innings in a ball game the Sox eventually won 2-0. The only other Sox shutout was turned in by Wilbur Wood.

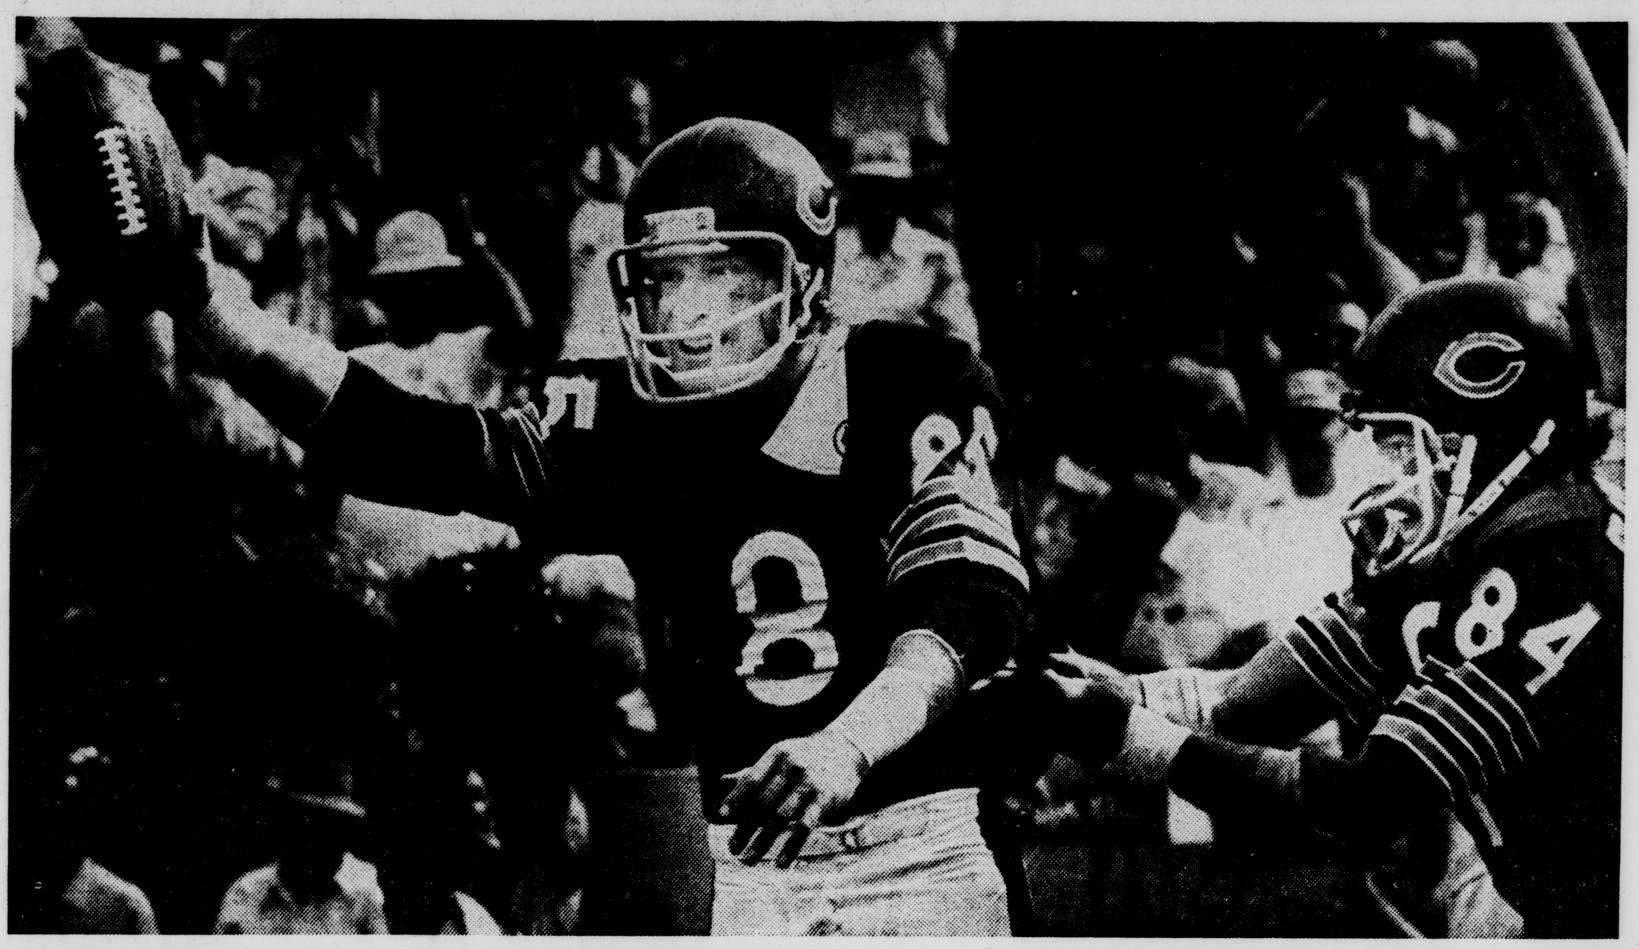
Wayne Nordhagen drove in the first and eventual winning run in the second when his infield single brought home Lamar Johnson. In the fourth, Don Kessinger's infield groundout drove in Chet Lemon with the Sox' second tally.

IN THE FIFTH, aided by an error by Blue, the Sox scored four times. Johnson brought home leadoff man Bob Coluccio and Jorge Orta with a triple and then scored himself on Lemon's sacrifice fly. Eric Soderholm followed with his 23rd home run of the season.

Orta doubled in Brian Downing and Coluccio in the sixth to end the Sox' scoring.

SOX SHORTS — Oscar Gamble has blasted 14 homers in Comiskey Park this season and needs only one more to tie the White Sox club record for lefthanded hitters set by Larry Doby. Dick Allen holds the record for a righthanded batter in Comiskey Park with 37 in 1972 . . .

Don Kessinger's six-game hitting streak came to an end Monday after the newly-acquired White Sox had his .421 in his previous 19 at bats . . . Steve Stone, 14-10, will throw for the White Sox tonight against the A's Rick Langford, 8-17.



THIS IS THE BALL. A happy Steve Schubert of the Bears displays the ball he had just run back 70 yards for a touchdown on a punt return Sunday in a 30-20 Chicago victory. Brian Baschnagel has Schubert firmly in hand prior to offering his congratulations.

Unbeaten Bears

After 30-20 win over Detroit, the Bears' many heroes gathered to meet press and glory in early success

by BOB GALLAS

The Detroit Lions kept hammering away at the right side of the Bears' defensive line Saturday, on their way to an 80-yard touchdown drive on the opening series and right linebacker Waymond Bryant came back to the huddle with a simple plea.

"I didn't have too much to say, except 'help,' " said Bryant, who had trouble on that first series but got little sympathy from his teammates, who were having problems of their own.

"You're on your own," said defensive captain Doug Buffone, who had his hands full trying to adjust to an offense the Bears had not expected to see.

DETROIT CAME out in a two tight end, two wide receiver formation that left only one running back in the backfield, a formation they had not used in the preseason and only a few times last year. That left coach Jack Pardee in a challenging situation — completely realign the Bears' defensive game plan while the game was in progress.

"It was one of the most exciting games for me as a coach," said Pardee, who was grateful to come away with a 30-20 win against a tough interdivisional foe. "The entire (defensive) game plan we had prepared was no good. I had to come up with a new one.

But Pardee said Detroit's variations on offense may have been a blessing in disguise.

"I'm kind of glad they ran it because the other formations they had been running looked better," Pardee said, referring to scouting films of earlier Lion games the Bears had viewed in preparation for the game. "When they have only one back in the backfield, it restricts their passing."

BRYANT, NICKNAMED "Way Out" by his teammates, said there was little panic among the defense even though the Lions initially were running at will.

"One thing I've enjoyed about the Bears and something Doug (Buffone) has helped me with is to stay relaxed," said Bryant. "I got back to the huddle and they just said, "Well, Way Out, you'll just have to tighten your chin strap."

Special team play has always been an important part of the Bears' preparation and it paid off again Sunday when Steve Schubert hauled in a Detroit punt and raced up the sidelines 70 yards for a touchdown.

"As Jack preaches, special teams will win or help win two or three games a year," said Schubert, a tough wide receiver who primarily works special team assignments. "Some players in the NFL don't care to play special teams. I do. It's a pleasure for me to go down on a punt with two guys on me and get by them."

Not necessarily known for his speed but rather for a gutsy style of play, Schubert was asked if Pardee was impressed by his breakaway speed on the punt return that enabled him to outrace the likes of Lions' speedster Ray Jarvis.

"I think Jack was as surprised as I was. I saw it on the news and didn't believe it myself," Schubert said with a laugh. "I thought they speeded up the film."

Schubert, a fourth year pro out of the University of Massachusetts, joined the Bears as a free agent on Oct. 1, 1975 and didn't think he'd make the team so he spent the entire season living in a motel. He earned the reputation for being a hard-nosed ballplayer the hard way.

His nose leans decidedly to the left side of his face after being broken five times. "The last time I broke it, they couldn't even tell if it was broken."

Schubert said he wasn't sure of how fast he is not but said he did run a 4.55-second 40-yard dash two years ago. I'm probably slower now but I'm a lot faster running away from someone."

Pardee said he wasn't overly pleased with the defense, which allowed 20 points in Sunday's home opener, thought he did like the six defensive sacks.

"I don't like it because giving up that many points can become habit forming," said the Bears' coach. "And when a team gains 360 yards on you, there's room for improvement."

It was the draw play that was the big offensive weapon for the Bears Sunday as Walter Payton gained 73 yards on one draw and had large gains on two others. This week the Bears will be faced with containing the draw as they face the Cardinals in St. Louis, a team which can run the draw well out of any formation.

"The Cards are an entirely different team (from the Lions) that gives us different problems both offensively and defensively," Pardee said.

Though Pardee was surprised by the Detroit change of game plan he was complimented for the integrity which keeps him from slipping spies into opponents' practices.

"It's pretty hard getting into the Silverdome (Detroit's indoor stadium) anyway," he said. "And I guess I'm too dumb to cheat."

But smart enough to win.

Harris now 20th leading rusher; Steelers win 27-0

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Franco Harris ran for 100 yards and two touchdowns Monday night to become the National Football League's 20th leading all-time rusher and led the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 27-0 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in their nationally-televised season opener.

Terry Bradshaw passed 15 yards to John Stallworth for another Steeler TD, while Roy Gerela added field goals of 49 and 47 yards and three extra points.

Harris' rushing performance, in 27 carries, gave him 5,233 career yards, moving him in front of Lenny Moore of Baltimore for 20th place on the all-time rushing list. Harris, a six-year veteran, also moved into a tie with Jim Taylor of Green Bay for fourth place on the all-time list of most 100-yard games in a career, with 26.

HARRIS' TOUCHDOWN runs of 14 and seven yards also made him the Steelers' third all-time leading scorer with 282 points on 47 touchdowns.

Gerela tied his own personal Steeler record for his longest field goal with his 49-yard kick in the second quarter. However, Gerela's all-time personal career record is a 50-yarder he kicked as a Houston Oiler, and the Steelers' longest field goal ever was a 51-yarder by Lou Michaels.

Cornerback Jimmy Allen set up two of the Steelers' touchdowns with interceptions. His interception of a Plunkett pass on the Steeler 38 that came 37 seconds into the second quarter resulted 10 plays later with Pittsburgh's first TD on Harris' 14-yard burst off-tackle.

MIDWAY THROUGH the final quarter Allen picked off another Plunkett pass on the San Francisco 13 and returned it to the 6. Three plays later, Bradshaw, who had been sacked for a 10-yard loss on the second play from scrimmage, hit Stallworth with his 15-yard scoring pass.

Harris' other TD with 4:25 gone in the final quarter capped a seven-play, 62-yard drive. erala kicked his 47-yarder for the only scoring in the third quarter.

The Steelers continued their success Monday night home games, never having lost a game. The Steeler defense also stretched to 30 straight regular season games their record of not giving up a touchdown in the first period.

Cubs, broken dreams go to Philly

PHILADELPHIA–This was supposed to be the big showdown, the head-to-head confrontation between the bad Philadelphia Phillies and the good-guy Cubs.

This three-game series in the City of Brotherly Love was going to decide the National League East race with the winner hooking up in a battle royal for the NL pennant.

The cubs were going to be right in the thick of it.

THAT WAS, it seems, a long time ago. Now the Cubs have been eliminated mathematically as well as psychologically while the Phillies have all but wrapped up the title.

The Cubs are 15½ games out of first place where once they were 8½ in front. The season has turned around for the Wrigleys, turned around in three short, shocking months of frustration, accusation, injuries and innuendo.

While the Phillies seized opportunity, the Cubs floundered. The Phils made hay and the Cubs made excuses.

ALL THAT IS behind them now. Still the Cubs can aim at goals that, in all candor, seemed unreachable in spring training. They can try to hold onto a .500 season. Going into tonight's game at Veterans Stadium, the Cubs, record is 78-72.

No Cub team has exceeded the break-even mark sice 1972 when Whitey Lockman took over from manager Leo Durocher at mid-season and the Cubs finished in second place, 15 games over .500.

Last year the Cubs were 75-87 and finished fourth in the NL East while Philadelphia won the title, Pre-season prognostications placed the Cubs anywhere from fourth to sixth in 1977, but a quick start from the gate propelled the team into first place, where they stayed until Aug. 5.

New Cub manager Herman Franks seemed surprised by the sudden improvement of his team, but he tried to hide his amazement behind a gruff exterior. When the team began to slip, Franks simply pointed to the early-season predictions as if to say, "What'd you expect?"

The three games in Philadelphia close out the road trip before the Cubs return home for three-game sets with the Pirates and Phillies. The season ends with a weekend series in Pittsburgh.

Bears may have to pay for failure of Cubs and Sox

Byline report

The seasons change gradually in Chicago. The leaves turn colors a little bit at a time, a tree at a time. The chill in the air begins to stick you with needles of pain on a Friday night in September, but the next day the sun shines warm and bright and you forget all about autumn.

Then, all at once, summer is over, the days are shorter than the law should allow. The change of the seasons, at first almost imperceptible, is overwhelming.

Autumn has arrived.

THE CUBS AND the White Sox have teased us again, taunting us with their summer exploits only to let us down amid the first shades of autumn. Breathlessly, through the long, hot days of mid-summer, the two Chicago baseball teams staged a duel for the very hearts of the city's fans.

First one, then the other, then both at the same time, the Cubs and Sox reached out with a promise of more to come, with a promise of baseball in October. It is a promise that has never meant much in Chicago.

Promises, promises. No one ever lived on promises, they say. But Chicago baseball fans thrive on the future. They pin their hopes on next year and the year after that. They expect far less than they demand.

AND THEY DEMAND very little. Winning has never come cheaply in Chicago. As a matter of fact, it rarely has come at all in the past three decades. The fans know better than to insist on pennants, titles and championships. They have conditioned themselves to survive on less.

The disappointment of defeat — ultimate and crushing — is shrugged off by Cubs and Sox baseball fans who feel it is their lot in life. They have no reason to believe winning is their due.

SECOND PLACE is their domain. Also-ran is their designation. Victory is out of the question.

With the changing of the seasons comes the inevitable shift from baseball to football as the city's diehards face the agonizing fact of life they face every year at this time. The World Series will be played in New York again, or Los Angeles or Cincinnati.

But never in Chicago.

Cubs and Sox fans forget their differences, patch up their feuds and join forces to cheer for the Bears. More than 50,000 victory-starved loonies jam into Soldier Field despite the weather forecast, despite the forecast that might shunt the Bears to mediocrity.

Homer keeps Red Sox in running

From Daily Herald wire services

Carlton Fisk said he hit the ball better five times in New York last week, but in Boston's cozy Fenway Park Monday night his third-inning fly was long enough to keep the Boston Red Sox in the American League East pennant race with a 6-3 victory over the front-running New York Yankees.

Fisk, who hit a pair of long outs in spacious Yankee Stadium during last Wednesday night's 2-0 loss to the Yankees, stroked a three-run homer off Ed Figueroa that gave Boston a 4-1 lead Monday night. Carl Yastrzemski sealed the victory with an eighth-inning homer and Fisk followed with a triple and scored on a single by George Scott.

"I didn't hit that ball real good," Fisk said of his 24th homer. "I had to go after it. I hit five balls farther than that in New York last week and they were all outs."

IN THAT 2-0 loss to the Yankees, Reggie Cleveland hurled his best game of the year while Figueroa struggled throughout. But Cleveland, who was beaten last Wednesday by a ninth-inning Reggie Jackson homer, had his revenge.

"The difference was, we got some runs tonight," said Cleveland. "I thought I might be running out of gas in the fifth inning, but I got (Paul) Blair to hit into a double play. Then I got back in the groove."

The victory moved the Red Sox into a second place tie with Baltimore, 3½ games behind the Yankees, but Yankee manager Billy Martin wasn't all that worried.

"I would have liked to have won both of these games here," said Martin of the once-critical two-game series. "But now I'll have to settle for a split."

RICK CERONE drove in two runs with a double and a single and rookie Jerry Garvin spaced nine hits to help the Toronto Blue Jays deal a crippling blow to Baltimore's American League East pennant chances with a 3-1 victory over the Orioles.

In one other American League contest, Ben Ogilvie's two-run single in the eighth inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 6-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians and enabled reliever Steve Foucault to earn his sixth win.

There was no action in the National League Monday night.

MSL girls enjoy successful day

by VIC NOVAK

Mid-Suburban League girl's cross-country teams enjoyed a successful Saturday. Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Fremd were the top three finishers in the eight-team, Lake Park Invitational while Rolling Meadows hosted and won its own triangular meet.

At Lake Park, Wheeling's 41 points topped Hoffman's 59 and Fremd's 98. Strong depth keyed the Wheeling win as four Wildcat girls placed among the top 10 individual finishers.

They were Debbie Rathje (14:36), second; Denise Bergowicz (14:51), third, and Sharon Voglt (15:36), 10th. Teammate Julie Hendrickson finished 22nd with a time of 15:48.

However, it was Tara Leiby of Hoffman Estates who stole the show. Tara's 14:34 timing made her the meet champion.

AT ROLLING MEADOWS, the host Mustangs were the whole show themselves. Rolling Meadows' championship total of 55 points was 15 points lower than Cary Grove and 23 better than Prospect.

Julie Jacobs and Briget Geegan led the Mustang charge. A 12:51 timing earned Jacobs third while a 13:24 effort put Geegan seventh.

Other Meadows finishers were Michelle Ambrose (13:58), 12th, Sharon Bradley (15:09), 14th; Debbie Hornos (15:38), 19th; and Ellen Shull (16:02), 21st.

It's not surprising that Wheeling and Rolling Meadows did so well because each team is considered a MSL title threat.

Despite losing five of their top eight runners, including standouts Gail Miloch, Bonnie Buenzow, Chris Rathje and Donna Cazja, the Wildcats look strong again.

WHEELING COACH Jim Nagel has a lot of talent returnees Denise Bergowicz, Betsy Buenzow, Julie Hendrickson, Marsha Warden, Debbie Rathje and Sharon and Terri Voglt. Until the Lake Park meet, Bergowicz was undefeated.

Nagel acknowledges his losses were heavy, but believes Wheeling will be strong again. "We think we can repeat," he said. "It's not going to be easy like it was last year, but we think we compare with anyone on our schedule."

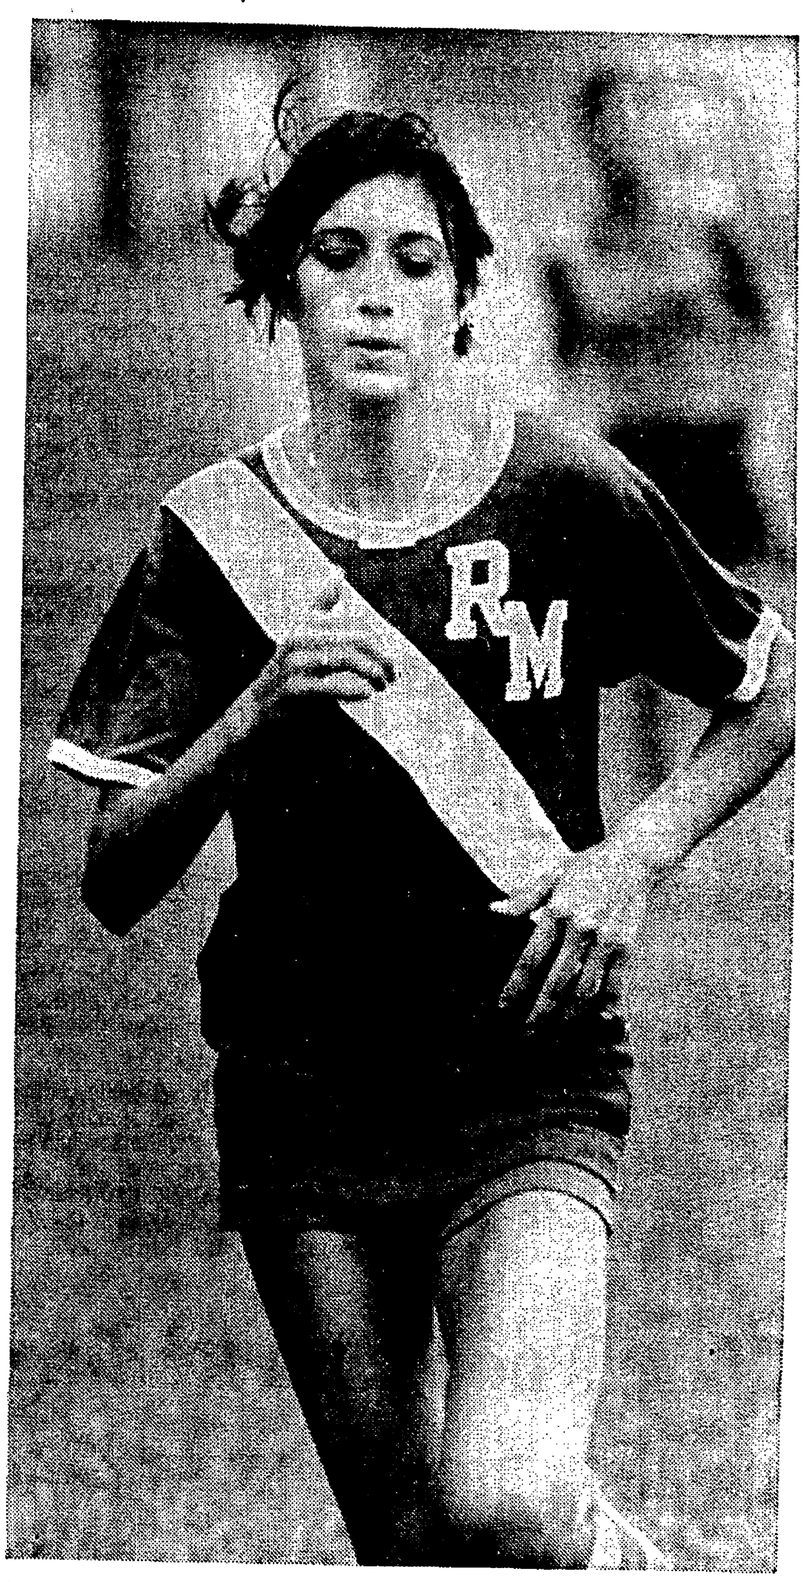
Other possible MSL title aspirants include Rolling Meadows, Hoffman Estates, Arlington, Palatine, Buffalo Grove and Hersey.

MEADOWS AND Arlington are the strongest over-all team challengers. The Mustangs already had won the girls' title at the Maine West Center Meet before last weekend's action.

Arlington has no standout individuals but shows capable depth in Becky Ivan, Debbie Ullenius, Debbie Kelly, Sue Cripe, Kathy Donnellan and Brenda Boelkens.

Individual runners put Palatine, Hoffman, Buffalo Grove and Hersey in the darkhorse class. Palatine is led by Mary Milota and Joan Kelly, the aforementioned Leiby keys Hoffman, Sharon Orphanedes tops Buffalo Grove and Margaret LaPorte is Hersey's standout.

Other Mid-Suburban League schools fielding girls cross-country teams are Conant and Prospect. League meets are run every Tuesday and Thursday at 5 p.m.



HIGH STEPPER — Julie Jacobs of Rolling Meadows strides into third place in last Saturday's Rolling Meadows girls cross country invitational. Rolling Meadows won the championship.

Michigan, Southern Cal retain 1, 2 UPI ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The University of Michigan retained its No. 1 ranking and Southern Cal was again rated No. 2 Monday, but there was a great deal of reshuffling in UPI's Top 20 teams, selected by its Board of Coaches.

Michigan received an overwhelming 27 first-place votes, compared with five for USC and four for Oklahoma. The Sooners moved from sixth to fourth in this second week of ratings, but the biggest leaps were made by Penn State, which moved from ninth to fifth, and Texas, which went from 13th to ninth.

Alabama and Notre Dame took the greatest plunges in the ratings, as they were both upset on Saturday. Notre Dame, which was the No. 1 team in the preseason balloting and dropped to fourth last week, fell to 15th as the result of Saturday's 20-13 loss to Mississippi. Alabama, which was No. 3 last week, dropped to 12th following its 31-24 loss to Nebraska.

OHIO STATE moved from fifth to third and Colorado and Florida moved into the top 10 — Colorado No. 8 and Florida No. 10. Texas Tech beat out Texas A & M for the sixth spot by just five points.

Several teams which were unranked last week moved into the top 20. They are: Nebraska, 11; Washington State, 13; Arkansas, 14; and West Virginia, 19.

Here by sections are the coaches who comprise the UPI major college football ratings board:

- East: Joe Yukica, Boston College; Carmen Cozza, Yale; Frank Burns, Rutgers; Jackie Sherrill, Pittsburgh; Frank Maloney, Syracuse; Jerry Claiborne, Maryland.
- Midwest: Jim Young, Purdue; Lee Corso, Indiana; Bill Hess, Ohio U.; Dan Devine, Notre Dame; Woody Hayes, Ohio State; John Pont, Northwestern.
- South: Bear Bryant, Alabama; Vince Dooley, Georgia; Bill Dooley, North Carolina; Doug Dickey, Florida; Jim Carlen, South Carolina; Johnny Majors, Tennessee.
- Midlands: Al Onofrio, Missouri; Tom Osborne, Nebraska; Barry Switzer, Oklahoma; Earle Bruce, Iowa State; Jim Wright, Wichita State; Bob Commings, Iowa.

Players needed for soccer team

The Des Plaines Park District still has openings for its adult men's soccer team. Any men, 18 years old and older, are urged to contact park district officials, 296-6106.

The team, a member of the Northwest Suburban Soccer League, plays its matches on Sundays and practices once a week.

Des Plaines won its first game recently, a 5-1 victory over Roselle.

Soccer team wins, 3-1

Dan Boutellier kicked in a pair of goals and George Banauch added another as Elk Grove's soccer squad ran their over-all record to 4-0 with a 3-1 triumph over St. Viator Monday.

Ken Mimnaugh and Mark Haas were credited with assists for the Grenadiers. The lone Lion tally was knocked in by John Maher.

Saturday's Futurity event to host top of juvenile crop

In the fall of every year racing fans are treated to a peek into the future as the cream of the current juvenile crop begins rising to the top via the rich futurity races offered at different points. The Arlington-Washington Futurity with an estimated gross of $200,000 is one such event.

Saturday is when Arlington starter Jim Kinnard will spring the latch for the 6½ furlong affair that is of national importance. Candy Spots, Buckpasser, Silent Screen, Shecky Greene, Honest Pleasure and Run Dusty Run are just a few Arlington-Washington Futurity victors who vaulted into the championship picture as 3-year-olds.

Possible starters in the upcoming Futurity include local talent such as C. Scott and S Berry's Charbizon, Burst, Mosby and Morrisey's Dewan Keys, Mrs. R.E. Lehmann's Jaycean, Jerry Frankel's Slap Jack, Mary Zimmerman's Silver Nitrate and Meadowbrook Farms' Spotted Charger.

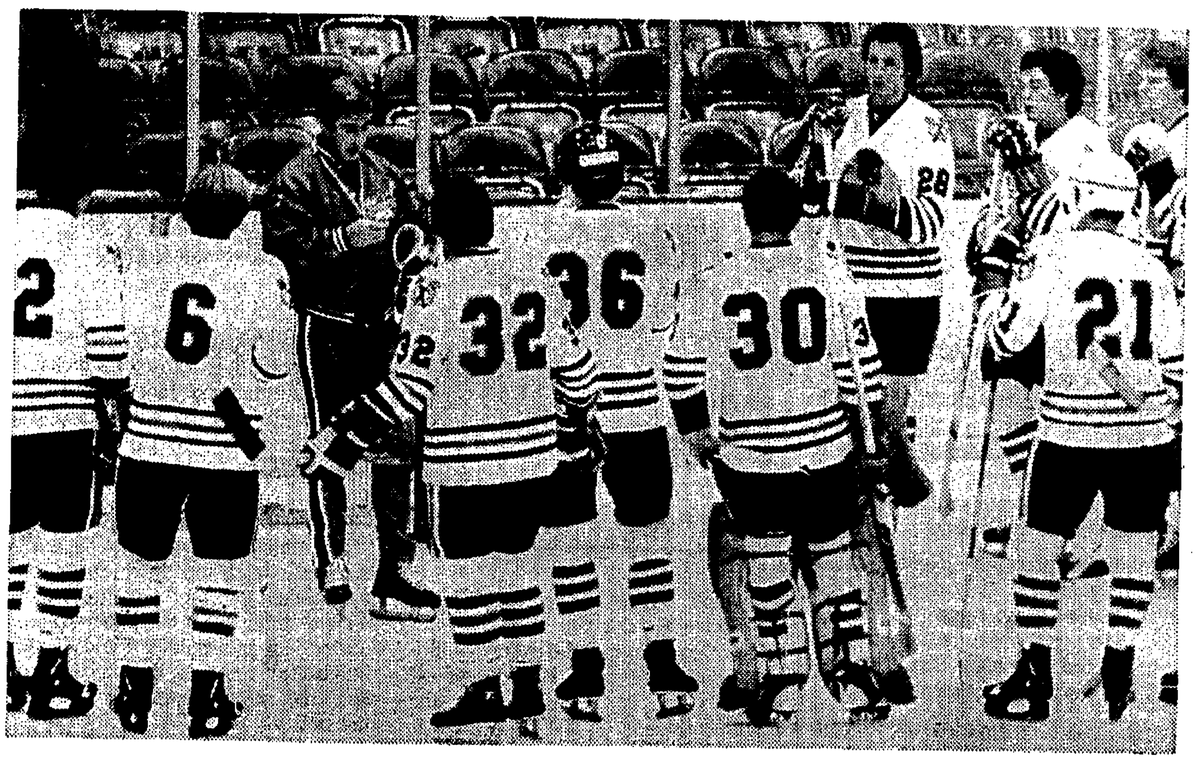
CHARBIZON captured the $20,000 added Primer Stakes here July 27. Dewan Keys, conditioned by the capable Enoch Rea, was a $170,000 purchase very early this year and thus far has registered two victories and a pair of seconds in four trips postward for earnings of $17,925. He was second to Forever Casting in the Joliet Stakes July 6 and then chased Charbizon home in the Primer.

Jaycean is an improving runner as his front-running victory in the September 6 Arch Ward Prep at Arlington proved. As of this writing, the Honey Jay colt had won three of seven starts to go along with a third-place finish.

Trainer Lou Goldine, who really enjoys "working with babies," has sent Slap Jack postward twice, and both times the speedy son of Restless Native has easily disposed of his opposition.

From the east may come Harbor View Farm's talented Affirmed. His Sept. 10 triumph in the Belmont Futurity gave the Exclusive Native colt his sixth trip to the winner's circle in seven tries and boosted his earnings to a handsome $231,707. It could be that Steve Cauthen, the sensation of the jockey world, will accompany Affirmed and trainer Laz Barrera westward since Cauthen has been aboard the juvenile in his last three appearance.

Racing continues at Arlington through Saturday, Oct. 1, with post time daily set at 2 p.m.



ICE HUDDLE. New Black Hawks General Manager and Coach Bob Pulford lectures his players during opening day of training camp at the Chicago Stadium. The Black Hawks will play their home opener Oct. 15 against Colorado.

Homer keeps Red Sox in running

From Daily Herald wire services

Carlton Fisk said he hit the ball better five times in New York last week, but in Boston's cozy Fenway Park Monday night his third-inning fly was long enough to keep the Boston Red Sox in the American League East pennant race with a 6-3 victory over the front-running New York Yankees.

Fisk, who hit a pair of long outs in spacious Yankee Stadium during last Wednesday night's 2-0 loss to the Yankees, stroked a three-run homer off Ed Figueroa that gave Boston a 4-1 lead Monday night. Carl Yastrzemski sealed the victory with an eighth-inning homer and Fisk followed with a triple and scored on a single by George Scott.

"I didn't hit that ball real good," Fisk said of his 24th homer. "I had to go after it. I hit five balls farther than that in New York last week and they were all outs."

IN THAT 2-0 loss to the Yankees, Reggie Cleveland hurled his best game of the year while Figueroa struggled throughout. But Cleveland, who was beaten last Wednesday by a ninth-inning Reggie Jackson homer, had his revenge.

"The difference was, we got some runs tonight," said Cleveland. "I thought I might be running out of gas in the fifth inning, but I got (Paul) Blair to hit into a double play. Then I got back in the groove."

The victory moved the Red Sox into a second place tie with Baltimore, 3½ games behind the Yankees, but Yankee manager Billy Martin wasn't all that worried.

"I would have liked to have won both of these games here," said Martin of the once-critical two-game series. "But now I'll have to settle for a split."

RICK CERONE drove in two runs with a double and a single and rookie Jerry Garvin spaced nine hits to help the Toronto Blue Jays deal a crippling blow to Baltimore's American League East pennant chances with a 3-1 victory over the Orioles.

In one other American League contest, Ben Ogilvie's two-run single in the eighth inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 6-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians and enabled reliever Steve Foucault to earn his sixth win.

There was no action in the National League Monday night.

Hall of Fame celebrates the growth of gymnastics

BY DEBBE JONAK

While gymnastics was entering the public spotlight during the 1976 Olympics, Seymour Riskin was afraid the local fathers of the new sport would fade into obscurity.

So he established the Illinois High School Gymnastics Coach Assn. Hall of Fame to memorialize those who made Illinois the top high school gymnastics state in the nation.

"I noticed a lot of the old-timers were beginning to retire or to move out into other areas," said Riskin, 26, of 780 Barnaby St., Wheeling. Riskin is the assistant gymnastics coach at Niles East High School and a former international gymnastics competitor.

"I THOUGHT this is bad news — all these people that got the sport going are going to be gone and forgotten," he said.

Riskin approached the coaches association with the Hall of Fame idea. Earlier this year it was set up at the Prospect Heights Park District Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 W. Camp McDonald Rd.

The Morava Center was named after Gary Morava, a young Prospect Heights man who Riskin says was one of Illinois' outstanding gymnasts. Morava died in 1974 after a gymnastics accident.

The names on a plaque and pictures on the wall at the center are familiar and revered in gymnastics circles, but generally unknown to laymen:

- Joe Giallombardo, who established the first Illinois high school gymnastics team outside of Chicago at New Trier East, Wilmette.
- Tom Walthouse, a former student of Giallombardo, who left coaching at Arlington High School in 1972 with an unexcelled 10-year record of 132 wins, 15 losses and two ties.
- Sid Drain, a Rolling Meadows resident and gymnastics coach at Maine West High School, who organized the first national high school all-around gymnastics meet.
- John Cress, long-time gymnastics coach who retired from coaching this year at Niles North High School.
- Irv Bedard, coach at West Leyden High School, Northlake; Bill Roetzeheim, University of Illinois Circle Campus athletic director; and Vic Lesch, athletic director at Addison Trail High School.

"We were looking for those who had a very strong impact on promoting high school gymnastics in Illinois and helping it grow from three or four school teams in the 1960s to about 75 now," Riskin said.

"All the coaches chosen have been coaches of the year, past presidents of the association or they coached state champions," he said. "The standards for choosing were pretty stringent."

"To have success, it involves hard work, sacrifice, dedication, time — both on the coach's part and the kids'," said Hall of Famer Walthouse, 226 S. Reuter St., Arlington Heights.

UNDER WALTHOUSE'S coaching from 1962-1972, the Arlington Heights gymnastics team won the state championship in 1968 and 1969. It was runner-up in 1972. Walthouse was named Illinois coach of the year for those years.

"It didn't come easy," Walthouse said of his success. "It was hard and it was lonely."

Walthouse set high goals for his teams and demanded the boys set high goals for themselves. Then he drilled and worked them until they reached their aspirations.

Walthouse said he left coaching in 1972 because he had reached his goal after more than 10 exhaustive years.

"HOW MUCH CAN you do? Win four state championships? Why?" he said. "I wanted to try something else. I'd like to reach other goals."

He now is a golf coach for Rolling Meadows High School and the head golf instructor at Palatine Hills Country Club. He has not abandoned gymnastics, however. He is an active member of the coaches association, an internationally certified judge and a tutor.

Drain, 3000 Falcon Ct., Rolling Meadows, also is an internationally certified judge. Like Walthouse, he was chosen to be a judge for the 1975 Pre-Olympic Games in Montreal, Canada.

Drain has been responsible for gymnastics' emergence as a major sport in the U.S.

WHEN HE FIRST organized the National High School All-Around Gymnastics Invitational in 1975 at Maine West, attendance was poor.

"The first year, we lost money," he said. "The second year, we had to turn away 400 people. The third year it was televised and this year McDonald's wants to sponsor it."

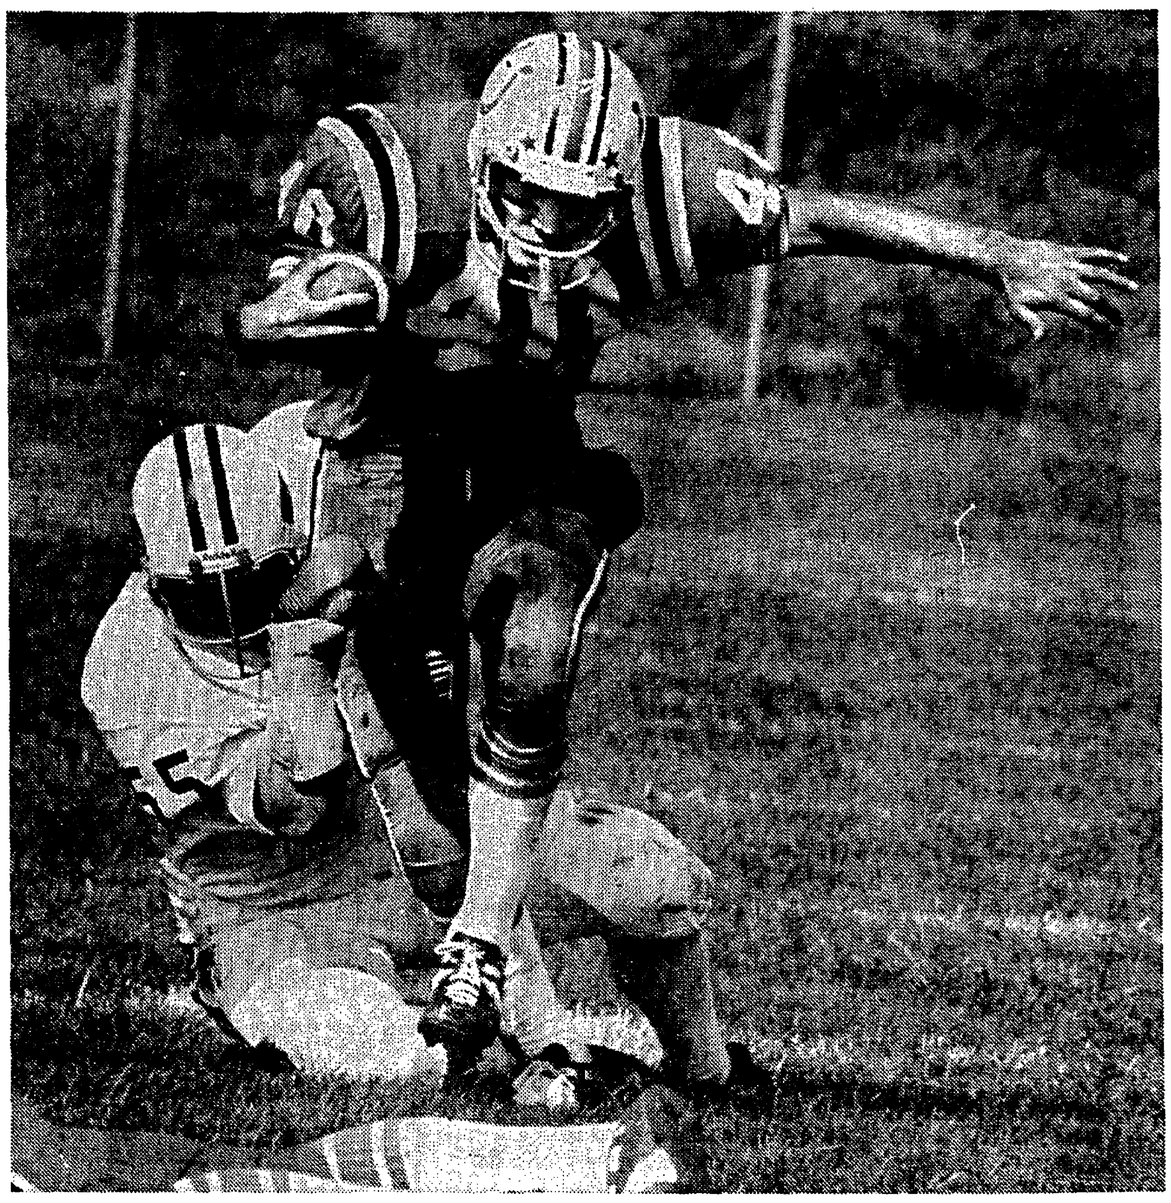
Drain, Walthouse, Riskin and many other coaches are excited about the late bloom of gymnastics. People have gained a better understanding of the sport through the extensive Olympics exposure in 1976 and better all-around news coverage, they said.

"It's very difficult to appreciate something you don't understand," Riskin said. "Gymnastics is much more of an art, an appreciative sport."

Americans in the past have been more drawn to "rough, tough" sports, he said. Gymnastics gained a rough, tough image during the 1976 Olympics, when a Jananese competitor performed with a broken leg, he said.

That, coupled with Nadia Comaneci's outstanding Olympic performance, set the sports world spinning, Riskin said.

"The sport of gymnastics has gone absolutely berserk as far as popularity goes," he said.



EDWARDIAN HUSTLE. Barrington tailback Steve Edwards (40) breaks through the grasp of Elk Grove's Ed Kurpieski during Barrington's 7-0 victory over visiting Grenadiers last Saturday. Edwards gained 52 yards on the ground and scored the game's only TD, a nine-yard run in third quarter.

Keeping Lord's pace makes him winner

Jim Murray

It's the kind of story Damon Runyon used to sell to the movies and Frank Capra would win an Academy Award on.

There's this low life who goes by the name Rambling Willie, who has never done an honest day's work in his life and hangs around the race track all the time.

But — get this — Rambling Willie has won $1 million at the races in his time and, unbeknownst to the guys around the stable, he tithes his winnings to this little church in Ohio.

EVERY TIME THE Church of Christ in West Mansfield, Ohio, needs a new paint job, or a new pew, or the steeple needs shoring up, they pray to the Lord. And then Rambling Willie does the Lord's work — makes another score at the track.

Now the kicker here is, Rambling Willie is not a bookie or a plunger or a tout. Rambling Willie is a horse. And not just any horse. Any day now, Rambling Willie may make a stained-glass window. They say, on the great horses, you can see the look of eagles.

On Willie, you can see the look of angels. On a clear day, you can see the halo. Willie runs for the Lord. It's a lucrative partnership. Willie has won more than $1 million, the second winningest pacer of all time.

It's an inspriring story Reader's Digest might want to excerpt. The Horse that Supports a Church. Before he saw the light, Willie was just another county fair horse in Indiana, an in-and-outer, when driver-trainer Bob Farrington bought him for 12 grand.

RAMBLING WILLIE certainly didn't look like much more than a 12-grand horse, a claimer. For one thing, he was bowed. You wouldn't bet a quarter he's make the post parade.

But when they closed the gate — well, in this case, you'd hesitate to use the word "miraculous," but let's just say Willie stops limping in a hurry. He's like a golf or pool hustler whose stroke improves dramatically once the money is up.

But what turned Willie into a pillar of the church was that Bob Farrington's wife is a minister's child. Vivian's dad is the Rev. C. L. Harris, who was pastor of four different churches while Vivian was growing up and now is shepherding the flock in West Mansfield. Mrs. Farrington tithes her husband's and her share of Rambling Willie's earnings.

The arrangement worked, so to speak, wonders. The lame ran. The halt won. This year Willie won $399,125. And the church has been able to hire a new assistant pastor. Willie has become the fastest gelding at a mile, half-mile and five-eighths of a mile ever to pull a wagon, in the money 108 times out of 130 races.

Willie won $295,750 last year. And the church got a new sidewalk, baptistry, pews. Willie won $264,405 in 1975. And the church got a new bulletin board and remodeled the kitchen. If Willie continues to win, they may have to tear the old church down and put up a cathedral.

Willie races at Hollywood Park Friday night in the $50,000 U.S. Pacing Championship with Bob Farrington in the sulky. Not too long ago, in the Bible Belt, victory would have been considered the wages of sin.

But now, with Rambling Willie's gains going to distribute food to flood victims, to counsel youth in drug programs, to do voluntary work among the poor and heal the sick, Rambling Willie may become the first horse ever to make saint.

Also, the only horse hundreds of people pray for in the stretch even though they haven't bet on him. Not exactly, that is.

Earl Weaver's in his own league

Milton Richman

NEW YORK (UPI) — For my money, Earl Weaver is the best manager in baseball today, win, lose or forfeit.

Name me anyone better.

When it comes right down to getting the absolute most out of a ballplayer — which, after all, is what managing is all about — Earl Weaver stands by himself at the top and leaves everybody else behind.

IF YOU TAKE a look at the American League East standings you'll see what Earl Weaver has done.

He has taken a ball club that was given virtually no consideration before the season started and projected it squarely into the thick of the fight for the division title.

This was a title everybody automatically deeded over to the Yankees. They figured to win by maybe 20 this time.

The Orioles? Forget them. Nobody gave them a chance.

THEY WERE going with players hardly anyone ever heard of. Poor Earl Weaver, everybody said. He'd spend a long, hot summer watching the Yankees go by.

Well, it hasn't turned out that way at all. Here it is almost October and the Yankees still haven't been able to shake the second-place Orioles, who still could do it, being 3½ games back with 13 more to play entering Monday night's game against Toronto.

"Everybody gave the pennant to the Yankees before the season started," says Weaver. "I didn't give it to them. My ballplayers didn't either."

NOW THERE ARE some saying Weaver possibly may have given the Yankees the pennant eventually by forefeiting last Thursday night's game at Toronto.

With the Blue Jays leading the Orioles 4-0 and coming to bat in the fifth, Weaver pulled his players off the field after third base umpire Marty Springstead refused to order a tarpaulin removed. The tarp, covering the Blue Jays' pitching mound in their bullpen, was located 12 feet outside the bullpen and Weaver felt it constituted a hazard to his players.

There was the obvious risk in forfeiting the game but there was one fringe benefit thut the canny Baltimore manager did not overlook. He felt his players might get so fired up, so determined to win if that game with the Blue Jays was takekn away from them, that they might become a team on some kind of crusade the rest of the way in.

LAST SATURDAY, Lee MacPhail, the American League president, officially backed up umpire Marty Springstead with regard to the Orioles' forfeit.

On Sunday, which was Brooks Robinson Day in Baltimore, MacPhail was on hand to make a presentation to the Orioles' popular former third baseman. Before MacPhail went out to make the presentation, Weaver knew he would be booed unmercifully for the decision he made Saturday.

"I just want you to know we'd understand if you don't want to go out there," Weaver said to MacPhail, and he meant it.

MacPhail did go out. The booing he took was what you'd expect, even more.

WEAVER WALKED over to the microphone and tried to quiet the crowd.

"Let him talk," he urged the angry Oriole fans

Earl Weaver doesn't miss a trick. He plays on your strengths, your weaknesses, your emotions. He manages the same way and there is no one any better at what he does.

Hall of Fame celebrates the growth of gymnastics

BY DEBBE JONAK

While gymnastics was entering the public spotlight during the 1976 Olympics, Seymour Riskin was afraid the local fathers of the new sport would fade into obscurity.

So he established the Illinois High School Gymnastics Coach Assn. Hall of Fame to memorialize those who made Illinois the top high school gymnastics state in the nation.

"I noticed a lot of the old-timers were beginning to retire or to move out into other areas," said Riskin, 26, of 799 Barnaby St., Wheeling. Riskin is the assistant gymnastics coach at Niles East High School and a former international gymnastics competitor.

"I THOUGHT this is bad news — all these people that got the sport going are going to be gone and forgotten," he said.

Riskin approached the coaches association with the Hall of Fame idea. Earlier this year it was set up at the Prospect Heights Park District Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 W. Camp McDonald Rd.

The Morava Center was named after Gary Morava, a young Prospect Heights man who Riskin says was one of Illinois' outstanding gymnasts. Morava died in 1974 after a gymnastics accident.

The names on a plaque and pictures on the wall at the center are familiar and revered in gymnastics circles, but generally unknown to laymen:

GOLDEN GRIN. Bob Lanier, veteran Detroit Piston center, is all smiles after signing a five-year contract estimated in the $2 million range. The 6-11 all-star has led his team in scoring and rebounding the past six years.

Lanier is newest instant millionaire

DETROIT — Star center Bob Lanier Monday signed a five-year contract with the Detroit Pistons believed to be worth $2 million.

Lanier, 29, said he was beginning his eighth season with the National Basketball Association squad with "peace of mind."

"Now I want to win a championship," he told a news conference.

The 6-foot-11 center has led the Pistons in scoring and rebounding for the past six years and is the NBA's seventh leading shooter with a .502 per cent accuracy rate.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but various reports have put its overall price tag in the neighborhood of $2 million. It also includes an option for a sixth year with identical terms.

"If there ever was one player who has earned the accolades and monetary consideration due a super star, it is Bob Lanier," said Pistons' co-owner Oscar Feldman.

"He is at the pinnacle of his career, and his past performances merit the kind of contract we have provided. Bob is a fine human being, a great player and a leader."

Six accused in dog track scheme

MIAMI — Six Flagler Dog Track employes were accused of doing the "impossible" Monday — manipulating the track's computers for at least a half million dollar profit during the summer racing meet.

Dade County State's Attorney Richard Gerstein said the suspects collected on tickets they issued to themselves after falsifying computer information on winning trifecta wagers. Trifecta bettors must pick the 1-2-3 finish of a race in precise order.

"When I first heard what was suspected, I told (track owner) David Hecht that it was impossible — it couldn't be done," said Keith Dodwell, an executive of Automatic Totalisator Co., which owns and operates the track's computers.

He said the manipulation required one computer operator to push only four buttons and delay the posting of the payoff by no more than four seconds. The operator who did it, said Dodwell, was so skillful a state inspector standing nearby evidently did not notice what was happening.

Investigators said the ring may have been operating as long as five years and netted millions of dollars.

Cauthen to ride at Arlington Park

Jockey Steve Cauthen, who has captured the attention of racegoers across the nation, is expected to make an appearance Sat., Sept. 24, at Arlington Park.

He is coming in to ride Sauce Boat in the $200,000 Arlington-Washington Futurity for two-year-old colts and geldings at a distance of six and one-half furlongs.

Cauthen, currently the country's leading rider, came to Arlington Park in the summer of 1976 after breaking in with great success at River Downs in Cincinnati. Cauthen booted home forty winners at Arlington in 1976 before moving on to Hawthorne and then finally out east where he has done the bulk of his riding since.

A's Finley out of intensive care

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley was moved out of intensive care and into a post operative ward of Northwestern Memorial Hospital Monday. He is listed in good condition.

Finley underwent a four-hour coronary bypass operation at the hospital Thursday after tests indicated his coronaries — veins supplying blood to the heart — were blocked.

A spokesman at the hospital said Finley is eating regularly, but he is receiving no visitors other than members of his immediate family. He said Finley would probably be in the hospital at least another eight days.

Finley was admitted to the hospital Sept. 11, complaining of chest pains.

Sting moves Roy to front office

Willie Roy, who finished the North American Soccer League season as coach of the Chicago Sting, Monday was named director of soccer development for the team by president Clive Toye.

A new coach was expected to be named sometime in October.

Toye also announced that defender Clive Griffiths had been signed to a 12-month contract with a two-year option. Griffiths, 22, has played with the Sting for three seasons. He was expected to return from England next month and begin to assist Roy.

Ranger GM eyes free agent Hisle

DALLAS — Texas Rangers General Manager Danny O'Brien said Monday his club would be interested in signing soon-to-be free agent Larry Hisle of Minnesota.

That was not particularly shocking since every club in the majors would like to sign Hisle. But O'Brien went a step further.

"It wouldn't surprise me one bit if he were out there (in the Rangers' outfield) in 1978," O'Brien said. "Hisle is someone we would like to have. I probably should be biting my tongue for fear someone might think I was tampering. But if I know the thinking of the owners of the ball club I would say that they would like to sign him."

Hisle has reportedly already turned down a large offer from Minnesota and O'Brien said he realized it would take a bundle of money to sign the Twins slugging outfielder.

Sports people

The Texas Rangers have sent veteran righthanded pitcher Nelson Briles to Baltimore for the $20,000 waiver price while the Boston Red Sox have claimed Cincinnati outfielder Bob Bailey . . . Cale Yarborough has extended his lead in NASCAR's Winston Cup Grand National point standings over Richard Petty, 3,970 to 3,776.

GOLDEN GRIN. Bob Lanier, veteran Detroit Piston center, is all smiles after signing a five-year contract estimated in the $2 million range. The 6-11 all-star has led his team in scoring and rebounding the past six years.

Lanier is newest instant millionaire

DETROIT — Star center Bob Lanier Monday signed a five-year contract with the Detroit Pistons believed to be worth $2 million.

Lanier, 29, said he was beginning his eighth season with the National Basketball Association squad with "peace of mind."

"Now I want to win a championship," he told a news conference.

The 6-foot-11 center has led the Pistons in scoring and rebounding for the past six years and is the NBA's seventh leading shooter with a .502 per cent accuracy rate.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but various reports have put its overall price tag in the neighborhood of $2 million. It also includes an option for a sixth year with identical terms.

"If there ever was one player who has earned the accolades and monetary consideration due a super star, it is Bob Lanier," said Pistons' co-owner Oscar Feldman.

"He is at the pinnacle of his career, and his past performances merit the kind of contract we have provided. Bob is a fine human being, a great player and a leader."

Six accused in dog track scheme

MIAMI — Six Flagler Dog Track employes were accused of doing the "impossible" Monday — manipulating the track's computers for at least a half million dollar profit during the summer racing meet.

Dade County State's Attorney Richard Gerstein said the suspects collected on tickets they issued to themselves after falsifying computer information on winning trifecta wagers. Trifecta bettors must pick the 1-2-3 finish of a race in precise order.

"When I first heard what was suspected, I told (track owner) David Hecht that it was impossible — it couldn't be done," said Keith Dodwell, an executive of Automatic Totalisator Co., which owns and operates the track's computers.

He said the manipulation required one computer operator to push only four buttons and delay the posting of the payoff by no more than four seconds. The operator who did it, said Dodwell, was so skillful a state inspector standing nearby evidently did not notice what was happening.

Investigators said the ring may have been operating as long as five years and netted millions of dollars.

Cauthen to ride at Arlington Park

Jockey Steve Cauthen, who has captured the attention of racegoers across the nation, is expected to make an appearance Sat., Sept. 24, at Arlington Park.

He is coming in to ride Sauce Boat in the $200,000 Arlington-Washington Futurity for two-year-old colts and geldings at a distance of six and one-half furlongs.

Cauthen, currently the country's leading rider, came to Arlington Park in the summer of 1976 after breaking in with great success at River Downs in Cincinnati. Cauthen booted home forty winners at Arlington in 1976 before moving on to Hawthorne and then finally out east where he has done the bulk of his riding since.

A's Finley out of intensive care

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley was moved out of intensive care and into a post operative ward of Northwestern Memorial Hospital Monday. He is listed in good condition.

Finley underwent a four-hour coronary bypass operation at the hospital Thursday after tests indicated his coronaries — veins supplying blood to the heart — were blocked.

A spokesman at the hospital said Finley is eating regularly, but he is receiving no visitors other than members of his immediate family. He said Finley would probably be in the hospital at least another eight days.

Finley was admitted to the hospital Sept. 11, complaining of chest pains.

Sting moves Roy to front office

Willie Roy, who finished the North American Soccer League season as coach of the Chicago Sting, Monday was named director of soccer development for the team by president Clive Toye.

A new coach was expected to be named sometime in October.

Toye also announced that defender Clive Griffiths had been signed to a 12-month contract with a two-year option. Griffiths, 22, has played with the Sting for three seasons. He was expected to return from England next month and begin to assist Roy.

Ranger GM eyes free agent Hisle

DALLAS — Texas Rangers General Manager Danny O'Brien said Monday his club would be interested in signing soon-to-be free agent Larry Hisle of Minnesota.

That was not particularly shocking since every club in the majors would like to sign Hisle. But O'Brien went a step further.

"It wouldn't surprise me one bit if he were out there (in the Rangers' outfield) in 1978," O'Brien said. "Hisle is someone we would like to have. I probably should be biting my tongue for fear someone might think I was tampering. But if I know the thinking of the owners of the ball club I would say that they would like to sign him."

Hisle has reportedly already turned down a large offer from Minnesota and O'Brien said he realized it would take a bundle of money to sign the Twins slugging outfielder.

EPA plans to change gas mileage calculations in response to buyers

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- The Environmental Protection Agency said Monday it plans to change the way it calculates auto fuel economy figures which have left some new car buyers angry and disappointed.

In a report once again ranking the Volkswagen Rabbitt Diesel the No. 1 economy subcompact with an average 45 miles per gallon, the EPA said it will rejigger its mileage calculations next year.

EPA Administrator Douglas Costle said the charges will more accurately reflect the kind of mileage consumers actually experience when they own the cars.

IN THE ANNUAL rankings of new models released Monday, two other diesel-powered 1978 models, a Peugeot and a new Oldsmobile diesel, also emerged as the most fuel efficient cars in their classes. Several big cars, a Cadillac Eldorado, a Cadillac Limousine, a Dodge Monaco and a Plymouth Fury, emerged with the worst showings, averaging 11 mpg.

This is the first year automakers race a congressionally set fuel economy standard of an average 18 mpg for their entire model mix. Costle said the average figure for each manufacturer's fleet won't be available for a few weeks yet.

Costle said nearly 50 per cent of motorists get mileages as good or better than the EPA tests but "there are a large number of drivers who do not get the advertised mileage."

He said this was due to "wide differences in driving habits and maintenance practices and the varying road, traffic and weather conditions which drivers experience." In testing 1979 model cars, he said, EPA will adjust the figures downward, possibly taking off a certain percentage to account for variables.

COSTLE ALSO suggested consumers should use the EPA mileage figures not as a promise of performance but as a guide for comparison shopping — to indicate, for instance, that one car might use 20 per cent more fuel than another.

The EPA test results covered 91 per cent of the cars expected to be sold during the new model year, but did not include last year's miles-per-gallon champion, the Honda, which has not yet submitted its test data.

The Rabbit Diesel, which also took top honors in last year's preliminary mileage list but which was not widely sold in this country, got 40 mph in city driving and 53 on the road. The car tested had a four-cylinder, 90-inch engine with manual transmission and fuel injection.

It topped the subcompact class and recorded the best over-all average mileage as well. Other categories and their top finishers:

- Two seaters: Fiat X1-9, average 23 mpg, 20 in town, 31 highway.
- Minicompact: Datsun B-210, average 40 mpg, 36 city and 43 highway.
- Compact: Peugeot, 504, Diesel, average, 30 mpg. 28 city and 34 highway.
- Mid-size: Ford Fairmount and Lincoln-Mercury Zephyr, both averaging 26 mpg.
- Large size: Oldsmobile Delta 88 Diesel and Oldsmobile 98 Diesel, both averaging 24 mpg.

Costle said he was "confident that the '78 models (do) continue the fuel economy improvement of the last few years. The introduction of some new models with top fuel ratings is an especially healthy sign."

Business briefs

Housing starts unchanged: U.S.

Housing starts were unchanged while manufacturing capacity utilization fell in August for the first decline since January, the government reported Monday. Commerce said housing starts in August were unchanged at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2 million units. Commerce said the construction pace both for new homes and new apartments maintained the rate of July when it also was estimated at 2 million units. Commerce and housing industry economists have projected that new construction for 1977 will be very good, although there may be some slowing late in the year. The Federal Reserve said manufacturing capacity utilization was estimated at 82.7 per cent, down from 83.2 per cent in July. The August decrease represents the first reduction since January. The decline was not unexpected following Friday's report that industrial production fell 5 per cent in August. In other developments. Commerce estimated the Cross National Product after adjustment for inflation rose 6.2 per cent in the second quarter. This was virtually unchanged from last month's estimate that the economy grew 6.1 per cent. Commerce said a $500-million increase to $14.8 billion in its latest estimate of corporate profits was an important factor in the minor upward adjustment in GNP.

Oil profits up sharply, group says

The 21 top oil companies made more money in the first six months of 1977 than in the entire year of 1972, says the consumer group energy action. James Flug, director of energy action, said figures published by the leading companies show their profits increased from $2.82 billion in the first half of 1972 to $5.74 billion in the first half of 1977 in current dollars. "In fact," the group said, "the reported profits for the first six months of 1977 exceeded the profits reported for all of 1972 by $30.3 million." The group said while oil company profits were rising by 103 per cent since 1972, the last year before the Arab oil embargo, earnings of the average American worker increased by only 38.5 per cent and increases of energy prices ranged from 77.4 per cent for gasoline to 140.4 per cent for fuel oil. Flug said these statistics indicate a "massive transfer of wealth from energy consumers to energy producers" during this decade.

'Most workers usually find niche'

There are probably fewer square pegs in round holes in the business world than generally is assumed, a Menninger Foundation psychiatrist said Monday. Dr. Herbert C. Modlin, moderator at a panel on job stress at the American Medical Assn.'s congress on occupational health, said it may take a while, but most persons usually find the right job. "It's amazing how well people do," Modlin said. "They find the right niche, even though it might be a trial-and-error thing." But Modlin and the panelists agreed that not every type of personality is right for every type of occupation and when the match is not right, there's trouble. "Being an air traffic controller is probably one of the most stressful types of jobs there is," Modlin said. "Anyone who's on that job for 20 years and doesn't have an ulcer has something wrong with him. You put 10 persons under the same stress and one will become very nervous, one will get migraine headaches, one will get an ulcer and the other seven will be all right." The key, according to Modlin and panel members, is the way the stress is handled. Dr. Salvatore R. Maddi of the University of Chicago said persons most likely to withstand stress successfully are those who feel they have control over their own lives, who seek challenge rather than security and who feel committed to rather than alienated from their lives.

Not much on gas, but the options...

The world's most expensive private car, a $146,125 Rolls-Royce that gets about 10 miles per gallon of gasoline, hit the road in London Monday. The gold-plated, velvet-upholstered, dual air-conditioned limousine was bought by millionaire Dubai businessman Bhatia Karani. The supercar, more expensive than any other production car in the world except armor-plated presidential limousines in the United States, is similar to a Rolls now being completed as a Silver Jubilee gift from the British motor industry to Queen Elizabeth. With an estimated rating of about 10 mpg, the gold-plated gas guzzler would have come in last on the Environmental Protection Agency's mileage list announced in Washington Monday. Karani's car includes every possible option — the queen's will be less adorned and about $34,000 cheaper.

For investor, small is beautiful

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Want to make it big in the American capitalist system today? Think small.

That's the unorthodox advice of Donald Carret, of Carret and Co., whose money-management firm has chalked up a remarkable record of consistent success during years when millions of investors have fallen by the wayside.

"We firmly believe," he told me, "that most of the great opportunities in the American markets exist today, as they always have, in the securities of small to medium-sized companies."

WHAT'S MORE, Carret belives, many people miss the point — and the profits — because they have been misled by conventional political rhetoric attacking the alleged fatcats of "big business."

"We are often amused at the way 'liberals' are always baiting 'big business' as representing the ultimate in bloated capitalist wealth, whereas these days the great bulk of the wealth in most large corporations is represented by the small investor," he said. "We have no statistics to prove it, but we are quite certain that several times as many people have become millionaires through the success of small to medium-sized companies as ever become wealthy through 'big business.'"

In the present national climate, Carret sees an additional reason for feeling "more comforable" with an investment in a small company: the relatively "low profile" these companies possess.

"Publicity-seeking politicians and environmentalists get ego gratification (and press coverage) in proportion to the size of their corporate targets," he noted. "Small companies are usually not worth their time and trouble."

TO THE OPPOSITE point of view — that highly exposed large corporations often seem a less chancy investment than small companies — Carret replies:

"What many investors perceive as stability in large companies is, in many instances, merely a case of senescence — a kind of hardening of the corporate arteries. The larger the corporation, the more advanced the condition can become before being visible to outside observers. Large companies tend to foster a bureaucracy of their own that can be even more deadly than the well-known governmental variety."

Carret also prefers companies whose management has a significant financial stake in the corporation's success. Contrasting the situation in many large firms whose managers' interest "does not extend much beyond their salary and pension" with that where a family's entire fortune may depend on a small operaton's profitability, Carret strongly prefers the latter: "The pride, dedication and just plain hard work that this situation can bring out in a man is almost impossible to duplicate against the background of a large impersonal corporation."

Carret, whose firm reports that 96 per cent of its investment accounts increased in value during the first half of this year (while the market averages were falling), acknowledges that such outstanding performance takes more than simply being a zealot for smallness. He concedes, indeed, that many small corporations fail each year, that there are inherent disadvantages just in the fact of being small and that most small companies that survive "are fated to remain just that — small companies."

SINCE CORPORATE existence is more hazardous for small companies, as well as potentially much more profitable, the trick is to pick the right small firms. While no system is flawless, Carret thinks it important to begin by emphasizing the financial basics: little or no debt, and a solid balance sheet.

"When all is said and done," he argues, "the chief objective in managing money is to buy $1 for 50 cents. The single most dependable indicator as to which securities will enable the investor to attain this goal is the corporate balance sheet. This document . . . is basic to all other vital factors such as earnings, quality of management and industry outlook . . . In the present era, when the question is not 'are we going to have inflation?,' but 'how much?' a solid balance sheet is, more than ever, a prerequisite to intelligent security selection."

And to Carret, at least, small is beautiful.

Few finance guides for workers

by GUY HALVERSON

The controversy over embattled Carter administration budget director Bert Lance underscores a serious but little known national problem for the U.S. business community:

There is a lack of formal standards by most corporations pertaining to outside personal financial dealings by employes.

Very few U.S. firms have written policies about such practices. Further, even within the U.S banking industry, there is no formalized, nationwide standard involving personal financial transactions of employes, according to the American Bankers Assn.

At issue, according to business management specialists, is how to reconcile the privacy rights of individuals in their personal finances with the need of the company to protect itself from the possibly embarrassing or even illegal conduct of its employes.

COMPOUNDING THE problem of a lack of banking industry guidelines for employe financial dealings is the fact that, at present, federal banking oversight is split between the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Treasury. Moreover, supervision of other financial institutions — S&L and credit unions for example — is equally fragmented.

Involved in the escalating controversy over Lance are questions such as whether the federal budget chief (and former top Georgia banking official) obtained preferential loan treatment, and if so, was it because of his position in the bank? Also, did Lance's frequent bank overdrafts mean he was, in effect, using bank depositors funds for his own purposes? Finally, did he post proper collateral for loans totaling several millions of dollars?

Based on random checks with a number of major corporations and banks around the United States, some conclusions about employe financial dealings can be drawn:

- Most major banks have adopted individual codes that would encompass personal financial dealings along the lines of the Lance situation. But many banks, large and small, are believed not to have clear cut or up-to-date standards, according to Robert L. Bevan, associate federal legislative counsel of the ABA.

THE WRITING of such codes is left up to the discretion of each bank, although the ABA, as far back as 1971, issued a set of model banking standards.

- Very few nonbanking corporations have formalized codes pertaining to employe outside financial transactions, although most firms now have "ethics codes" regulating such matters as accepting gifts, rendering services for favors, accepting free trips, etc. But even here, such codes are not always formally codified or written down.

- While some firms, such as Exxon, offer special counseling for individuals with tangled personal finances, most do not. However, talks with corporate officials suggest that few companies knowingly will place individuals in key fiduciary positions if they are known to be deep in debt, or have particularly complicated outside financial claims (such as a court-ordered garnishment of wages) that could be embarrassing to the company.

Whether business firms should formalize employe financial transactions codes is expected to draw increasing attention within the U.S. Business community in the post-Watergate climate of the 1970s. "The whole atmosphere (about what is ethical or unethical) has changed (within business) over the past few years," says one official of the National Assn. of Manufacturers. Even NAM, representing U.S. industrial firms, has a written code for employes involving such matters as gifts (not to be accepted if more than $10.00).

But the NAM code, like most corporate codes, does not deal with personal finances.

"Usually practices of this kind (possibly slipshod personal financial dealings) wouldn't even come to our attention," says an employment officer of Washington-based Allegheny Airlines. If an employe came in for financial assistance he or she might be given some help or sent to an outside money specialists, he says.

AT EXXON, "our practice is to counsel . . . an employe if he gets into a financial problem," a company spokesman says. First the employe's supervisor will work with him. If that is ineffective, the company will seek further internal aid, or send the employe to a specialist. Discharge is only a "last resort," says the spokesman, and seldom used.

Among model codes for banks recommended by the ABA:

- Officers and employes should be prudent in investments and not engage in unwarranted speculation in securities or commodities.
- Officers and employes should not accept offers which come to them because of their bank position, or buy a security at terms more favorable than those available to the general public.

Steel firm closes part of facility

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. announced Monday it has been forced by government controls, foreign imports an expensive environmental considerations to close part of its production facilities in suburban Campbell and lay off 5,000 employes.

R. C. Rieder, chairman and chief executive of Lykes Corp., parent firm of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, also said the company is consolidating most of its operations at the Indiana Harbor Works near Chicago. Youngstown Sheet and Tube will move its corporate headquarters to that area.

"The pricing of steel products has been subjected to governmental interference by such pressures as jawboning, demands for prenotification of price increases or rollbacks and unjustified pricing investigations, all of which, have resulted in de facto price control over the past 15 years," said Rieder. "The steady and persistent erosion of our profit margins, strongly affected by foreign imports, governmental price restraint and mounting environmental regulation have brought about the circumstances which required this decision."

Rieder said steadily mounting demands for "nonproductive environmental expenditures" are using up capital resources which are badly needed to improve efficiency and to lower costs to remain competitive with foreign producers.

The Rabbit Diesel, which also took top honors in last year's preliminary mileage list but which was not widely sold in this country, got 40 mph in city driving and 53 on the road. The car tested had a four cylinder, 90-inch engine with manual transmission and fuel injection.

It topped the subcompact class and recorded the best over-all average mileage as well. Other categories and their top finishers:

- Two seaters: Fiat X1-9, average 23 mpg, 20 in town, 31 highway.
- Minicompact: Datsun B-210, average 40 mpg, 36 city and 43 highway.
- Compact: Peugeot, 504, Diesel, average, 30 mpg. 28 city and 34 highway.
- Mid-size: Ford Fairmount and Lincoln-Mercury Zephyr, both averaging 26 mpg.
- Large size: Oldsmobile Delta 88 Diesel and Oldsmobile 98 Diesel, both averaging 24 mpg.

Costle said he was "confident that the '78 models (do) continue the fuel economy improvement of the last few years. The introduction of some new models with top fuel ratings is an especially healthy sign."

Housing starts unchanged: U.S.

Housing starts were unchanged while manufacturing capacity utilization fell in August for the first decline since January, the government reported Monday. Commerce said housing starts in August were unchanged at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2 million units. Commerce said the construction pace both for new homes and new apartments maintained the rate of July when it also was estimated at 2 million units. Commerce and housing industry economists have projected that new construction for 1977 will be very good, although there may be some slowing late in the year. The Federal Reserve said manufacturing capacity utilization was estimated at 82.7 per cent, down from 83.2 per cent in July. The August decrease represents the first reduction since January. The decline was not unexpected following Friday's report that industrial production fell 5 per cent in August. In other developments. Commerce estimated the Cross National Product after adjustment for inflation rose 6.2 per cent in the second quarter. This was virtually unchanged from last month's estimate that the economy grew 6.1 per cent. Commerce said a $500-million increase to $14.8 billion in its latest estimate of corporate profits was an important factor in the minor upward adjustment in GNP.

Oil profits up sharply, group says

The 21 top oil companies made more money in the first six months of 1977 than in the entire year of 1972, says the consumer group energy action. James Flug, director of energy action, said figures published by the leading companies show their profits increased from $2.82 billion in the first half of 1972 to $5.74 billion in the first half of 1977 in current dollars. "In fact," the group said, "the reported profits for the first six months of 1977 exceeded the profits reported for all of 1972 by $30.3 million." The group said while oil company profits were rising by 103 per cent since 1972, the last year before the Arab oil embargo, earnings of the average American worker increased by only 38.5 per cent and increases of energy prices ranged from 77.4 per cent for gasoline to 140.4 per cent for fuel oil. Flug said these statistics indicate a "massive transfer of wealth from energy consumers to energy producers" during this decade.

'Most workers usually find niche'

There are probably fewer square pegs in round holes in the business world than generally is assumed, a Menninger Foundation psychiatrist said Monday. Dr. Herbert C. Modlin, moderator at a panel on job stress at the American Medical Assn.'s congress on occupational health, said it may take a while, but most persons usually find the right job. "It's amazing how well people do," Modlin said. "They find the right niche, even though it might be a trial-and-error thing." But Modlin and the panelists agreed that not every type of personality is right for every type of occupation and when the match is not right, there's trouble. "Being an air traffic controller is probably one of the most stressful types of jobs there is," Modlin said. "Anyone who's on that job for 20 years and doesn't have an ulcer has something wrong with him. You put 10 persons under the same stress and one will become very nervous, one will get migraine headaches, one will get an ulcer and the other seven will be all right." The key, according to Modlin and panel members, is the way the stress is handled. Dr. Salvatore R. Maddi of the University of Chicago said persons most likely to withstand stress successfully are those who feel they have control over their own lives, who seek challenge rather than security and who feel committed to rather than alienated from their lives.

Not much on gas, but the options...

The world's most expensive private car, a $146,125 Rolls-Royce that gets about 10 miles per gallon of gasoline, hit the road in London Monday. The gold-plated, velvet-upholstered, dual air-conditioned limousine was bought by millionaire Dubai businessman Bhatia Karani. The supercar, more expensive than any other production car in the world except armor-plated presidential limousines in the United States, is similar to a Rolls now being completed as a Silver Jubilee gift from the British motor industry to Queen Elizabeth. With an estimated rating of about 10 mpg, the gold-plated gas guzzler would have come in last on the Environmental Protection Agency's mileage list announced in Washington Monday. Karani's car includes every possible option — the queen's will be less adorned and about $34,000 cheaper.

For investor, small is beautiful

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Want to make it big in the American capitalist system today? Think small.

That's the unorthodox advice of Donald Carret, of Carret and Co., whose money-management firm has chalked up a remarkable record of consistent success during years when millions of investors have fallen by the wayside.

"We firmly believe," he told me, "that most of the great opportunities in the American markets exist today, as they always have, in the securities of small to medium-sized companies."

WHAT'S MORE, Carret belives, many people miss the point — and the profits — because they have been misled by conventional political rhetoric attacking the alleged fatcats of "big business."

"We are often amused at the way 'liberals' are always baiting 'big business' as representing the ultimate in bloated capitalist wealth, whereas these days the great bulk of the wealth in most large corporations is represented by the small investor," he said. "We have no statistics to prove it, but we are quite certain that several times as many people have become millionaires through the success of small to medium-sized companies as ever become wealthy through 'big business.' "

In the present national climate, Carret sees an additional reason for feeling "more comforable" with an investment in a small company: the relatively "low profile" these companies possess.

"Publicity-seeking politicians and environmentalists get ego gratification (and press coverage) in proportion to the size of their corporate targets," he noted. "Small companies are usually not worth their time and trouble."

TO THE OPPOSITE point of view — that highly exposed large corporations often seem a less chancy investment than small companies — Carret replies:

"What many investors perceive as stability in large companies is, in many instances, merely a case of senescence — a kind of hardening of the corporate arteries. The larger the corporation, the more advanced the condition can become before being visible to outside observers. Large companies tend to foster a bureaucracy of their own that can be even more deadly than the well-known governmental variety."

Carret also prefers companies whose management has a significant financial stake in the corporation's success. Contrasting the situation in many large firms whose managers' interest "does not extend much beyond their salary and pension" with that where a family's entire fortune may depend on a small operaton's profitability, Carret strongly prefers the latter: "The pride, dedication and just plain hard work that this situation can bring out in a man is almost impossible to duplicate against the background of a large impersonal corporation."

Carret, whose firm reports that 96 per cent of its investment accounts increased in value during the first half of this year (while the market averages were falling), acknowledges that such outstanding performance takes more than simply being a zealot for smallness. He concedes, indeed, that many small corporations fail each year, that there are inherent disadvantages just in the fact of being small and that most small companies that survive "are fated to remain just that — small companies."

SINCE CORPORATE existence is more hazardous for small companies, as well as potentially much more profitable, the trick is to pick the right small firms. While no system is flawless, Carret thinks it important to begin by emphasizing the financial basics: little or no debt, and a solid balance sheet.

"When all is said and done," he argues, "the chief objective in managing money is to buy $1 for 50 cents. The single most dependable indicator as to which securities will enable the investor to attain this goal is the corporate balance sheet. This document . . . is basic to all other vital factors such as earnings, quality of management and industry outlook . . . In the present era, when the question is not 'are we going to have inflation?,' but 'how much?' a solid balance sheet is, more than ever, a prerequisite to intelligent security selection."

And to Carret, at least, small is beautiful.

Few finance guides for workers

by GUY HALVERSON

The controversy over embattled Carter administration budget director Bert Lance underscores a serious but little known national problem for the U.S. business community:

There is a lack of formal standards by most corporations pertaining to outside personal financial dealings by employes.

Very few U.S. firms have written policies about such practices. Further, even within the U.S banking industry, there is no formalized, nationwide standard involving personal financial transactions of employes, according to the American Bankers Assn.

At issue, according to business management specialists, is how to reconcile the privacy rights of individuals in their personal finances with the need of the company to protect itself from the possibly embarrassing or even illegal conduct of its employes.

COMPOUNDING THE problem of a lack of banking industry guidelines for employe financial dealings is the fact that, at present, federal banking oversight is split between the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Treasury. Moreover, supervision of other financial institutions — S&L and credit unions for example — is equally fragmented.

Involved in the escalating controversy over Lance are questions such as whether the federal budget chief (and former top Georgia banking official) obtained preferential loan treatment, and if so, was it because of his position in the bank? Also, did Lance's frequent bank overdrafts mean he was, in effect, using bank depositors funds for his own purposes? Finally, did he post proper collateral for loans totaling several millions of dollars?

Based on random checks with a number of major corporations and banks around the United States, some conclusions about employe financial dealings can be drawn:

- Most major banks have adopted individual codes that would encompass personal financial dealings along the lines of the Lance situation. But many banks, large and small, are believed not to have clear cut or up-to-date standards, according to Robert L. Bevan, associate federal legislative counsel of the ABA.

THE WRITING of such codes is left up to the discretion of each bank, although the ABA, as far back as 1971, issued a set of model banking standards.

- Very few nonbanking corporations have formalized codes pertaining to employe outside financial transactions, although most firms now have "ethics codes" regulating such matters as accepting gifts, rendering services for favors, accepting free trips, etc. But even here, such codes are not always formally codified or written down.

- While some firms, such as Exxon, offer special counseling for individuals with tangled personal finances, most do not. However, talks with corporate officials suggest that few companies knowingly will place individuals in key fiduciary positions if they are known to be deep in debt, or have particularly complicated outside financial claims (such as a court-ordered garnishment of wages) that could be embarrassing to the company.

Whether business firms should formalize employe financial transactions codes is expected to draw increasing attention within the U.S. Business community in the post-Watergate climate of the 1970s. "The whole atmosphere (about what is ethical or unethical) has changed (within business) over the past few years," says one official of the National Assn. of Manufacturers. Even NAM, representing U.S. industrial firms, has a written code for employes involving such matters as gifts (not to be accepted if more than $10.00).

But the NAM code, like most corporate codes, does not deal with personal finances.

"Usually practices of this kind (possibly slipshod personal financial dealings) wouldn't even come to our attention," says an employment officer of Washington-based Allegheny Airlines. If an employe came in for financial assistance he or she might be given some help or sent to an outside money specialists, he says.

AT EXXON, "our practice is to counsel . . . an employe if he gets into a financial problem," a company spokesman says. First the employe's supervisor will work with him. If that is ineffective, the company will seek further internal aid, or send the employe to a specialist. Discharge is only a "last resort," says the spokesman, and seldom used.

Among model codes for banks recommended by the ABA:

- Officers and employes should be prudent in investments and not engage in unwarranted speculation in securities or commodities.
- Officers and employes should not accept offers which come to them because of their bank position, or buy a security at terms more favorable than those available to the general public.

Steel firm closes part of facility

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. announced Monday it has been forced by government controls, foreign imports an expensive environmental considerations to close part of its production facilities in suburban Campbell and lay off 5,000 employes.

R. C. Rieder, chairman and chief executive of Lykes Corp., parent firm of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, also said the company is consolidating most of its operations at the Indiana Harbor Works near Chicago. Youngstown Sheet and Tube will move its corporate headquarters to that area.

"The pricing of steel products has been subjected to governmental interference by such pressures as jawboning, demands for prenotification of price increases or rollbacks and unjustified pricing investigations, all of which, have resulted in de facto price control over the past 15 years," said Rieder. "The steady and persistent erosion of our profit margins, strongly affected by foreign imports, governmental price restraint and mounting environmental regulation have brought about the circumstances which required this decision."

Rieder said steadily mounting demands for "nonproductive environmental expenditures" are using up capital resources which are badly needed to improve efficiency and to lower costs to remain competitive with foreign producers.

No. 2 flower service hopes to bloom

by PAUL VAN SLAMBROUCK

John Bodette has learned for the time being to accept being No. 2. After all, he admits, he has no one to blame but himself.

As former operating head of Florist Transworld Delivery Assn. for 18 years, Bodette built the subscriber-owned flowers-by-wire firm into the unrivaled leader of the industry. Now, he's in the difficult but exciting position of trying to rebuild the industry's distant No. 2 firm into a top contender.

Bodette, with Warren E. Avis, founder of Avis Rent-A-Car, and Glenn H. Friedt Jr., last year bought Teleflora Inc., for just over $5 million. The acquisition followed their purchase of United Flowers-By-Wire Canada Ltd., the largest such Canadian firm

Teleflora has fewer florist-subscribers than FTD — 14,300 vs. 15,800 — and far less revenue.

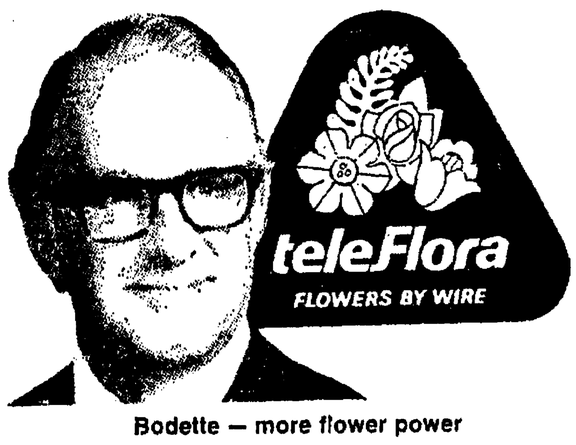
THE PROSPECT of overcoming FTD in revenue is admittedly distant, Mr. Bodette concedes. "It's like asking Ford when they'll overtake General Motors," he says. An executive with FTD quips, "It's more like AMC trying to overtake General Motors."

FTD and Teleflora lead a pack of six large flower-by-wire companies. Only FTD is a cooperative, which a spokesman for the firm says means that any surplus income is partially returned to subscribers. Last year, the surplus came to $1 million.

By law a minimum 20 per cent of this must go to subscribers. The FTD board decides each year what portion beyond the 20 per cent will be returned to members. The rest is used for "operating capital." The spokesman explains this fund as a provision for buying special products to be distributed to all FTD florists, such as planters or holiday promotional goods.

FTD and Teleflora both take 5 per cent commission on all transactions. The florist sending an order to another florist gets 20 per cent of the billing. The florist filling the order gets the rest.

Teleflora in recent years had been "overly" growth-conscious



Bodette — more flower power

because of FTD's commanding 60 per cent market position, Bodette says. "There was expansion at the expense of quality; the firm was thought of as second-best, in size and quality. But the game of not meeting their standards (FTD's) is over," he says. Teleflora, he says, will now demand the "highest" product and delivery standards of florists subscribing to the service.

TELEFLORA'S EFFORT to gain greater market share is, according to the FTD official, "really a trade battle. They (Teleflora) must convince florists that they have better services." Services provided by both firms include acting as a clearinghouse and issuing financial statements detailing all wire order transactions; giving marketing and promotional assistance for florists' mass media advertising; giving credit information; and more.

Bodette says he expects Teleflora's revenues to hit $60 million this year, and to continue to grow at a 12 per cent annual clip. Sales by FTD florists (using the FTD service) were $239 million last year.

Teleflora's growth projections could prove conservative if an innovation announced this week is as successful as Bodette hopes. Capitalizing on the name of partner Warren Avis, who no longer controls Avis Rent-A-Car, Teleflora is launching Avis Flowers Worldwide. The new service gives consumers direct access to flowers through a toll-free telephone service operating 24 hours a day. Purchases may be made by credit card. Bodette says the service is the first of its kind. But he notes with a smile that FTD had the chance to adopt it several years ago before he resigned from the company. "We tried this through a marketing effort with Reader's Digest, but the FTD board didn't want it because they saw it as competition with FTD florists." The argument had merit, according to Bodette, so Teleflora will advertise this service by first encouraging consumers to go to their local Teleflora dealer. But when this is not possible, they are urged to use the Avis Flowers service.

The entire floriculture industry — including retail sales of all kinds of plant life — has grown substantially, to an estimated $3.5 billion in annual sales, according to Bodette. But he says florists have to some degree failed to capitalize on the spectacular growth of green plant sales.

He says industry figures show that the average florist grosses only $70,000 to $30,000 annually. This relatively small size puts most florists at a disadvantage in competing for sales with the larger supermarkets and department stores. But the boom in houseplant sales, which Bodette says is leveling off, may foster a greater appreciation among florists of the value of new products and effective marketing.

Pointers on cutting mailing costs

Not much can be done about the letter or package that takes inordinately long to reach its destination. But more and more organizations, businesses and individuals are finding they can do something about cutting their mail costs.

Holding down postage costs will become even more important to companies if a proposed hike to 16 cents for a first-class business letter is approved. The U.S. Postal Service asked for the increase last July (so-called "citizens mail" would not be affected) and action on the proposal is expected by next May.

UPI asked some large mail users what they are doing to cut postage costs and for some cost-saving tips on how to get the most out of the mail.

JAMES TURNER, vice president for administrative services, State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., Bloomington, Ill.:

"In 1976 our mailing costs were $19.27 million and we project $21 million this year. We have 37.21 million mailings a year just in premium notices — two a year to each auto policy holder an done a year on other policies.

"We make darn sure that we stay within one ounce for first class mail and we do presorting nationwide to qualify for a discount. With a rate increase, we probably will increase the number of our courier deliveries where we have employes carry letters between our facilities. We started couriers originally to expedite the mail and supplies but it also has saved us money.

"I don't think there is any question that we and other companies will make greater use of the telephone and facsimile transmissions and we will probably increase the number of phone networks we have. We will make greater use of microfiche (very small microfilm pieces).

SAMUEL J. PAUL, manager of postal education, Pitney-Bowes Inc., Stanford, Conn.:

"Businesses should check postage scales for accuracy to avoid overpaying or having a package arrive with a 'postage due' notice. The local post office will verify a scale's accuracy or you can make a simple test. Place five quarters on the scale; they should weigh just under an ounce.

"Firms can also use lighter or smaller envelopes and half-sheets of letter paper to cut weight and they can print intra-company reports on both sides of the paper.

"Use certified mail if a receipt is needed. It serves the same purpose as registered mail but costs less.

"Piggyback a letter with a package — without paying first class rates for both. Mark the package 'first class mail enclosed' and add the letter postage to the parcel's postage or tape the letter to the package with its own postage.

"USE SPECIAL BULK mail rates if more than 200 identical items are to be mailed at once. Before preparing any large mailing, talk with the local postmaster for help in cutting postage substantially.

"Keep mailing lists up to date. the local postmaster can advise a number of inexpensive ways to update mailing lists and reduce postage waste.

"Determine if a business qualifies for 'plant loading' — having the postal service trucks pick up mail at the company. This cuts mail transportation costs and the chance of damage."

Living in sin can be a tax break

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For some couples, the wages of living in sin amount to a sizable tax break.

The Internal Revenue Service acknowledges this, but a tax expert on Capitol Hill notes "it is difficult, under our progressive tax system, to devise a schedule that is absolutely fair to everybody.

Almost every year around Christmas time a couple breaks into the news by announcing they are flying south for a quickie divorce, will remarry after Jan. 1, and will pay for the vacation with the taxes they save as "single" wage earners.

THE FACT IS, most of those blabbermouths will be hauled into the IRS and required to file a joint return.

The annual stories — which rarely include the fact the practice violates a July 1, 1976 IRS ruling — give rise to grumbling from working married couples.

But both the congressional committees involved and the White House report a surprisingly small amount of mail on the subject.

FOR YEARS, the tax rate paid by single persons was far higher than that paid by married couples who, in addition, had the advantage of filing joint returns which reduced their tax base.

In 1969 Congress attempted to narrow the inequity by decreeing the rate for single persons could be no more than 20 per cent higher than the rate for a childless married couple

But since a married couple can get only one standard or itemized deduction and singles are each entitled to the deduction, and because a pooled $20,000 income has a higher tax rate than two single $10,000 incomes, the total tax now is lower for some single couples than for their married counterparts.

Dow closes down 5; hits 21-mo. low

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, rocked by government reports confirming the economy had slowed down and by rising interest rates, Monday fell in slow trading to their lowest level in nearly 21 months.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, a 3.98-point loser Friday, dropped another 5.29 points to 851.52, the lowest level since it closed at 843.75 on Dec. 23, 1975.

The closely watched average, which lost 0.26 point over-all last week, has fallen 153.13 points so far this year. The Dow Jones transportation average dropped to a 1977 low by falling 1.85 to 213.33.

Analysts said much of the selling was sparked by the federal reserve board's report late Friday that industrial production fell 0.5 per cent in August from July — the first decline since weather-plagued January.

THE FED ALSO reported Monday that factories operated at 82.7 per cent of capacity in August, down from 83.2 per cent in July. This also was the first decline since January.

In another report, the Commerce Dept. said housing starts declined slightly in August from July. But the August rate was 32 per cent ahead of a year ago. Building permits were up 8 per cent.

Investors were worried an economic pickup could be hindered by a quarter point hike in the prime lending rate the past week to 7¼ per cent. This put the prime at its highest level since July, 1976, and will make money tougher to obtain.

As a result, the New York Stock Exchange common stock index lost 0.31 to 52.48, the lowest level since it finished at 52.28 on Jan. 28, 1976. The average price of a share decreased 19 cents.

Banking network wave of future

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A young couple planning a party are stocking up at the local state liquor store.

They reach the checkout counter. Instead of paying for the liquor with cash, they simply hand a plastic bank card to the clerk, who totals the purchase and puts the card in a machine.

Through a statewide computer hookup, the purchase price is deducted from the customer's bank account and the total transferred to the liquor department account.

No cash changes hand. The only transfer of paper involved is a receipt given the couple by the clerk.

Elsewhere in Des Moines, a businessman driving home stops at a gasoline station to fill his tank. The same procedure is followed. The attendant places the customer's bank card in a machine and the computer does the rest.

UNLIKE ORDINARY credit transactions, which are paid for later, the purchase is deducted from the customer's account immediately.

The transactions, examples of dozens that take place throughout the area, are handled by an electronic banking network, the first statewide system in the nation. The network is operated by the Iowa Transfer System, Inc., a non-profit, bank-controlled corporation set up to oversee the hookup.

The system began operation early this year and although officials have been forced to make drastic downward revisions in projections for its use, they are confident it signals the wave of the future in banking.

"I don't think we'll ever replace checks completely," said Dale Dooley, head of the Iowa Transfer System, "but once we get enough terminals out and the customer has learned the system is reliable, there certainly will be less cash and checks changing hands."

STATE REP. Arthur Small, D-Iowa City, who helped draft the legislation creating the statewide system, went even further.

"I don't know if it will be this year or next or 10 years from now, but I definitely can envision an almost cashless society," Small said. "This is a step in that direction."

The Iowa system is still in the growing stages, but Dooley and others involved believe they are headed in the right direction. Of the 658 banks in the state, 557 have signed up for the system. Although only 34 actually are offering services through the network, nearly 100 terminals have been installed in 20 cities across the state, with more than half in the greater Des Moines area.

Most of the terminals allow customers to carry out a variety of bank transactions — deposits, withdrawals, transfers — with a plastic credit card issued by the bank. Others are "debit only" terminals, that is, a customer can use the machine only to pay for merchandise.

THE FULL-SERVICE terminals are located mainly in supermarkets and department stores. Some are placed in banks. About 15 are completely automated. The others require a teller to operate.

The "debit only" terminals are located in business establishments, including liquor stores, gas stations, drug stores and two lumberyards.

The terminals are connected with a central computer operated by Dial Finance Corp. of Des Moines. Anyone gaining access to that computer undoubtedly could wreck the entire system, but officials believe the network is protected with more than adequate safeguards.

Iowa's system is unique because terminals located outside banks must be shared by all banks in the system. Banks in other states, including Illinois, have set up electronic terminals, but they are used only by the establishing bank. Small said the Iowa system was designed that way so the state's larger banks couldn't dominate the network.

GROWING PAINS have been evident. Use of the terminals increased 15 per cent between March and April, an encouraging sign, but since then the number of transactions has leveled off at around 72,000. Officials expect only one-sixth of the projected number of customers to use the terminals this year.

The lower-than-anticipated demand also has caused an additional assessment on the member banks, ranging from $1,000 to $7,000. Neil Milner, head of the Iowa Bankers Assn., said the assessment should put the system in the black by 1979.

Milner said the banks are disappointed the system has not developed to the extent envisioned two years ago, but added he is confident the picture will improve.

SEVERAL QUESTIONS were raised about electronic banking when the legislation creating the system was drafted, including concerns about dominance by the larger banks, protection of privacy and safeguards against abuse. Small said he is confident those questions were answered in the final bill.

The provision requiring banks to share the off-premise terminals with other banks helped keep the larger banks from overrunning the smaller ones, Small said. In addition, the legislation prohibits a bank from setting up a terminal in a county that is not adjacent to the home county.

"The idea was to preserve Iowa's system of banking; that is, a few large banks and a lot of small ones," Small said.

No. 2 flower service hopes to bloom

by PAUL VAN SLAMBROUCK

John Bodette has learned for the time being to accept being No. 2. After all, he admits, he has no one to blame but himself.

As former operating head of Florist Transworld Delivery Assn. for 18 years, Bodette built the subscriber-owned flowers-by-wire firm into the unrivaled leader of the industry. Now, he's in the difficult but exciting position of trying to rebuild the industry's distant No. 2 firm into a top contender.

Bodette, with Warren E. Avis, founder of Avis Rent-A-Car, and Glenn H. Friedt Jr., last year bought Teleflora Inc., for just over $5 million. The acquisition followed their purchase of United Flowers-By-Wire Canada Ltd., the largest such Canadian firm

Teleflora has fewer florist-subscribers than FTD — 14,300 vs. 15,800 — and far less revenue.

THE PROSPECT of overcoming FTD in revenue is admittedly distant, Mr. Bodette concedes. "It's like asking Ford when they'll overtake General Motors," he says. An executive with FTD quips, "It's more like AMC trying to overtake General Motors."

FTD and Teleflora lead a pack of six large flower-by-wire companies. Only FTD is a cooperative, which a spokesman for the firm says means that any surplus income is partially returned to subscribers. Last year, the surplus came to $1 million.

By law a minimum 20 per cent of this must go to subscribers. The FTD board decides each year what portion beyond the 20 per cent will be returned to members. The rest is used for "operating capital." The spokesman explains this fund as a provision for buying special products to be distributed to all FTD florists, such as planters or holiday promotional goods.

FTD and Teleflora both take 5 per cent commission on all transactions. The florist sending an order to another florist gets 20 per cent of the billing. The florist filling the order gets the rest.

Teleflora in recent years had been "overly" growth-conscious

because of FTD's commanding 60 per cent market position, Bodette says. "There was expansion at the expense of quality; the firm was thought of as second-best, in size and quality. But the game of not meeting their standards (FTD's) is over," he says. Teleflora, he says, will now demand the "highest" product and delivery standards of florists subscribing to the service.

TELEFLORA'S EFFORT to gain greater market share is, according to the FTD official, "really a trade battle. They (Teleflora) must convince florists that they have better services." Services provided by both firms include acting as a clearinghouse and issuing financial statements detailing all wire order transactions; giving marketing and promotional assistance for florists' mass media advertising; giving credit information; and more.

Bodette says he expects Teleflora's revenues to hit $60 million this year, and to continue to grow at a 12 per cent annual clip. Sales by FTD florists (using the FTD service) were $239 million last year.

Teleflora's growth projections could prove conservative if an innovation announced this week is as successful as Bodette hopes. Capitalizing on the name of partner Warren Avis, who no longer controls Avis Rent-A-Car, Teleflora is launching Avis Flowers Worldwide. The new service gives consumers direct access to flowers through a toll-free telephone service operating 24 hours a day. Purchases may be made by credit card. Bodette says the service is the first of its kind. But he notes with a smile that FTD had the chance to adopt it several years ago before he resigned from the company. "We tried this through a marketing effort with Reader's Digest, but the FTD board didn't want it because they saw it as competition with FTD florists." The argument had merit, according to Bodette, so Teleflora will advertise this service by first encouraging consumers to go to their local Teleflora dealer. But when this is not possible, they are urged to use the Avis Flowers service.

The entire floriculture industry — including retail sales of all kinds of plant life — has grown substantially, to an estimated $3.5 billion in annual sales, according to Bodette. But he says florists have to some degree failed to capitalize on the spectacular growth of green plant sales.

He says industry figures show that the average florist grosses only $70,000 to $80,000 annually. This relatively small size puts most florists at a disadvantage in competing for sales with the larger supermarkets and department stores. But the boom in houseplant sales, which Bodette says is leveling off, may foster a greater appreciation among florists of the value of new products and effective marketing.

Pointers on cutting mailing costs

Not much can be done about the letter or package that takes inordinately long to reach its destination. But more and more organizations, businesses and individuals are finding they can do something about cutting their mail costs.

Holding down postage costs will become even more important to companies if a proposed hike to 16 cents for a first-class business letter is approved. The U.S. Postal Service asked for the increase last July (so-called "citizens mail" would not be affected) and action on the proposal is expected by next May.

UPI asked some large mail users what they are doing to cut postage costs and for some cost-saving tips on how to get the most out of the mail.

JAMES TURNER, vice president for administrative services, State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., Bloomington, Ill.:

"In 1976 our mailing costs were $19.27 million and we project $21 million this year. We have 37.21 million mailings a year just in premium notices — two a year to each auto policy holder an done a year on other policies.

"We make darn sure that we stay within one ounce for first class mail and we do presorting nationwide to qualify for a discount. With a rate increase, we probably will increase the number of our courier deliveries where we have employes carry letters between our facilities. We started couriers originally to expedite the mail and supplies but it also has saved us money.

"I don't think there is any question that we and other companies will make greater use of the telephone and facsimile transmissions and we will probably increase the number of phone networks we have. We will make greater use of microfiche (very small microfilm pieces).

SAMUEL J. PAUL, manager of postal education, Pitney-Bowes Inc., Stanford, Conn.:

"Businesses should check postage scales for accuracy to avoid overpaying or having a package arrive with a 'postage due' notice. The local post office will verify a scale's accuracy or you can make a simple test. Place five quarters on the scale; they should weigh just under an ounce.

"Firms can also use lighter or smaller envelopes and half-sheets of letter paper to cut weight and they can print intra-company reports on both sides of the paper.

"Use certified mail if a receipt is needed. It serves the same purpose as registered mail but costs less.

"Piggyback a letter with a package — without paying first class rates for both. Mark the package 'first class mail enclosed' and add the letter postage to the parcel's postage or tape the letter to the package with its own postage.

"USE SPECIAL BULK mail rates if more than 200 identical items are to be mailed at once. Before preparing any large mailing, talk with the local postmaster for help in cutting postage substantially.

"Keep mailing lists up to date. the local postmaster can advise a number of inexpensive ways to update mailing lists and reduce postage waste.

"Determine if a business qualifies for 'plant loading' — having the postal service trucks pick up mail at the company. This cuts mail transportation costs and the chance of damage."

Living in sin can be a tax break

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For some couples, the wages of living in sin amount to a sizable tax break.

The Internal Revenue Service acknowledges this, but a tax expert on Capitol Hill notes "it is difficult, under our progressive tax system, to devise a schedule that is absolutely fair to everybody.

Almost every year around Christmas time a couple breaks into the news by announcing they are flying south for a quickie divorce, will remarry after Jan. 1, and will pay for the vacation with the taxes they save as "single" wage earners.

THE FACT IS, most of those blabbermouths will be hauled into the IRS and required to file a joint return.

The annual stories — which rarely include the fact the practice violates a July 1, 1976 IRS ruling — give rise to grumbling from working married couples.

But both the congressional committees involved and the White House report a surprisingly small amount of mail on the subject.

FOR YEARS, the tax rate paid by single persons was far higher than that paid by married couples who, in addition, had the advantage of filing joint returns which reduced their tax base.

In 1969 Congress attempted to narrow the inequity by decreeing the rate for single persons could be no more than 20 per cent higher than the rate for a childless married couple

But since a married couple can get only one standard or itemized deduction and singles are each entitled to the deduction, and because a pooled $20,000 income has a higher tax rate than two single $10,000 incomes, the total tax now is lower for some single couples than for their married counterparts.

BE A TELEVISION PROGRAM RATER!

Just be on call - no "steady job" commitment.

There's nothing to sell, no routine schedule to stick to.

We need a large pool of people for very short term evening television rating telephone calls.

You may be called to work as short a period as ½ hr - or as long as 2 hrs., in a single evening.

Earn at the rate of $3/hr. for the time you work - and all you have to do is be part of a group of interviewers "on call."

All calling is done from our office in Palatine.

We do have opportunities for permanent part-time interviewers to work regular schedules. Please call Jean Allen at

Justice Dept. OKs race as factor in admissions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Monday expressed strong support for taking race into account strict quotas to rectify effects of past discrimination.

The stand was taken in the long-awaited legal brief the Justice Dept. will file with the Supreme Court in the case of Allan Bakke, a 37-year-old white man who claimed "reverse discrimination" against him by the University of California Medical School at Davis.

The case came to the high court from the California Supreme Court, which agreed with Bakke's contention that rejection of his application for admission stemmed from the fact that 16 of the 100 openings at the medical school were reserved for minorities.

IN THE BRIEF, which underwent considerable revision, the Justice Dept. contended there was no evidence the 16 spots represented a strict quota that was "exclusionary" of whites.

The brief asked that the state court's decision "be reversed to the extent that it forbids the medical school to operate any minority-sensitive admissions program," and the case sent back for reconsideration in light of that stipulation.

But the Justice Dept. said the record in the case is "plainly insufficient" to justify its being used for a sweeping decision on the constitutionality of various federal and state programs that consider race as a factor.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Griffin Bell told a news conference the brief does not represent a shift in administration policy.

"You think we shifted because the language is different," he said. "It's a matter of emphasis. The position of the United States is that we favor affirmative action . . .

"We do not think the case involves, except in a secondary way, quotas. There is a line between goals and quotas, and if you cross the line we would not be able to enforce the quotas."

Joseph Rauh, vice president of Americans for Democratic Action, took issue with Bell's statement that there had been no shift. But Rauh welcomed the result, saying in a statement:

"In a 180-degree shift, the government has now muted its opposition to numerical goals and quotas. Although it is not the brief the civil rights movement would have written, it is a lot better than the draft circulated 10 days ago. We can live with it."

REP. PARREN MITCHELL, D-Md., chairman of the 16-member congressional Black Caucus, told a news conference: "The general direction of the brief is consonant with what we sought in our pleadings with the Justice Dept. . . .

"I personally am grateful that the Justice Dept. has articulated a position on affirmative action that appears to be consistent with the statements of the President on affirmative action prgrams."

At the White House, Press Sec. Jody Powell issued a statement saying the Bakke brief "is consistent with the basic points expressed by the President during the campaign and administration.

"It shows strong support for affirmative action programs to help remedy the still-present effects of past discrimination. At the same time, it states opposition to rigid exclusionary quotas which make race the sole factor in reaching decisions without concern for qualifications."

IN ITS BRIEF, the Justice Dept. noted that the executive branch and Congress have endorsed "voluntary efforts . . . to break down the barriers that have separated the races for so long.

"The most important principle involved here," it said, "is that because the effects of racial discrimination are not easily eliminated, mere neutrality toward race often is inadequate to rectify what has gone before."

The government is "committed to achieving equal opportunity and preventing racial discrimination," the brief said, and "for the reasons discussed in this brief it has concluded that the achievement of both goals can be attained by the use of properly designed minority-sensitive programs that help to overcome the effects of years of discrimination against certain racial and ethnic minorities in America.

"There is no adequate alternative to the use of minority-sensitive admissions criteria."

Justice Dept. OKs race as factor in admissions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Monday expressed strong support for taking race into account strict quotas to rectify effects of past discrimination.

The stand was taken in the long-awaited legal brief the Justice Dept. will file with the Supreme Court in the case of Allan Bakke, a 37-year-old white man who claimed "reverse discrimination" against him by the University of California Medical School at Davis.

The case came to the high court from the California Supreme Court, which agreed with Bakke's contention that rejection of his application for admission stemmed from the fact that 16 of the 100 openings at the medical school were reserved for minorities.

IN THE BRIEF, which underwent considerable revision, the Justice Dept. contended there was no evidence the 16 spots represented a strict quota that was "exclusionary" of whites.

The brief asked that the state court's decision "be reversed to the extent that it forbids the medical school to operate any minority-sensitive admissions program," and the case sent back for reconsideration in light of that stipulation.

But the Justice Dept. said the record in the case is "plainly insufficient" to justify its being used for a sweeping decision on the constitutionality of various federal and state programs that consider race as a factor.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Griffin Bell told a news conference the brief does not represent a shift in administration policy.

"You think we shifted because the language is different," he said. "It's a matter of emphasis. The position of the United States is that we favor affirmative action . . .

"We do not think the case involves, except in a secondary way, quotas. There is a line between goals and quotas, and if you cross the line we would not be able to enforce the quotas."

Joseph Rauh, vice president of Americans for Democratic Action, took issue with Bell's statement that there had been no shift. But Rauh welcomed the result, saying in a statement:

"In a 180-degree shift, the government has now muted its opposition to numerical goals and quotas. Although it is not the brief the civil rights movement would have written, it is a lot better than the draft circulated 10 days ago. We can live with it."

REP. PARREN MITCHELL, D-Md., chairman of the 16-member congressional Black Caucus, told a news conference: "The general direction of the brief is consonant with what we sought in our pleadings with the Justice Dept. . . .

"I personally am grateful that the Justice Dept. has articulated a position on affirmative action that appears to be consistent with the statements of the President on affirmative action prgrams."

At the White House, Press Sec. Jody Powell issued a statement saying the Bakke brief "is consistent with the basic points expressed by the President during the campaign and administration.

"It shows strong support for affirmative action programs to help remedy the still-present effects of past discrimination. At the same time, it states opposition to rigid exclusionary quotas which make race the sole factor in reaching decisions without concern for qualifications."

IN ITS BRIEF, the Justice Dept. noted that the executive branch and Congress have endorsed "voluntary efforts . . . to break down the barriers that have separated the races for so long.

"The most important principle involved here," it said, "is that because the effects of racial discrimination are not easily eliminated, mere neutrality toward race often is inadequate to rectify what has gone before."

The government is "committed to achieving equal opportunity and preventing racial discrimination," the brief said, and "for the reasons discussed in this brief it has concluded that the achievement of both goals can be attained by the use of properly designed minority-sensitive programs that help to overcome the effects of years of discrimination against certain racial and ethnic minorities in America.

"There is no adequate alternative to the use of minority-sensitive admissions criteria."

Designers create more than just clothes

"I try to detect trends." — Designer Luciano Franzoni.

Each suit must pass end-of-line inspection.

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Clothes make the man. Who says? The men who make the clothes, of course.

In effect, the designers at Hart, Schaffner & Marx create men, not suits. They make low-budget polyester bachelors, herringbone bankers and European-cut entrepreneurs. They fashion images, perhaps futures, from little pieces of cloth: tweeds from Britain, polyester from New York, dark wools from Poland.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx is the largest producer of men's clothing in the world. With more than 25 HS&M brands to choose from, you could be wearing one of their suits and not even know it. Their cheapest suit, a $105 two-piece polyester model, is marketed as M. Wile, but usually carries the individual store's name over the inside pocket.

IN ADDITION to its own label, Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothing is sold under Christian Dior, Johnny Carson, Austin Reed and a number of lesser known labels. Hickey-Freeman is their most expensive, with vested suits selling from $350 to $545. (A few years ago Hickey-Freeman made an $800 cashmere suit, but enough, it didn't sell.)

This Chicago-based company is into women's jeans, Gleneagles raincoats and Cary Middlecoff sportswear. They even make uniforms for McDonald's. At Hart, Schaffner & Marx, they do it all for you — or to you, depending on your point of view.

Deep in the heart of the Loop, somebody, or some group of bodies, is determining the look and shape of America's male population. By designing the clothes of the nation's biggest haberdasher, he's setting an example that most little haberdashers don't dare stray from.

IF ANY ONE man deserves the blame, he is Luciano Franzoni. Tall, suave Franzoni leads the HS&M three-man design team with a relaxed sweep of the hand and a cultured Italian accent that just oozes good grooming. He's the kind of man who makes a bald pate look fashionable.

His office in the Hart, Schaffner and Marx building on the corner of Franklin and Monroe Streets looks like a cross between an executive suite and a men's boutique. One whole wall and another rack besides are filled with suits and blazers.

Quickly selecting several suitcoats, Franzoni lays them out on a slanted, green felt counter and describes the man who might wear them:

THE "CORPORATE" is a dark wool suit, fully cut to conceal an overweight frame under its classically conservative lines. "We try to cover that vast area of the executive who wants to be fashionable, but not flamboyant. In many cases they're overweight," Franzoni says. "Percentagewise, this is probably our best seller."

The "Escadrille" line has a slightly brighter stripe, and a closer cut. It's far from flamboyant, and yet isn't as staid as the Corporate line. What sort of man wears an Escadrille? "A Wall Street type."

"European, sophisticated, closely cut . . ." This is how Franzoni describes the Christian Dior line. Christian Dior of Paris made the initial patterns of this suit, but Franzoni says, "We adapted them to the American body. Generally speaking, the

"I try to detect trends." — Designer Luciano Franzoni.

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Clothes make the man. Who says? The men who make the clothes, of course.

In effect, the designers at Hart, Schaffner & Marx create men, not suits. They make low-budget polyester bachelors, herringbone bankers and European-cut entrepreneurs. They fashion images, perhaps futures, from little pieces of cloth: tweeds from Britain, polyester from New York, dark wools from Poland.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx is the largest producer of men's clothing in the world. With more than 25 HS&M brands to choose from, you could be wearing one of their suits and not even know it. Their cheapest suit, a $105 two-piece polyester model, is marketed as M. Wile, but usually carries the individual store's name over the inside pocket.

IN ADDITION to its own label, Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothing is sold under Christian Dior, Johnny Carson, Austin Reed and a number of lesser known labels. Hickey-Freeman is their most expensive, with vested suits selling from $350 to $545. (A few years ago Hickey-Freeman made an $800 cashmere suit, but enough, it didn't sell.)

This Chicago-based company is into women's jeans, Gleneagles raincoats and Cary Middlecoff sportswear. They even make uniforms for McDonald's. At Hart, Schaffner & Marx, they do it all for you — or to you, depending on your point of view.

Deep in the heart of the Loop, somebody, or some group of bodies, is determining the look and shape of America's male population. By designing the clothes of the nation's biggest haberdasher, he's setting an example that most little haberdashers don't dare stray from.

IF ANY ONE man deserves the blame, he is Luciano Franzoni. Tall, suave Franzoni leads the HS&M three-man design team with a relaxed sweep of the hand and a cultured Italian accent that just oozes good grooming. He's the kind of man who makes a bald pate look fashionable.

His office in the Hart, Schaffner and Marx building on the corner of Franklin and Monroe Streets looks like a cross between an executive suite and a men's boutique. One whole wall and another rack besides are filled with suits and blazers.

Quickly selecting several suitcoats, Franzoni lays them out on a slanted, green felt counter and describes the man who might wear them:

THE "CORPORATE" is a dark wool suit, fully cut to conceal an overweight frame under its classically conservative lines. "We try to cover that vast area of the executive who wants to be fashionable, but not flamboyant. In many cases they're overweight," Franzoni says. "Percentagewise, this is probably our best seller."

The "Escadrille" line has a slightly brighter stripe, and a closer cut. It's far from flamboyant, and yet isn't as staid as the Corporate line. What sort of man wears an Escadrille? "A Wall Street type."

"European, sophisticated, closely cut . . ." This is how Franzoni describes the Christian Dior line. Christian Dior of Paris made the initial patterns of this suit, but Franzoni says, "We adapted them to the American body. Generally speaking, the American man is larger and taller."

FRANZONI CLEARS away the Corporate, Escadrille and Christian Dior suitcoats to make space for one of his favorites, the "Steeplechase." He lays the $165 sporting jacket gently across the left, smoothing out the sleeves and tugging gently at the lapels.

Fashioned after the traditional English riding jacket, the Steeplechase has soft shoulders, slanted hacking pockets and deep side vents, all in a bright, tiny multicolored check. Form follows ancient function: the pockets are easily accessible while riding, and the side vents (as opposed to the usual single vent in the middle of the back) allow the coat to ride freely over the back of the saddle.

"It's our interpretation of the British style," Franzoni says.

THERE'S NO POINT in rushing out to Marshall Field's, Baskin's or any of the other stores that carry Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothing to get yourself fitted for a Steeplechase. They aren't being sold yet. They won't be, either, until the spring 1978 season, when they'll be marketed in wool and polyester blends. And they won't be available in the heavier wools until fall of 1978.

This is the reality of the clothing industry. Fashions that hatch in the mind of the designer one day aren't hanging on Woodfield's racks the next.

The fabric itself isn't chosen until two years or more before its season. And betwixt swatch and suit stretch a myriad necessary, but time-consuming steps.

BEFORE THEY have any idea of what the fashions will be like, the designers pour over swatches of material from mills around the globe. Once they decide on the fabrics they want to go with for a particular season, they set to work designing the various lines of clothing. If the style prototypes pass the Hart, Schaffner & Marx fashion board, they then are paraded before the retailers at model conventions. Actual construction of the suits don't begin until the orders are in.

The beginnings of any particular suit lie in one of the designer's rooms. The designer develops a size 40-regular pattern, which then is graded mathematically into patterns of various sizes, from a 34 extra-short to a 52 extra-long — plus the "portly" sizes.

These wooden patterns then are laid out on a special glass-topped table to be photographed. They must be carefully positioned, for two reasons: Slight variations in hue from one end of a roll of fabric to the other demand that all the pieces of a suit be cut from the same section of cloth. Moreover — and this can be very tricky — the pieces must be cut so that they will match when they are finally sewn together.

GOOD PATTERN matching, making the checks in the pockets line up with the checks in the suit proper, is the hallmark of well-made clothing.

The photos of the patterns come off in sheets of paper, which are laid across long stacks of fabric cutting.

Before the fabric can be cut, it is inspected inch-by-inch, chemically treated and steam-shrunk.

There are more than 300 different parts to a suit, inside and out, including zippers, buttons and small pieces of stiff fabric that make the lapels stand right. Dozens of workers touch each suit in assemblyline fashion, sewing-in the lining, attaching the sleeves to the shoulders and inspecting the finished product.

YOU CAN SEE these suits standing neatly in a row at the end of the line, skilled hands reaching, pulling, probing for imperfections. These suits are the men HS&M makes: Corporate executives prim and ready to deal, Christian Dior socialites out for a show, cloth personalities fathered 18 months ago in the mind of a designer, perhaps in the mind of Luciano Franzoni.

Proud as they are of these suits, Franzoni and the rest of the Hart, Schaffner & Marx designers refuse to take responsibility for today's fashions. After all, they don't create their patterns out of thin air. They get their ideas from the smaller boutiques, from fashion journals, from costumes in a Broadway hit.

They neither beat the other clothiers with a striking new fashion, nor are they themselves beaten. It's impossible to keep a fashion secret, they'll tell you. If it isn't leaked through inter-industry gossip, the retailers spread the word after the model meetings.

HART, SCHAFFNER & Marx doesn't try to hide its new styles much anyway. After all, it's not trying to stay in the vanguard — that's not the way to make money. If the other companies aren't selling styles very similar to its own, then HS&M has either become too outlandish, or too out of date.

Franzoni spends six months out of every year touring the country, talking to retailers and customers. It is there that his fashion ideas originate, he says, not in the chic salons of Hollywood stars.

So where do we land when we follow the convoluted logic of fashion? If clothes make the man, who really sets the fashions? The answer, Shakespeare would tell us, lies not in our stars, but in ourselves.

Pierrot collar story still unclear

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

Poor Pierrot. We're all fastening his collar around our necks and no one gives a thought about how the man got a collar named after him.

Well, the story isn't all that clear.

"Pierrot — double ruffle or ruff collar derived from costume of comedy character in French pantomime called Pierrot; especially the clown in opera Pagliacci who wore a clown suit with the collar." That's one dictionary's opinion.

But somewhere, somehow, you've got to include the Italian commedia dell'arte which was very big in the 17th Century and which was what everyone went to see because there was nothing else to see.

ACTUALLY, THE commedia dell'arte came to them. Little troupes of acrobats, mountebanks (literally those who got up on benches to sell things) and singers who went from hamlet to village hoping to draw a crowd with their sketches, tumbling and mime shows.

Afterwards, they hoped to interest the throng in a bottle or two of sure-fire, guaranteed to fight unrequited love potions. But that stopped after awhile. You can imagine why.

In any case, Pierrot — known as Pedrolino or Piero in Italy — became one of the characters the crowd liked to watch. He always wore a white gown, pompoms, a black mask and a flat, ruffled collar so's people would know it was him.

And what he did was act the lazy, bumbling servant who worked for Pantaloon, who was either the father, guardian or husband of Columbine, who was running around with, or trying to, a character named Harlequin who wore, well, a Harlequin suit, which also had frills.

SOMEWHERE ALONG the line, Piero became Pierrot (Little Peter) in France, and Clown in England, but Harlequin, Columbine and Pantaloon kept their names, which shows you how ineffectual Pierrot was.

Not only that. He never got the girl.

In the final analysis, no one seems to know why a ruffled collar is called Pierrot and not a Harlequin or a Henry II of France, for that fact, who is said to have invented ruffs to hide a bump on his neck.

The thing to do, in this case, is simply fasten your Pierrot collar, forget that the originator was never lucky in love and a clutz who couldn't hold on to his own name, and go about your business as if we hadn't brought it up at all.

Formal can be normal, tuxedo firm chief says

by JOHN MOODY

You go to a party wearing a tuxedo, because you thought the host said to dress "formally." When you get there, everyone else is in sport coats with open collars. The host actually had said to dress "normally."

Disaster, right?

Wrong, says a guy who dons formal clothing just for the fun of it.

"A tuxedo is a feeling of celebration," says Bernie Toll, vice president of After Six, which each year puts thousands of pimply prom-going high school boys into the first tuxedos of their lives.

"There's nothing more ego-building than getting dressed to the teeth and going out on the street," Toll says. "People look at you, and you know they're asking each other, 'I wonder where he's going all dressed up?'

The great thing is you don't have to be going anywhere. You can ride the Staten Island ferry in a texedo, and it's perfectly OK."

SURE, BUT TUXEDOS cost a bundle and you have to keep them in special closets lined with cedar, right?

"No, not at all," Toll says. "A tuxedo can cost as much as you want it to, but the same is true of almost any other garment."

There are dozens of formal wear makers, but After Six has developed what it thinks is the first $120 tuxedo — basic black, polyester jacket and pants with a silk-look shiny lapel and stripe down the pants. The outfit also includes a white ruffled shirt, bow tie, cummerbund and cuff link studs.

"WE'VE JUST PUT out a tux which I call 'Toyko Rose,' " Toll says with a laugh. "It's not really pink, not really red, it's, well, it's rose."

The firm also is bringing back the shawl collar on its lightweight tuxes, and offering such appetizing colors as pale creme and yellow.

"Again, some of these are things you should get after you have a basic black tuxedo jacket, but the point is the same; the complete wardrobe now includes a tuxedo, and possibly several,' Toll says.

And where to wear it?

"It's really a personal thing," Toll says. "The only thing you're guaranteed is that when you wear a tuxedo, people will gape and say, 'That dude looks good.' "

Casual wear has vested interest now

Time was when a vest served as a minor member of a suit outfit. However, last season this sleeveless accessory emerged as a major casual wear garment in a variety of fabrics and styles.

A case in point is the sporty vest and slack combination by Farah in "Trevira" polyester and cotton corduroy. The vest features ornamental metal buttons and welted pockets. The flannel slacks are styled with deep front patch pockets.

A variety of shirst can be worn with this combo. One that ties in well is a horizontally striped knit pullover with solid-white collar and placket trim.

Dear Mr. Juster: I'm 62 years old and am thinking of buying a Harris tweed sports jacket. My wife is against it, though, saying this look is more for young people. She also thinks the cloth is too heavy and that these coats will be out of style by next year. What do you say? J. R. T.

You can tell your wife there is no age limit on wearing Harris tweeds — their ruggedness is one of the things men like. Also, these hand-woven Scottish fabrics are classics — always in fashion.

Dear Mr. Juster: My daughter is having a morning wedding next month and I am having a problem. I know striped pants are proper for a formal ceremony, but my future son-in-law refuses to wear them. How bad would it be if he and the other men wear tuxedos? — Mrs. S. M.

Help for Your Hair is Here

If you spent all summer in the sun and the pool, your hair may need help. First of all a good shaping is essential. Next choose a gentle shampoo, and condition your hair after every washing. Before blow drying or curling use a styling lotion. This will give your hair body as well as protect it from the heat of dryers, hot curlers and curling irons. With a consultation from Vito Anthony Hair Salon in Arlington Heights, your hair can have that healthy, sophisticated look for today's fashions. It's something you're always wearing, so if your hair doesn't look good the rest just doesn't matter. For appointment call 398-5146.

The doctor says

Cholesterol note: only 3 eggs a week

I have become quite concerned about the new things I have been hearing about eggs and how they contribute to cholesterol in the blood stream.

I am largely responsible for cooking for my family. I want to prevent any possible heart trouble for as long as possible. I would like to know how many eggs I can safely serve each day or week? I mean eggs included in other foods such as in custards, puddings, cookies, cakes and what have you.

I understand that heart attacks do give warnings, sometimes several hours before they strike. I hear that if you have had any chest pain or pain in the left shoulder or left side of the neck followed by excessive tiredness you should get to a doctor as fast as you can.

I'd appreciate full information on these topics. I do not think we are having any trouble in this area, but I want to be prepared as much as possible since we do not have a doctor in this city.

The American Heart Assn. recommends that the total consumption of egg yolks should not exceed three yolks a week including all of those used in cooking of any sort.

The dietary program you need to follow is much more complicated than that, though. If you don't restrict your calories from any source to the point of preventing or eliminating obesity, your dietary program may not be very helpful.

Almost all fat in foods is made up of saturated fat and unsaturated fat. There are two types of unsaturated fat, monounsaturated fat and polyunsaturated fat. Even beef fat contains all three. The important principle is to limit the total fat consumption and choose foods that have little saturated fat and more polyunsaturated fat in them.

From this point of view you should use corn oil or safflower oil for cooking but not coconut oil. Corn oil contains only about 10 per cent saturated fat. About 80 per cent of coconut oil and palm oil is saturated fat. About a third of the fat in fish is polyunsaturated but only about 2 per cent of the fat in beef is polyunsaturated.

Monounsaturated fats are not harmful as saturated fats may be other than adding to the total fat consumption which you should limit.

No, it is not true that heart attacks always give you a warning. Too often the first symptom is the sudden attack and about half of these victims die before they get to the hospital. This is why a preventive program is so important. When the first symptom is fatal, you need to do something before the first symptom occurs.

Plastic bags protect frozen, boxed goods

Dear Roberta: Many boxed, frozen goods are not sealed adequately for long periods of storage in the freezer. To prolong storage time and to forestall freezer burn, I always seal these items in strong plastic bags, and tie them securely, before putting them in the freezer. — Selena Rupp.

Those with frost-free freezers would be particularly wise to heed your advice, Mrs. Rupp. Since these draw out moisture from every nook and cranny in the freezer, the foods you talk about have an even shorter storage life than they would in a conventional freezer.

For Energy Savers: When wall switches go bad, replace them with dimming switches. These not only allow for more interesting lighting in a room, but also save electricity when turned to any setting other than "high." A lower setting means a lower wattage. The same effect can be achieved by dimmer switches for individual lamp cords. If there's someone at your house who's not awed by working on electric cords, he or she can easily install these. Several varieties are available in good hardware stores. The cheapest are simple high-low "dimmers." The more expensive ones allow you to choose within a wide range of brightness. You'll also add to the life of your bulbs by dimming the lights.

Dear Roberta: My turkish towels, though not old, have lost much of their absorbency. Can I return this quality to them somehow? — Bea Gerber.

Perhaps you're just using too much fabric softener in the laundry water. Try washing them with a reduced amount, or none, and see if they don't become absorbent again.

Who is responsible for elderly parents?

How do you, son or daughter, feel about your role in taking care of elderly Mom and Dad? Or, is this a governmental problem?

One national survey found some 37 per cent of those polled agreed that grown children should feel financially responsible for their parents. Another 34 per cent disagreed, while 30 per cent had no strong opinion. So reported the American Council of Life Insurance.

Asner warms the heart as 'Lou Grant'

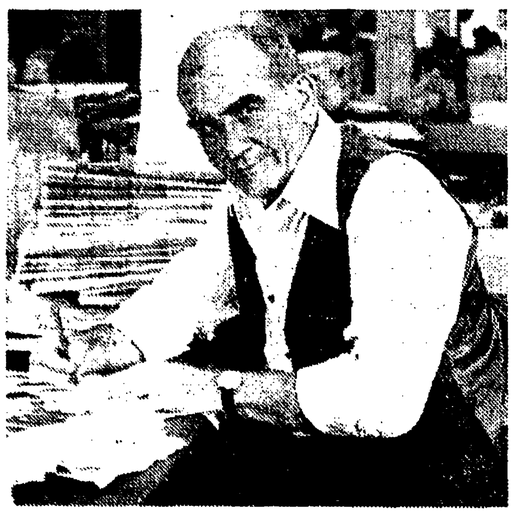
Although Ed Asner is some 40 pounds lighter going into his own hour-long, dramatic-comedy this season, the heart and richness of his character, Lou Grant, has been well preserved.

Mr. Grant, as Mary Richards affectionately called him for seven seasons on the "Mary Tyler Moore" show, takes on new dimensions in the CBS series that carries his namesake. "Lou Grant" premieres today at 9 p.m. on Channel 2.

The show is definitely televisions's best new series effort and promises to capture the hearts of viewers who have long looked to shows like "Mary Tyler Moore," "M*A*S*H" and "Bob Newhart" for the humane and compassionate treatment of the human condition that is so sorely lacking from most regular programming.

Best of all, "Lou Grant" offers America's television addicts a new balding, slightly stout hero of sorts who goes at life with grit and gruff and touches others' lives with honesty, understanding and feeling.

Fifty years old with $250 in the bank, Grant sets out to win a city editor's job at the fictitious Los



Ed Asner as "Lou Grant"

Angeles Tribune after he and his news colleagues were fired by new management from a television station in Minneapolis last spring. The trauma marked the end of "Mary Tyler Moore" and the beginning of a new television life for Lou Grant

HIS NEW television "family" claims the same variety and peculiarities in character that made stars of the "Mary Tyler Moore" show so lovable and memorable.

Managing editor Charile Hume (Mason Adams) is an old friend of Grant's who does his job well but is somewhat intimidated by the stubborn widow Katharine Graham — like publisher of the paper, Margaret Pynchon (Nancy Marchand) who is used to getting her own way.

Reality is written all over the show's pilot. Hume greets an unemployed, down-in-the-mouth Grant with, "You lost some weight. I liked you better fat," and Grant replies, "Everybody says that." According to Asner, that's dialogue right out of real life.

The publisher's iron spirit, somewhat softened by a sophisticated sense of humor, will clash many times over with Grant's newsroom sensibility and it is times when these two powerful personalities verbally wrestle that the show is at its best.

A street-wise, obnoxious city reporter named Joe Rossi (Robert Walden) with an ego bigger than he is, a young upstart reporter Carla Mardigian (Rebecca Balding) and an oblivious staff photographer known only as Animal round out the regular staff.

IF THE FIRST episode is any indication of the show's steady diet, "Lou Grant" will attempt to treat real problems of the journalism profession and life in general with surprising credibility.

The opening episode deals with the reporting of a police sex scandal, a story being protected by a veteran police reporter on the staff who is afraid of losing his longtime police department sources at the expense of running the story.

The treatment of a journalist's relationship with his sources, objectivity in reporting and professional fairness toward newsroom colleagues are some of the very human problems Lou Grant encounters with an accuracy and openness that is right on the nose.

Even the working newsroom that will serve as the main stage for the show has been modeled in close detail after a real newsroom and words like "rewrite," "awful" and "leadline," foreign to unsuccessful newspaper dramas like "Andros Targets," are used with effective regularity

Treatment of life outside the newsroom is even plausible as in the first episode, policemen sexually involved with teen-age girls are not as evil as they are stupid and the girls are not as innocent as they are ahead of their time.

VIEWERS MAY be a bit uncomfortable with a more serious, introspective Lou Grant, but they will not be disappointed with the intelligent wit about the new show that is strategically worked into the not-too-heavy drama without the insult of a laugh track or live audience response.

The show is one of the few on television that seems to give niewers credit for having intelligence and feelings, and Asner carries off a full 60 minutes with the grace and skill of a real pro.

He is quick to gratefully point out how the "Mary Tyler Moore" show made it possible for him to attract distinguished dramatic roles in "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Roots" and "Life and Times of the Kingfish," not to mention his own spinoff.

But Ed Asner really has himself to thank for his recent rise to prominence in the industry. He is a gifted actor who will for one hour each week help television realize its true potential.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• If you missed the outrageous, off-beat comedy of "Richard Pryor" last week, you can catch the second of his five-week variety show tolay at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.

• "M*A*S*H" kicks off its season with a special hour-long episode that introduces David Ogen Stiers as Major Charles Emerson Winchester, a stuffy replacement for the fleeting, Major Frank Burns at 8 p m. on Channel 2.

• Andy Griffith stars as a rural sheriff investigating the mysterious appearances of a dead girl in "Girl in the Empty Grave" at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

• Willie's marriage to Lizzie ends in tragedy on the second half of a two-part "Family" at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

• Jodie announces plans for a sex change operation along with other absurdities on the continuing faarce, "Soap," at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

High-spirited 'As You Like It' draws critic fire but will please audience

by GAIL GRIGG

STRATFORD - UPON-AVON, England (UPI) — Trevor Nunn's high-spirited production of "As You Like It" assures that the 1977 Stratford Shakespeare season won't go out with a whimper.

There is enough action and fol-de-rol on his stage to compensate for some of the slower moments of the Henry series that preceded it.

But critics weren't completely happy with Rosalind's (Kate Nelligan) athletic antics or the lavish full-cast musical numbers that marked opening night.

"It seems wasteful to assemble a cast of crack Shakespearian speakers and expose them as amateur vocalists," said Irving Wardle of the Times.

"THE ACTION is slowed by hymns, dances and choruses which keep a side-stage orchestra of a dozen busy," said John Barber of the Daily Telegraph.

And Michael Billington of the Guardian regretted, "This is Shakespeare in the style of baroque opera and I must admit I don't warm to it . . . I happen to think the words unaided do the work."

While Nunn pared down his stage set for the pastoral comedy to simple canvas-and-charcoal backcloths, he dressed Duke Frederick's court in bright pink and blue Charles II satins, the banished Duke and his followers in soft chamois, and his shepherdesses in Dresden-like skirts -- and then set them prancing around in elaborate dance routines, singing sometimes-embarrassing solos.

The play opens and closes with a slightly outrageous device: Hymen descending from the clouds, attended by Fortune and Nature and even winged angels, to Purcell-like singing of Shakespeare's invocation to marriage.

"THE PITY OF it all is that underneath all this prettified flummery there is a very good production of 'As You Like It'," Billington said.

"Kate Nelligan's Rosalind takes as her theme the idea that love is merely a madness. It is a most winning performance and it is well supported by Peter Mcenery's leanly intelligent Orlando, Emrys James' pockmarked, sardonic Jaques and Alan David's turnip-featured, silk pantalooned Touchstone."

But not everyone liked Nelligan's performance. She traded much of Rosalind's sophistication for high spirits, so that she comes across less as a witty observer of life ad romance than like the love-crazed characters she gently pokes fun at.

"Whole-hearted is the only term for Kate Nelligan's Rosalind, who practically bursts her whalebone when she first falls for Orlando, and thereafter goes through the show on her toes, right arm shooting out peremptory emphasis, mingling tears and ecstatic laughter and never relaxing for a minute," Wardle said.

"IT IS AN athletic high-pressure performance courageously breaking the bounds of Shakespearean decorum. I found it more attention-grabbing than affecting but that may be a jaded palate."

For all its hype, Nunn's production will keep the theater full and his audiences happy, for it is nothing if not fun.

CHICAGO, WELL KNOWN recording group, will present a two-and-a-half hour concert at 2 p.m. Saturday at Soldier Field as a benefit for Lincoln Park Zoo. Theme of the show is "A Decade of Music," to commemorate Chicago's 10 years in the entertainment field. Tickets are $5.35 including free parking and can be obtained at Ticketrons, Sears and Wards stores and B-Ginnings in Schaumburg.

Gerber asks for aces

The gerber convention provides that a four club bid asks for aces. It has never been successful in competition, but every expert uses the four-club bid under certain circumstances to take the place of Blackwood.

The first time is in response to any notrump opening. Today's North hand is a good example.

South opens two notrump. North can count 13 easy tricks if his partner holds all four aces. He is willing to gamble on six if South holds just three and will sign off at four notrump if South only holds two of those desirable cards. It is possible, but most improbable, for South to have a two notrump opener with only two aces.

South shows all four aces and North bids the cinch seven notrump.

Note that if South showed three aces North would bid six clubs. South might have a high-suit. If South showed two aces North would sign off at four notrump which would be safe because South would need all missing king-queens.

Ask Andy

Marmoset monkey family's littlest member

Andy sends the World Book Year Book to Daniel Manaigre, 13, of St. Boniface, Manitoba, Canada, for his question: WHAT IS A MARMOSET?

Monkeys are grouped into two classifications by the scientists: the New World monkeys found in Central and South America and the Old World monkeys found in Asia and Africa. New World monkeys have nostrils spaced widely apart while those of the Old World monkeys are close together. New World monkeys have 36 teeth, while those from the Old World have 32, as do human beings.

About 200 different species of monkeys can be found in the tropical areas of Central and South America, Africa and Asia.

Old World monkeys include baboons, colobus monkeys, macaques and langurs while in the New World classification are all the others. This doesn't include the apes: chimpanzees, gibbons, gorillas and orangutans. Monkeys and apes differ in many ways.

One member of the New World monkey family is called the marmoset. He is considered to be among the smallest of the world's monkeys. An adult often is only 6 inches long, with the largest measuring less than a foot long.

A marmoset has thick, soft hair that covers its entire body. Its hairy tail usually is longer than its body. It often has tufts of hair on top of its ears and will occasionally have a beard or mustache — or both. One variety, called the golden marmoset, has hair on its head that looks very much like a lion's mane.

Marmosets can be found in the tropical forests of South America and Panama. What does a marmoset eat? It likes spiders, fruit and insects.

Marmosets travel through the forests in family groups. They scamper from tree to tree very much like squirrels. They romp only during the day and at night sleep in holes in trees.

A marmoset is extremely shy. If it is startled, it will quickly flee, giving shrill cries as it departs.

Father marmoset has an interesting job in the family circle. When traveling through the trees from one spot to another, it is dad's job to carry the young on his back.

Marmosets, like all monkeys, have long arms and legs that help them climb, run and leap. They can use their hands and feet smoothly to grasp objects. Their big toes on their back legs look and move much like thumbs. Their long tails help them to keep their balance as they move through the trees and some even use their tails to grasp branches while climbing.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Shannon Longan, 11, of Gallup, N.M., for her question: WHEN WERE SCISSORS FIRST USED?

If their blades are less than six inches long, they're called scissors. If the blades are more than six inches long, they more properly should be called shears.

Scissors and shears came into being shortly after man learned to make knives. The first sharp and sturdy scissors, however, weren't developed until the late 1200s.

Scissors really are two knife blades joined together with a pin or bolt to form a double lever. As pressure brings both blades together, the material between them is cut.

Most shears have a larger ring on one handle for several fingers of the cutting hand while scissors usually have small rings on each blade of equal size. They range in size from tiny manicuring scissors to huge power-operated metal shears used in steel mills.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Be sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Taking her from 'crayons to perfume'

Room accomodates growing needs

by LINDA MADAY

Young girls need a room to call their own — a special place to see them through to womanhood.

This personal and private living space must adequately serve their growing needs . . . and as those needs change, so must the room.

Larry Heyman, A.S.I.D., recently was called to the Puhl residence to redesign their teenaged daughter's bedroom to keep pace with her lifestyle.

"Mrs. Puhl asked me to create a more sophisticated look — a room that would function through the remainder of her daughter's home life," said Heyman, an interior designer for Lynell Furniture in Rolling Meadows.

Heyman had done a lot of work in the Puhl's large home located on the outskirts of Palatine. He knew the family and he knew that this assignment would require an atmosphere that was not typically bedroom. He pinpointed the need for plenty of storage space, a desk area and room for entertaining.

The first step was replacing the furniture.

"We got rid of the juvenile furniture — the canopy bed and the frills," said Heyman.

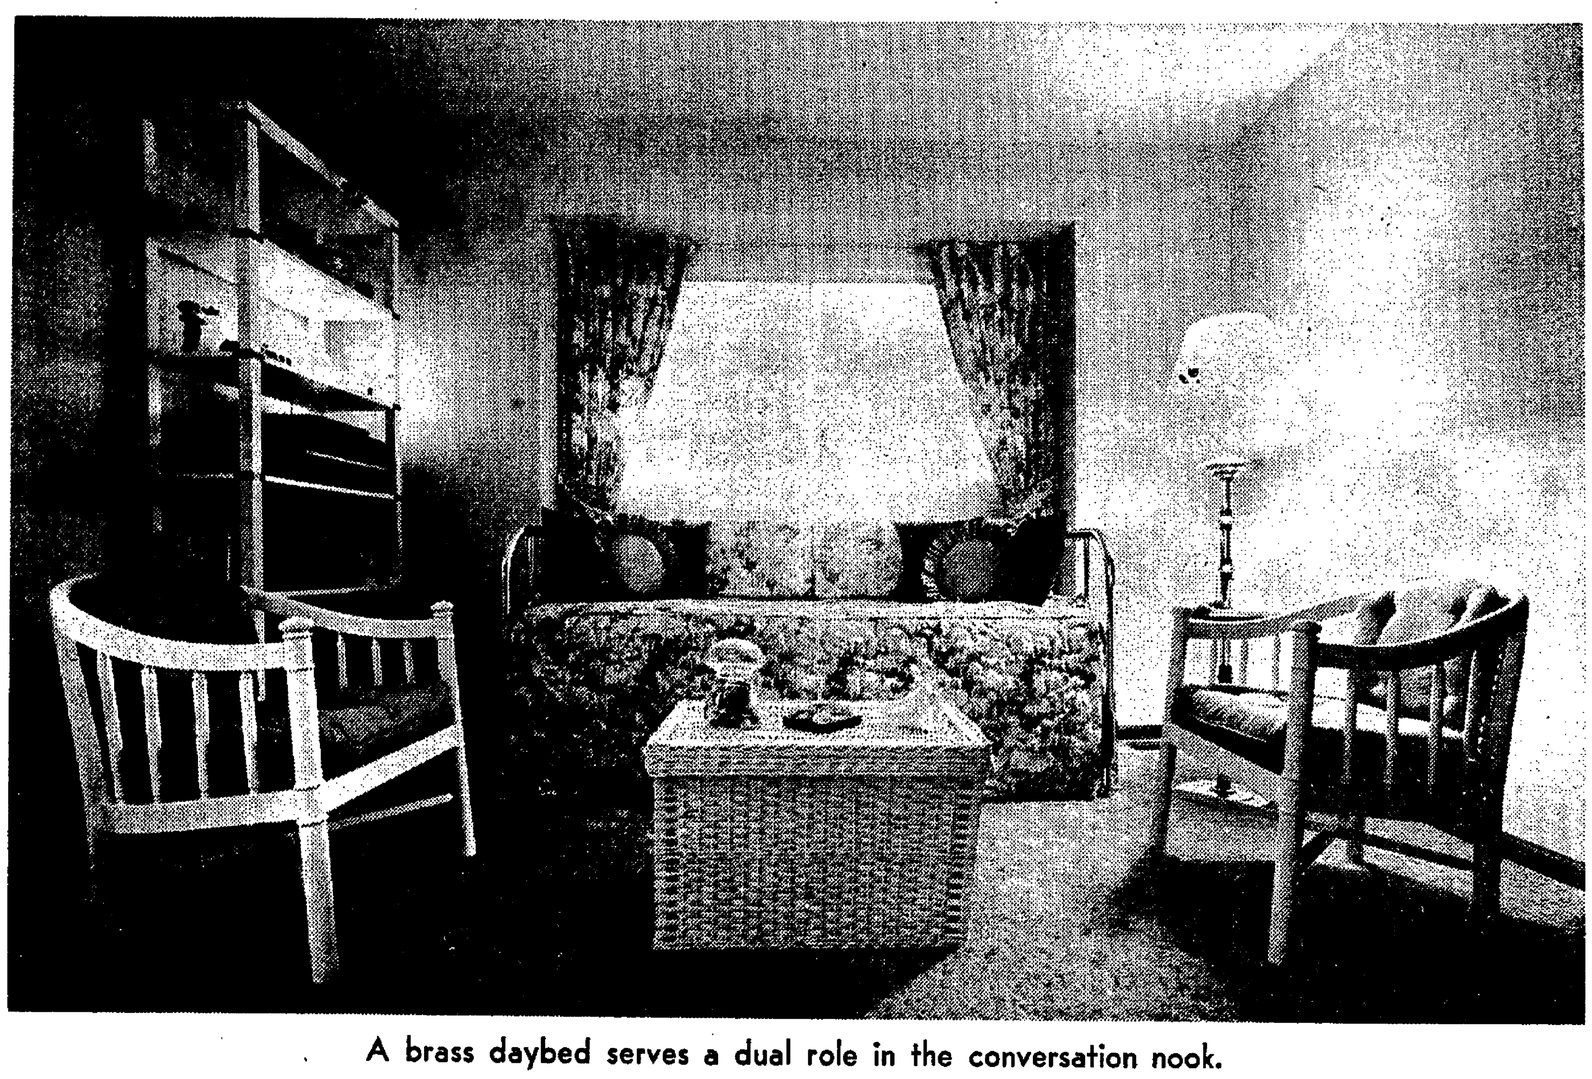
"The biggest problem design-wise was working around the lilac carpeting. We didn't want to pull it up because it was in good condition.

"My approach focused on a garden-type setting, combining the lilac color with greens and hot pink."

Heyman capitalized on an architectural feature at one end of the fairly-large room to develop a conversation nook.

"I set up a brass daybed in a bay recessed in one wall of the room and loaded it with bolsters and throw pillows. For daytime entertainment, the daybed is flanked on either side with pull-up chairs. A white wicker chest serves as a cocktail table."

The quilted-cotton, floral-print spread and matching bolsters combine lilac, purple, orange, hot pink and several shades of green. The throw pillows are sewn in solid lime-green or deep-purple cloth. Lime-green fabric cushions are part of the white frame wood chairs.



A brass daybed serves a dual role in the conversation nook.

The same floral-print design is carried over as a wall covering on the opposite end of the room. The remaining three walls are covered in vinyl-coated canvas featuring a white-on-white basket-weave pattern.

The floral-print covered wall serves as the backdrop for the work/study area.

"I selected white Campaign-style furniture for its very simple, s. aight lines and its generous use of brass hardware.

"The long dresser, two small chests and corner desk were pushed together to create a long, low profile. The director's chair at the desk is upholstered in the bright floral print. A Temple jar lamp with porcelain flowered base and green shade provide a source of light for the work area.

"A large print of flower baskets in a white frame hangs over the desk, pulling together the garden motif."

The medium-sized windows on two of the walls finish-off the garden effect. White bamboo-stick, floor-length shades compliment the tie-back draperies tailored in the floral print.

Another Campaign piece, a five-shelf etagere, was placed on a wall of the conversation area to display various collectibles and to carry the balance of the furniture throughout the room.

"The Puhls, especially their daughter, were very pleased with the ultimate effect — and that's what counts," commented Heymen. "The people who live in the room must be comfortable with it."

"I think it's very workable and it will grow with her."

The work study area carries through the garden effect.

WE INVITE YOU TO VISIT OUR MODEL ROOMS
ORCHARD GLEN OF GLENVIEW — 700 WAUKEGAN ROAD

Your nice cozy fireplace is actually robbing your home of heat.

Here's how to fix it!

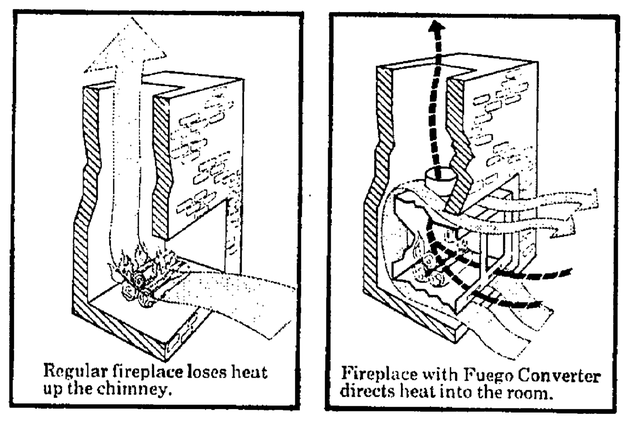
Everybody loves a fireplace. But it's an inefficient way to heat a room, much less a home. Your present fireplace squanders up to 95% of the heat it produces, right up and out the chimney. It even draws heat out of your home, leaving areas beyond the radiation actually colder than before you lit the fire. That's why you feel toasted on the side nearest the fire, yet chilled on the other side.

Now you can put an end to this heat loss by installing an ingenious device in your fireplace. Called the Fuego Fireplace Converter, it enables your fireplace to burn wood more efficiently, and directs the heat into your home instead of up the chimney. So you enjoy more evenly distributed heat throughout the house, even though you use far fewer logs. It burns wood so completely, you'll be surprised how little ash is left.

Available through Plywood Minnesota, the Fuego Fireplace Converter produces an astonishing 42,000 BTU's per hour out of less than 10 lbs. of firewood. That's half the BTU's of an average household furnace running for a full hour! Which means you can cut your furnace fuel costs substantially, and still maintain your home heating at a comfortable level.

The energy-efficient Fuego Fireplace Converter is U.L. tested for safety. It's a heavy guage steel firebox with beautiful tempered glass doors. An external fingertip air flow and damper system enables you to control the amount of air entering and leaving the unit.

Since it heats by convection, your fireplace draws cool air out of the room, heats it, and then vents the warmed air back into the room. Smoke and soot go up the chimney, not heat.



Regular fireplace loses heat up the chimney.

Fireplace with Fuego Converter directs heat into the room.

Fuego Fireplace Converters come in three sizes to fit most existing fireplaces. So bring in the height, width and depth measurements of your fireplace, and we'll help you convert your wasteful fireplace into a handsome, safe and heat-efficient furnace. They're also available in zero clearance and free-standing units for home-owners who want to add the warmth and cheer of a fireplace to any room in the home.

Home fire safety relies on smoke detector choice

By the end of the year, upwards of 12,000 persons will lose their lives in home fires in this country. Many of these fatalities, unfortunately, could probably have been avoided by a simple and relatively inexpensive device called a smoke detector.

Operating electronically, home smoke detectors come in a variety of styles, all designed to provide early warning of fires by sensing the presence of smoke.

MOST ARE DESIGNED for ceiling mounting, while others may be affixed to a wall. And while some are self-contained, operating on batteries, others are built to be connected to the home's standard 110 volt electrical supply.

Because lives — yours and those of members of your family — can depend on the efficient operation of your home fire alarm, selecting the correct unit for your home can be a critical decision.

These are some points to consider when selecting and installing a home smoke detector:

• Be certain that the unit you plan to purchase incorporates test features that allow you to check on its operation. It is important that the test be a functional one that ests the electronic circuitry as it would respond to smoke, not just the horn.

• MOST APPROVED battery-powered detectors are engineered to automatically emit an intermittent beeping sound when battery power falls below proper operating levels. Be sure the detector has this feature.

• Check to determine that you are selecting a detector that is listed by Underwriters Laboratories and also meets National Fire Protection Association standards that stipulate that detectors whould be capable of sensing grey smoke having a minimum smoke obscuration of four per cent per foot, a sign of a fire somewhere in the home.

This concentration of smoke is considered the level that will drive most people out of a house.

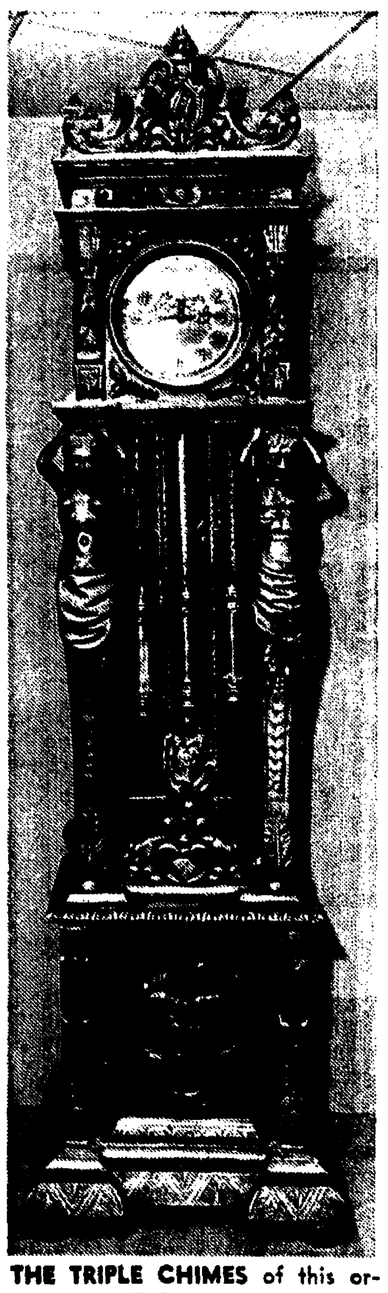
• Installing one electronic smoke detector is a step in the right direction for home safety. However your home will probably require two or more units for basic protection.

In most homes, the accepted smoke detector location is the common hallway outside the bedrooms, through which smoke generally travels to reach sleeping occupants.

Smoke detectors should be installed between the sleeping family and the rest of the house as well as at the top of each stairway leading to a living area, for minimal protection.

• Installing an approved or listed smoke detector, whether an ionization or photoelectric-type unit, is a step in the right direction in averting death and injury. But think before buying.

SOFT LINES, combined with a subtle velvet stripe, cover this lounge chair with an elegant mood. New from Flexsteel Industries, this chair will blend with traditional or transitional settings. Versatile in appearance, this chair is also versatile in use since it is a recliner, providing all the luxury of a recliner within a minimum of floor and room space. Placed against a wall, it will open to a full reclining position with no rearrangement of furniture.



THE TRIPLE CHIMES of this ornate grandfather clock play three different songs according to how the German-made movement is set. The brass dial and weights are hand engraved. Over eight feet tall, this decorator cabinet was handcarved of solid oak and is on display at Chicago Clock Co. in Palatine.

Soundstormwindows can save you cash

Poorly constructed windows can nullify much of a home's insulation, with a resulting heat loss as high as 40 per cent.

According to the U.S. Government Committee on Fuel Conservation, storm windows are the biggest heat- and money-savers; they return about 13 per cent or more savings on monthly fuel bills.

Home fire safety relies on smoke detector choice

By the end of the year, upwards of 12,000 persons will lose their lives in home fires in this country. Many of these fatalities, unfortunately, could probably have been avoided by a simple and relatively inexpensive device called a smoke detector.

Operating electronically, home smoke detectors come in a variety of styles, all designed to provide early warning of fires by sensing the presence of smoke.

MOST ARE DESIGNED for ceiling mounting, while others may be affixed to a wall. And while some are self-contained, operating on batteries, others are built to be connected to the home's standard 110 volt electrical supply.

Because lives — yours and those of members of your family — can depend on the efficient operation of your home fire alarm, selecting the correct unit for your home can be a critical decision.

These are some points to consider when selecting and installing a home smoke detector:

• Be certain that the unit you plan to purchase incorporates test features that allow you to check on its operation. It is important that the test be a functional one that ests the electronic circuitry as it would respond to smoke, not just the horn.

• MOST APPROVED battery-powered detectors are engineered to automatically emit an intermittent beeping sound when battery power falls below proper operating levels. Be sure the detector has this feature.

• Check to determine that you are selecting a detector that is listed by Underwriters Laboratories and also meets National Fire Protection Association standards that stipulate that detectors whould be capable of sensing grey smoke having a minimum smoke obscuration of four per cent per foot, a sign of a fire somewhere in the home.

This concentration of smoke is considered the level that will drive most people out of a house.

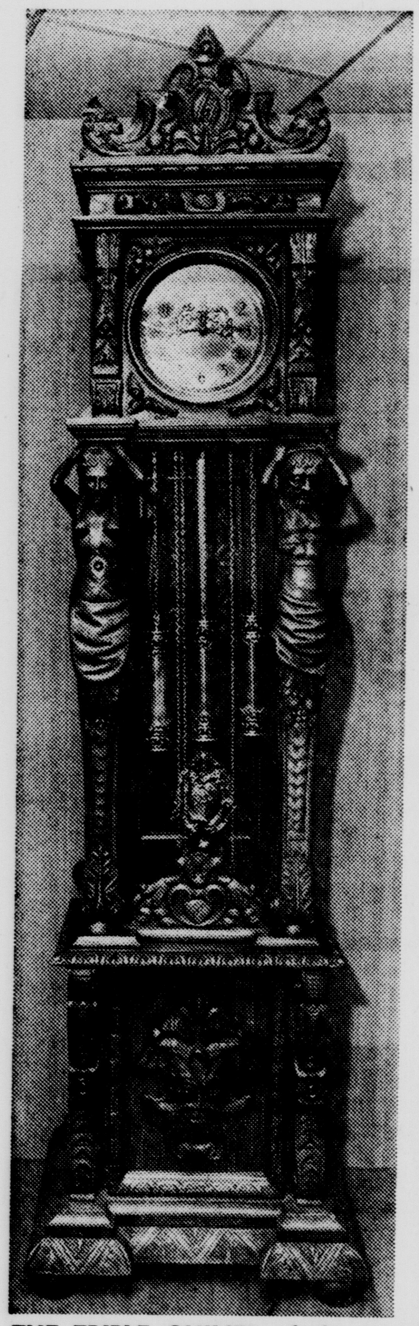
• Installing one electronic smoke detector is a step in the right direction for home safety. However your home will probably require two or more units for basic protection.

In most homes, the accepted smoke detector location is the common hallway outside the bedrooms, through which smoke generally travels to reach sleeping occupants.

Smoke detectors should be installed between the sleeping family and the rest of the house as well as at the top of each stairway leading to a living area, for minimal protection.

• Installing an approved or listed smoke detector, whether an ionization or photoelectric-type unit, is a step in the right direction in averting death and injury. But think before buying.

SOFT LINES, combined with a subtle velvet stripe, cover this lounge chair with an elegant mood. New from Flexsteel Industries, this chair will blend with traditional or transitional settings. Versatile in appearance, this chair is also versatile in use since it is a recliner, providing all the luxury of a recliner within a minimum of floor and room space. Placed against a wall, it will open to a full reclining position with no rearrangement of furniture.



THE TRIPLE CHIMES of this ornate grandfather clock play three different songs according to how the German-made movement is set. The brass dial and weights are hand engraved. Over eight feet tall, this decorator cabinet was handcarved of solid oak and is on display at Chicago Clock Co. in Palatine.

Soundstormwindows can save you cash

Poorly constructed windows can nullify much of a home's insulation, with a resulting heat loss as high as 40 per cent.

According to the U.S. Government Committee on Fuel Conservation, storm windows are the biggest heat- and money-savers; they return about 13 per cent or more savings on monthly fuel bills.

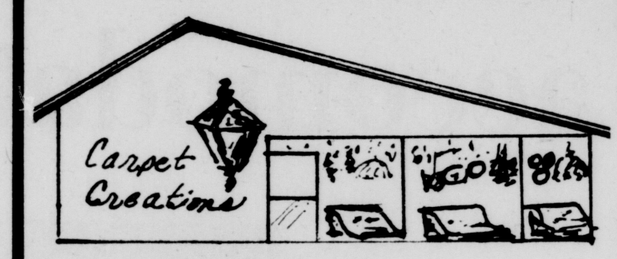
The Big Little Carpet Store



1. A Little Store with a Big Selection
When you come to Carpet Creations, you won't be overwhelmed by a warehouse atmosphere or pressured by fast-talking salesmen. What you will find is a terrific selection of carpeting at the best prices we know of. (And we know because we shop our competition regularly.)

2. Concerned Sales People
You'll make your choice in a quiet unhurried way with the help of experienced and knowledgeable sales people. And, because we apply the same low markup to all our carpeting, you get a truly objective opinion about which carpet is best for you.

3. Volume Buying — Low Prices
Because we're a Division of Industrial Carpeting, which installs thousands of yards of commercial carpeting, we have the advantage of volume buying. And we pass our advantage along to you in low, low prices, every day. No waiting for a big sale.

Before you buy carpeting anywhere, even from the biggest warehouse, you owe it to yourself to visit Carpet Creations, the big little carpet store with the SAVE YOUR HEAT from the cold, cruel world with a Glassfyre firescreen! With the glass doors closed, heat can't escape up your chimney, resulting in savings on heat bills. When the doors are closed, enjoy peace of mind with a safely-contained fire. Open the doors and fully enjoy the fire's warmth, crackle and aroma. Mesh curtains, installed behind the tempered glass doors, can be drawn for protection. Glassfyre fire-screens are available in many finishes and sizes, as well as custom fitted for corner and 3-faced fireplaces. See them all on display at Northwest Metal Craft, Arlington Heights.

AN EFFECTIVE BARRIER against heat, as well as a decorative window covering is provided by LouverDrape Vertical Blinds. In the summer, a 7' x 8' window can allow enough heat into a home to require one ton of air conditioning power. LouverDrapes close tightly so that heat cannot enter by reflection between louvers. And since they are vertical, the white opaque louvers do not collect dust. LouverDrapes are available in many colors, patterns. Wallpaper and fabrics are applied if you wish to match a room, from Arlington Drapery, Arlington Heights.

GLASSFYRE® EXPLAINED

IN STOCK

- Gas logs
- Custom screens
- Arch screens
- Tools
- Andirons
- Grates
- Log carriers

Household heat loss through an open chimney flue is something you never worry about with a Glassfyre® screen. With the glass doors closed, there's a substantial reduction in heat loss when a fire is dying down late at night. You're protected against sparks, too. And your home is enhanced by the incomparable elegance, and quality of America's premier fireplace screen.

IMAGINATION

And experience. And the best modern design. Not "fad-ish" things but timeless furniture that will grace any style, like our elegant new storage/display system by Baker. But come, and see for yourself what we can do with modular furniture to make any room in your home incredibly more exciting! And more functional. We've had years of experience designing with modular furniture (we're probably the only modern store — with a tradition). And we can help turn a home you like into a home you love.

HOME INSULATION Has Joined The Homefoamers®

. . . Around here, that's going to save a lot of fuel from now on.

With foam insulation from the Homefoamers®, you can start cutting fuel consumption on home heating and cooling bills right away. The Homefoamers foam insulation is much more efficient than conventional insulation.

And unlike conventional fiber glass and rock wool insulation, our new foam insulation flows in around pipes, outlets, windows and door jambs.

With the cost of energy going up every day, the sooner you insulate . . . the more you save. And the Homefoamers can save you the most.

Flooring the easy way

A lot of people — certainly all true-blue, dyed-in-the-wool, hard-core do-it-yourselfers — know how to install vinyl flooring. You slather adhesive all over the surface you're going to cover, then you lay the new vinyl floor down over top.

Right?

Well, that's one way to do it. But now there's a far easier way to install vinyl flooring: staple it.

IF YOU THINK you didn't read that last sentence right, you did. Because now there's a remarkable new type of cushioned vinyl floor that you simply staple down. And you only have to staple it at the sides of the room.

"(If you're installing this new vinyl floor over concrete, you apply a narrow band of cement at the room edges, instead of stapling. In either case, you no longer need to be bothered with spreading adhesive.)

This new vinyl floor is made differently from all previous vinyl floors, so it performs differently. And it has other advantages, too, besides the unique way it's installed.

IT'S AN UNUSUALLY flexible floor, so much so you can fold it like a blanket and tuck it in the back seat of your car to take home from the store. This same flexibility also makes it easier for the amateur to work with — to maneuver, trim and fit. It's not at all stiff or "boardy."

And it's elastic. If the floor is slightly undercut, it can be stretched. It's the first vinyl floor that forgives a do-it-yourselfer's mistakes — up to a point.

Most remarkable of all, this floor has a built-in "memory" (in the technical sense).

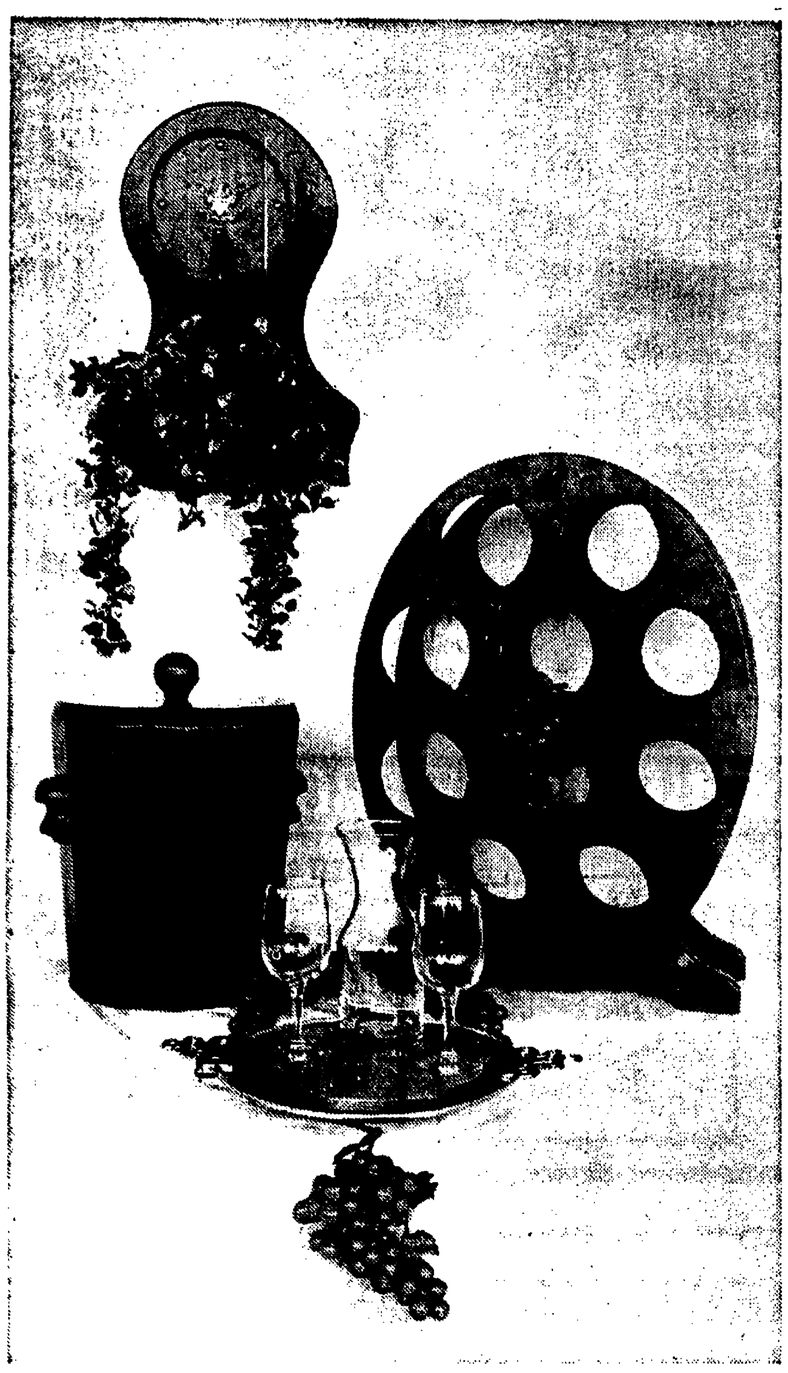
WHEN THE FLOOR is rolled face-side out at the factory for shipment, the outer circumference of the roll is stretched. After installation in your home, the floor gently contracts as it seeks to return to its original dimensions before it was rolled up. This causes any slack or wrinkles you might have left in the material during the installation to be taken up gradually by the floor's memory action.

The memory also protects the floor from expansion and contraction of the subfloor caused by seasonal changes in humidity. Other vinyl floors, under the same conditions, might crack or buckle or separate at the seams. This new one follows the movements of the subfloor to stay tight and smooth season after season.

If you do fold the floor to take home, be sure to re-roll it face-side out and let it stay that way overnight before starting the installation. This restores the floor's memory.

It is available in continuous rolls in 6 and 12-foot widths, and the 12-foot width. . . . .

Ceramic tile is easy, not greasy



MAKE THE MOST OF free space in your home by enhancing it with stylish, yet practical, pieces like this collection in wood from Malek Industries. The glass carafe for two and glasses are from the Touchmark collection. See them at Busse Flowers in Mount Prospect.

With everyone diet conscious, barbecuing of meat and fish rather than frying is increasingly the way to go. An outdoor barbecue is great fun — except in cold weather or in the rain — so bring it inside.

A year-round inside unit faced and countered with ceramic tile is a "natural," and easy to keep clean. Along with those nice fragrances from a well-flavored steak sizzling on the grill come spatters of juices..

WHAT'S EASIER to wipe clean of spatters than ceramic tile? The smooth, glass-like finish of the ceramic tile won't hold the grease. And if scouring is necessary, a plastic scouring pad won't harm it.

Tile is a natural for the counter, too. Hot pans or oven-heated serving dishes won't burn or warp the surface. Ceramic tile is fired in kilns at temperatures ranging up to 2100 degrees so a little old hot pan presents no problem.

A dark colored grout (the material between the tiles) is recommended for easy maintenance.

THE GLAZED tile itself needs no sealer and indeed should not be sealed. If an unglazed, absorbent ceramic tile such as quarry tile is used, a sealer to prevent stains is then recommended.

Count on the ceramic tile to add color as well as practicality to the barbecue area. Make it a decorative plus in your kitchen or family room with a bright blending or contrasting color.

Create a pattern by installing a brick-shaped tile in a herringbone or basketweave design. Add a Mediterranean look with a softly curved shaped tile. The choice of colors and shapes and combinations of both is unlimited. Create your own design.

ALLOW ENOUGH space on either side of the barbecue unit for the food to be prepared, utensils, serving dishes and seasonings.

Cabinets under the unit provide space for that special equipment and keep everything needed close at hand.

A built-in ventilator will help to carry out the fumes. A recessed light is helpful, too.

Sanitize home with new system

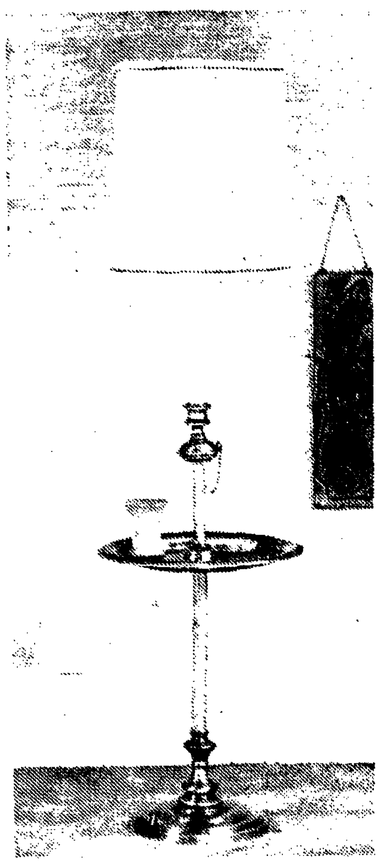
A new line has been added at Mobile Vacuum Sales & Service Center, downtown Arlington Heights.

The Filter Queen Pow-r Clean-up Team is now one of their best selling vacuums. It offers all the advantages of two cleaning systems in one — that of an upright cleaner plus the deep-down suction efficiency of the Filter Queen Home Sanitation System with "Cyclonic" cleaning action.

FILTER QUEEN is called the complete home sanitation system because so many optional attachments are available, and it can perform so many duties. A Bare Floor Brush tool, suited for rough surface flooring, a Hair Dryer that dries your hair in minutes with clean, warm filtered air, a Vibrator that offers gentle, soothing vibration and a Massage Unit to give you an invigorating scalp massage or to remove shedding hair from your pets are all part of the package. The Filter Queen air filtration system even takes the pollen out of air.

The Filter Queen system of sustained, high cleaning efficiency avoids suction "slów down" because there is no bag to fill with dirt and block suction. As the Filter Queen Home Sanitation System operates, it whirls the inrushing air-and-dirt stream around the Filter Cone, creating a centrifugal force that throws dirt to the sides of the container. It helps filter room air as it cleans the house.

Inside the Cone, no dirt, no dust — even after picking up soot, flour, kapok, lint or whatever! Filter Queen traps and holds the minute particles found in tobacco smoke.



WEATHERED BRASS tray lamp makes itself useful and books beautiful at the same time. This handsome style, especially attractive in traditional decors, has a white Dublin fabric shade. Available from Lamps, Plants 'n Things, Arlington Heights.

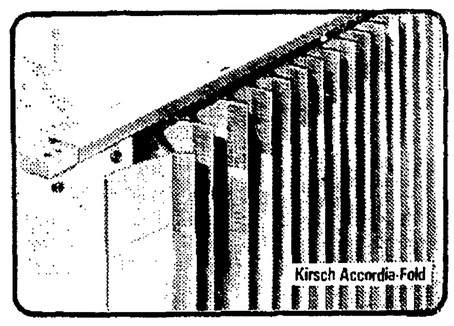
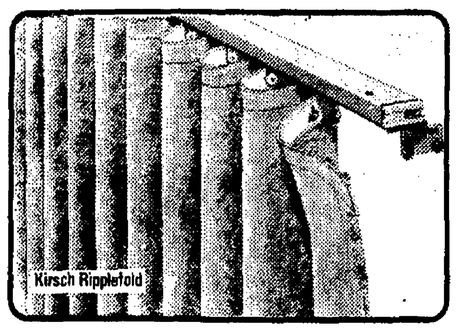
THE NEWEST STYLES OF DRAPERIES WEAR

ACCORDION PLEATS, CRISP AND CLEAN

Trimly tailored columns of knife sharp pleats open to expose more glass, more view. Snap on and off the track.





OR A GENTLE FLOW OR RIPPLES

Soft and almost sculptural, ripples add a new dimension to your draperies. Handsome for windows of any size.

OR HANG AS FLAT AS SHOJI SCREENS

Sliding panels show off fabrics to their very best advantage — flat for all to see. Velcro holds them to the track.

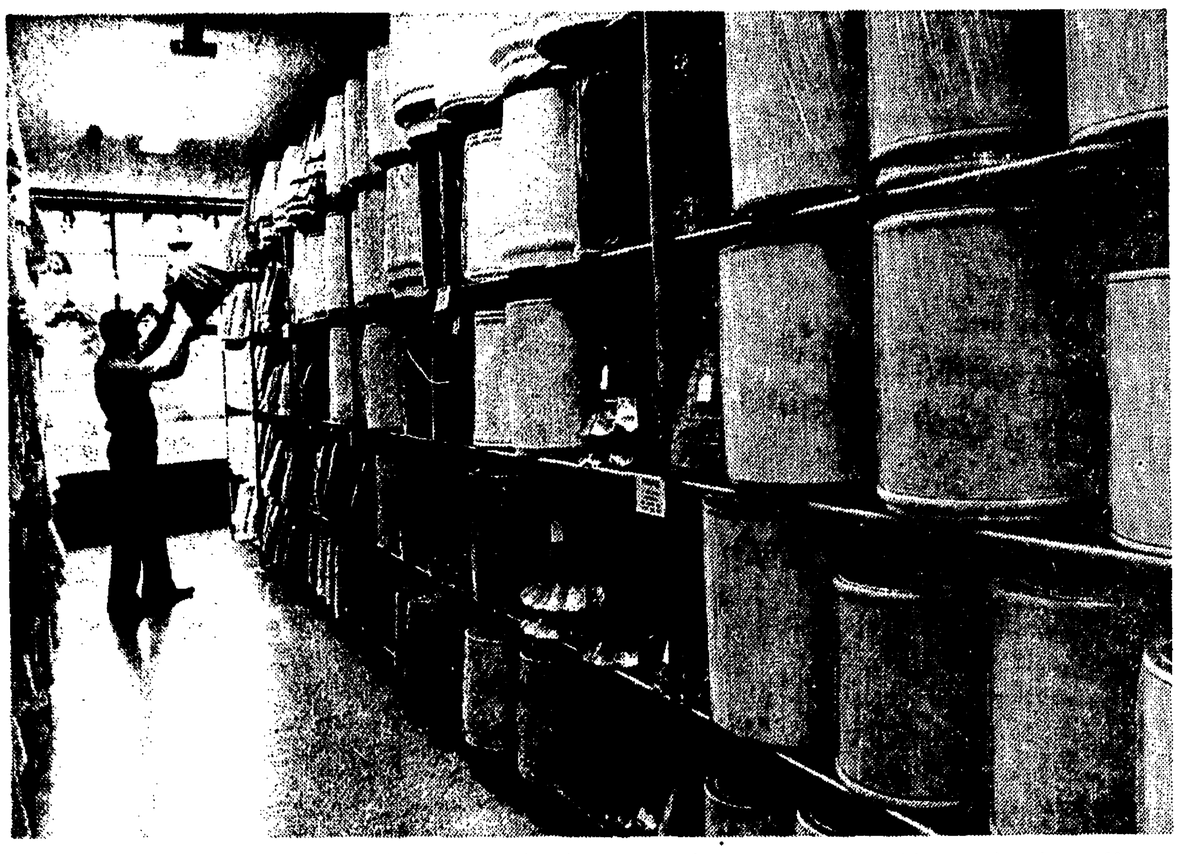
IT MAY LOOK like shaving cream, but this foam will be a highly effective insulation against heat and cold for this Hanover Park residence. Rapco-Foam is easy to install and noncombustible, available from Home Insulation — The Homefoamers — with locations in Bartlett and Schaumburg.



YOU CAN BE AS picky as you choose at Richard's Lighthouse in Mount Prospect. Racks and racks of lampshades afford a wide selection for the most particular consumer. In addition, the shop offers an unusual collection of lamps and swags, as well as repairing, restyling and replating services.

ADD DRAMA and warmth to your environment with the natural look of Wood Strip. It is as easy to install as it is beautiful — simply cut, glue and leave natural or add a penetrating sealer. For all styles and details, visit Paulson's Decorator's Paint Center, Arlington Heights.

Time-savers will help working homemakers

Almost half the women in the United States have jobs outside the home and each year more and more women go out to work.

If you're a working woman who finds household chores taking up too much of your time, there is a more practical solution to your problem than hiring an upstairs maid, a wardrobe mistress and a cook; it's organization.

HERE ARE some time-saving tips that can help you shorten the hours spent on housekeeping:

1.) Count on your family to help around the house. Keep a list of duties for them on a bulletin board in the kitchen where it's an easy reminder.

2). Plan ahead; decide on menus for an entire week and then buy all your groceries at once. Shop on a weekday night, when the stores are less crowded, and take your older children along to help.

WHEN YOU do cook, prepare foods in large quantities; many soups, stews and casseroles can be stored in the refrigerator or freezer and warmed for quick, nutritious meals.

3.) Don't turn little jobs into big ones. Fingerprint smudges and dirty spots are often cleaned more easily if you wipe them right away.

4.) An un-made bed can make the entire bedroom look messy. Instead of the usual blanket and bedspread combination, try having your family use quilts. At night, just turn down the quilt and jump in; in the morning, simply smooth it out and fluff up the pilliows. Even a five-year-old can take care of his own bed that way!

CRAWFORD IN THE Rolling Meadows shopping center makes drapery selection fun. Rows of fabrics and rods are easily accessible and actual-sized for a realistic conception of the window treatment you are looking for.

Condensation woes cut

Aluminum windows, which have for years been preferred because they practically eliminate maintenance, have now overcome the problem of condensation.

The new "thermalized" aluminum windows have a vinyl insulation break in the master frame and in the sash frames. This insulation, in addition to insulating glass and heavy duty wool pile weatherstripping, makes the entire window very energy efficient while dramatically reducing the possibility of problem condensation.

Energy saver

Homeowners can save up to 30% on the energy used for cooling and heating their homes by having from 6 to 12 inches of fiber glass batt insulation on the attic floor, according to the National Bureau of Standards and other energy experts.

Water becoming scarce

Suddenly, water is the new precious commodity in your home.

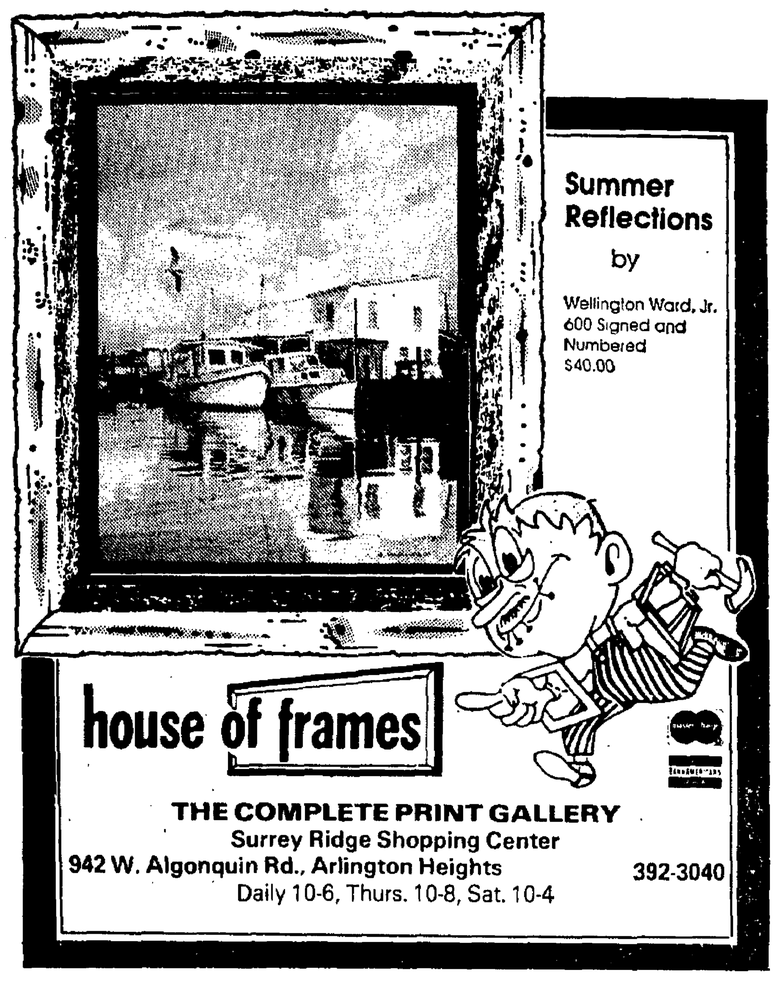
Soaring costs and stunning shortages have made Americans all across the country water-conscious as never before. Researchers predict the moves toward strict water conservation will accelerate as we face the fact that clean, usable water is indeed a limited — and increasingly expensive — resource.

WHAT IS the outlook? And, what can you do to become a water-wise consumer?

First, the "water crisis" is real. Runaway consumption is a problem everywhere. By 1980, unless we learn to conserve, total withdrawals of water in the U.S. are expected to hit 800 billion gallons daily — 100 billion gallons more than nature provides us each day.

THAT MEANS depleting reserves and trying to survive with steadily worsening shortages. Severe drought in many areas has already hastened this confrontation.

Further, sewer and waste treatment capacity in nearly all communities is limited. Plants can only process so much waste as they move toward meeting the 1985 clean water standards mandated by the U.S. environmental Protection Agency. Water saving becomes vital to avert rationing, building moratoriums and tremendous increaases in costs to all taxpayers.



HOUSE OF SCHILLER in Schaumburg's Woodfield Mall has the furniture groupings to "make it happen" in your house or apartment. The California contemporary design of this new line of Renaissance Monastery furniture is enhanced by both appearance and mobility. The style capitalizes on the use of solid California pine and iron fasteners. It is available in four different fabrics.

Bold earthtone colors create 'curb appeal'

Roofing manufacturers have introduced some changes in recent years, including new colors and textures, that offer homeowners wider diversity in exterior decoration.

Asphalt shingles, for example, are now available in a wide range of colors, including popular earthtone shades that serve to give a home "curb appeal." Since the roof is the largest unbroken visual expanse of a home, the key to exterior decoration starts with the roof.

UNLIKE SIDING and trim colors, which may be changed more frequently, the choice of roofing color should be made carefully. The color you select for your roof is likely to be around for many years.

The three-dimensional look of asphalt shingles in a handsome earthtone color not only relates a home to its environment, but can be used to coordinate a roof with the siding colors or to complement other color elements of the house.

Besides color, dimensional asphalt shingles produce a bold, textured roof with eye-appealing shadow lines that give the roofline a sense of depth.

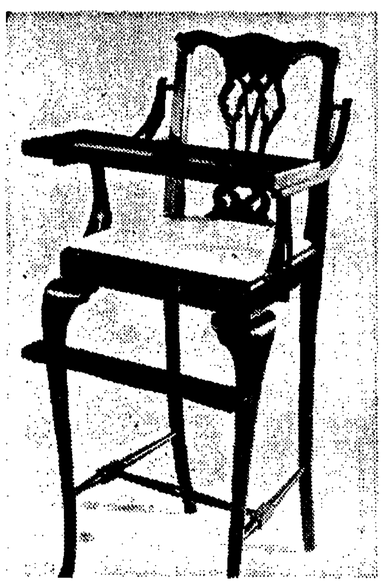
"THE CHABLE," a nostalgic combination seat/table, was adapted from a nineteenth century American Country chair table. In keeping with the turn-of-the-century mood, there are decorative turnings and carvings. This unique piece functions in a multitude of ways — chair with upholstered arm and back casters for mobility; storage under chair seats for cards, chips and sundry items; and planked top table when flipped to function as dining or party table. There's also a new rocking ottoman which provides extra seating or can be a conversation piece with rocker or chair. Early 1900's detailing includes carvings and an appropriate fabric.

AN INTERESTING and educational addition to any room is the Klima-Gro. This "plant aquarium" is thermostatically controlled to offer the perfect conditions for healthy plant growth. See how it works at Plants 'n' Things in Mount Prospect.



THIS MAGNIFICENT recreation of an 18th century highchair is perfect for an adoring grandmother to use for her visiting grandchild. Of mahogany, it has a washable vinyl seat and a brass plaque so baby's name can be engraved. A lovely addition to the traditional dining room . . . from Something Special, Arlington Heights and Barrington.

YOU'RE INVITED . . .

to attend our Drexel Heritage Decorating Seminar

Hugh Plunkett, ASID (American Society of Interior Designers) invites you to discover everything that's new and exciting in home fashions today. Glean the personal techniques used by knowledgeable interior designers. Our condensed, informative forum is scheduled to run concurrently at the Drexel Heritage Showcase in Arlington Heights and the Drexel Heritage Gallery in River Forest. Why not plan to spend a delightful few hours at our free, exciting seminar at either of these convenient locations.

After coffee and pastries at 9:45 A.M. or wine and cheese at 7 P.M. . . . our professional consultants will present an informative session spelling out many of the fashion design techniques that you can apply in decorating your home. This cultural and stimulating presentation will assist you in creating the gorgeous interior environment of your dreams.

A free, open exchange of ideas will encompass the following topics:

- Become aware of furniture styles today.
- Analyze design components such as color, pattern, scale, lighting and coordination.
- Fashionable ideas in window treatments today.
- The criteria of determining quality of wood and upholstered furniture.
- Defining your particular lifestyle and creating a compatible environment.
- Working with a professional interior designer.

Of course, the series is free. For information and reservations, contact Mrs. Norman, 392-1000, Arlington Heights, or Mrs. Hedrick, 771-6100, River Forest.

Tuesday, September 27

For your convenience, morning and evening lectures will be identical.

Facts and figures about insulspray® foam insulation

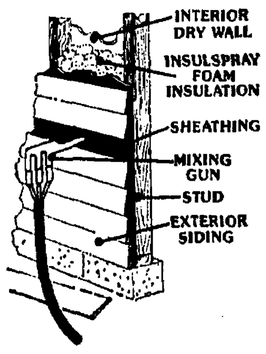
*Insulspray is manufactured by Borden Chemical Division of Borden, Inc., and is a registered trademark of Borden, Inc.

First, some straight talk
Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

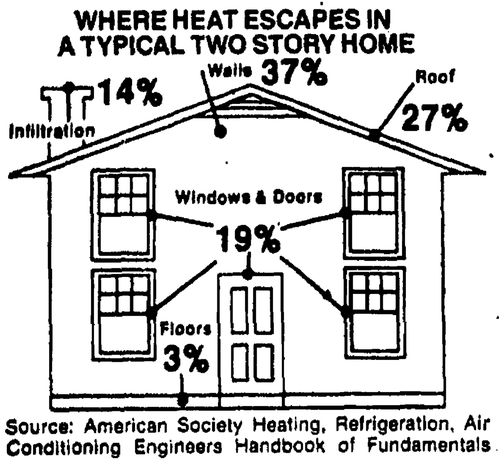
Why Insulspray?
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?
Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?
Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.



WHERE HEAT ESCAPES IN A TYPICAL TWO STORY HOME



Source: American Society Heating, Refrigeration, Air Conditioning Engineers Handbook of Fundamentals

What are the advantages?
First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

Facts and figures about insulspray® foam insulation

'Insulspray is manufactured by Borden Chemical Division of Borden, Inc., and is a registered trademark of Borden, Inc.

First, some straight talk
Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?
Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?
Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.

An important safety rule while hammering: never use one hammer to strike another.

KAREN SAUNDERS and Bonnie Smith express their approval of these handsome kitchen cabinets installed by Wood Distributors in Prospect Heights. The wood grain finish adds practicality, durability and beauty to this work area.

CATHAY MEDALLION design by Karastan is the latest addition to the collection of Oriental design rugs featuring a classic Chinese style. The basic theme is built upon a series of medallions in the center and corners along with rich border ornamentation. Especially noteworthy is the use of traditional Taoist and Buddhist symbols in the field including the everlasting knot, cloud bands and lotus flowers and representations of the fine arts such as a lute for music and a case of brushes for painting. Woven of worsted wool yarns and lustre-washed, the rug features the use of a deep navy blue against a soft camel. Shown here on a camel tone tile floor, from Vartanian Carpets in Palatine.
